PIT PEACE PLAN PUT TO NUM

Return to work formula by TUC

By JOHN RICHARDS Industrial Correspondent

SUGGESTIONS for a TUC-supported compromise to end the pit strike are due to be discussed by the national executive of the miners' union at Sheffield today.

If the suggestions receive support the way would be open for the strike to be called off by the union in return for negotiations on the long-term future of the coal industry.

Progress along these lines—based on union agreement to set aside its opposition to the Coal Board's plans for pit closures if they were simultaneously discarded by the board—would represent a significant shift by the union which has hitherto demanded that the board should back down first.

Other suggestions for resumption of negotiations are expected to be made by members of the union executive at today's meeting, and the TUC is expected to make a further approach to Mr Walker, Energy Secretary, next week.

Editorial Comment — P18

The TUC hope that Mr Walker will persuade the Coal Board to meet the seven-man TUC team monitoring the dispute.

TUC leaders expect by then, that they will have a clearance from the National Union of Mineworkers for fresh negotiations based on a revision of the 1970 Plan for Coal.

There is already a certain measure of mutual agreement that the 10-month strike means the proposals by the board last March to cut four million tonnes of capacity with the loss of 20,000 jobs and the closure of 20 pits within 12 months has now been overtaken by events.

If this agreement could be further substantiated in behind-the-scenes talks, the union could be prepared to suspend its strike and go into negotiations.

Losses caused by strike

Coal Board chiefs are already aware of the possible TUC initiative.

It could be based on the NUM's previous compromise proposal, discarded by the board at Acas talks last October. The union was then prepared to drop its demand that the pit closure programme should be withdrawn in return for a form of agreement that it was "no longer applicable" in view of the production losses caused by the strike itself.

Presented with the possibility that the NUM might now call off its strike if such an interim position was accepted, the board, according to some senior union leaders, might be advised to think carefully about the prospect of a settlement "honourable to both sides."

Mr Trevor Bell, general secretary of the NUM colliery officials and staffs area, said last night: "There is now a real prospect that something will emerge fro' mtomorrow's meeting to get talks going again. I think it is important we make some move to get back to the negotiating table."

The suggestions for peace moves will be made to the union executive as more miners return to work — with the board reporting that a further 505 went back yesterday making this week's total 2,021, the highest in any wee since mid-November.

Mr Bell said the NUM should look at the prospect of going to the Government and the Coal Board with proposals tabled by all the mining unions and seek an improvement in the pit review machinery for the industry.

Mr Ted MacKay, leader of the North Wales miners, said he believed that initially the NUM should be discussing talks about talks.

The NUM executive will also consider a call from Lancashire for a resumption of negotiations on the strike and a plan, drawn up by the Welsh churches, that the future of the industry should be considered by an independent review body.

Strike will have 'little effect', says BR

By STEPHEN WARD Industrial Staff

BRITISH RAIL was confident yesterday that a one-day rail strike called for today week could be avoided by negotiation.

Mr James O'Brien, joint managing director, said he believed that any action would have no more than local effects in the Midland mining areas, which have sparked the dispute over railmen "blacking" coal trains in support of the miners.

He said there was no possible justification for the strike called to protest at complaints of management "harrassment" to try to make railmen lift their blacking.

British Rail has denied doing more than taking any railmen who expressed an interest to see examples of coal being taken into power stations by convoys of lorries.

Details today

A joint committee of National Union of Railwaymen and the train drivers' union Aslef s[illegible] several hours yesterday d[illegible] who to call out. British Rail will be given details today of which services

It is understood that the unions decided the most effective way to act would be to ask only a relatively small number of key staff, such as those who man signal boxes, to strike.

With a good response from key staff, considerable chaos could still be caused in the Eastern and London Midland regions, which have been chosen for the stoppage next week because they are the areas with working pits moving some coal by rail.

Leaders of the rail unions have indicated their willingness to reach a negotiated settlement.

If the srike does go ahead, one possibliy otpen o British Rail is to follow the recent example of Austin Rover and to use the 1984 Trade Union Act.

Under section 11 of this Act, unions are liable to court action and damages up to £250,000 if the ydo not hold a secret ballot before calling a strike.

RAILMEN SUSPICIOUS

Concern at 'outsiders'

JAMES O'BRIEN writes: Some railmen at the depot at Coalville, Leicestershire, which is at the centre of the row, said last night that they did not support the unions' reasons for a strike, which they interpreted as an attemnt to bolster the National Union of Mineworkers.

They were more concerned about the action of management, who they claimed had brought in "outsiders" to allow the movement of trains to power stations.

The Coalville depot is in the centre of a working coalfield and about 100 NUR and Aslef members are employed at the depot.

A signalman was removed from his job after deciding he could not continue to allow the passage of coal trains. He was told by management, claims railmen, that he was not physically fit to do the job.

SHARE PRICES UP AGAIN

By CLIFFORD GERMAN Financial Correspondent

SHARE prices raced ahead again yesterday and the FINANCIAL TIMES 30 share index closed another 11·9 points higher at an all-time high of 983·1, encouraged by the weight of money available for investment and relief at the easing of interest rate fears.

British Telecom shares forged further ahead closing 4p better at 115p. Bank shares improved, and British Government stocks regained some recent losses to close up to £⅝ higher on balance.

Share prices also rose to new peaks in Tokyo, Frankfurt, Paris and Zurich.

Profits squeezed

Weak currencies are boosting company profits outside the United States, and their economies are still emerging from the recession, while the United States economy is growing less slowly and company profits are being squeezed by the continuing strength of the dollar, city analysts believe.

The dollar was again strong on the foreign exchanges yesterday and in spite of late profit taking it closed higher against all leading currencies. The pound fell initially as the prospects of higher inter base rates eased.

It later rallied but still closed 65 points lower on balance at $1·1432 while the trade weighted average closed 0·4 lower at 72·3 per cent, after 72·2 per cent. Interest rates eased slightly in the London money markets.

PSYCHIATRIST IS ACCUSED OF BLAST PLOT

Dr Moira O'Shea, 65, a retired consultant psychiatrist who has been held in Liverpool under the Prevention of Terrorism Act is to appear before magistrates today charged with conspiracy to cause an explosion.

Dr O'Shea was detained at her Birmingham home by Special Branch officers on Saturday evening—an arrest which has brought protests from some Left-wing MPs and the Irish Freedom Movement because of the poor state of her health.

Four men have also been remanded in custody on charges of conspiring to cause an explosion.

Secrecy order in rent-a-womb case

By R. BARRY O'BRIEN

THE judge who made the baby girl at the centre of the surrogate birth controversy a ward of court gave a warning to newspapers yesterday that her father must not be identified.

Mr Justice Latey, speaking to the Press Association news agency, said: "There is to be no publicity which might lead to the identification of the father or his wife."

The judge made the wardship order at a private hearing in his home at Roehampton on Tuesday on the application of a party whose identity has not been revealed.

He said yesterday: "It is likely that I will consider it appropriate to give a judgment in open court and, if so, advance notice will be given."

Mr Justice Latey, 70, a senior judge of the High Court's

Family Division, is now legal guardian of the baby born to Mrs Kim Cotton, 28, at Victoria Maternity Hospital, Barnet, six days ago.

The baby has been kept at the hospital since Barnet Borough Council obtained a place of safety order from magistrates preventing her from being handed over to her prospective parents.

Speedy hearing

An early court hearing on the child's future was expected.

Cases concerning wardship, guardianship or adoption of children are usually held in private but judges occasionally give judgment in public when cases involve important points of law or public policy.

The case of Mrs Cotton's baby has created a legal precedent because it is the first in Britain in which a surrogate mother has been offered money to have a baby for a childless couple.

The arrangements were made by a commercial surrogate parenting agency headed by Mrs Barbara Manning, a former health visitor. The Government

FERRY BLOCKADE CALLED OFF

By Our Staff Correspondent in Paris

Sealink ferries between France and Britain will resume normal service today. French seamen who have been blocking the western harbour at Dunkirk and Sealink gangways at Calais, Boulogne and Dieppe, ended their industrial action yesterday.

The management of French national railways, which owns the French side of Sealink, has under pressure from the Paris Socialist Government agreed to postpone switching the ferry St Germain from passenger services to freight until the end of February and to abandon disciplinary action against some seamen.

24 KILLED IN BLAZE AT HOME

By MICHAEL FIELD in Paris

AT least 24 old people were killed when a fire swept through a home in the village of Grandvilliers near Beauvais in northern France early yesterday.

The fire is believed to have broken out when water from a pipe burst by frost caused a short circuit.

More than 160 people, many in their eighties, were rescued. Residents of the village rushed from their homes to help carry inmates many of them bedridden, to safety in temperatures about minus 13C (8·6F).

President Mitterrand postponed a Cabinet meeting to fly to the village by helicopter to inspect the charred wreckage and M. Franceschi, Secretary of State for the Elderly, ordered an immediate inquiry.

An 88-year-old inmate, Elia Haudiquer, said she was awakened by screaming.

"I tried to get dressed, I was trembling," she said. "The roof was burning all over. . . . We walked out in the snow, but everything happened very quickly. It was like a bad dream."

'LEAK' ON CHEMICAL WARFARE

By JAMES WIGHTMAN Political Correspondent

THE Government began an inquiry last night into a report in the NEW STATESMAN magazine claiming that leaked documents from a Cabinet committee showed the Government to be considering setting up a stockpile of chemical weapons after a change of policy.

The report, which was later carried on Channel 4 news, prompted 10 Downing Street to issue a statement saying: "There is no change of Government policy. Nor do we expect one."

A Defence Ministry statement added that Britain had not had chemical weapons since the 1950s.

Compromise attempt

It could be seen as an attempt to compromise the Prime Minister after her world tour trying to encourage new arms limitation talks.

The NEW STATESMAN claimed to have leaks of papers of a special ministerial comittee set up by the Prime Minister last summer under her own chairmanship.

The committee's papers were said to carry two security classifications: "CMO for concerned ministers only" and "secret—UK eyes only."

The report said that at its first meeting on Aug. 2 last year "ministers were given background information on Soviet capabilities in chemical weapons and offered four options for defence against chemical attack, drawn up by the military chiefs of staff."

Protective clothing

The report added: "They were: to reach an arms control agreement with the Soviets; to issue protective clothing and masks to key industrial, government and military staff; to encourage the Americans to go ahead with a programme of building new chemical weapons and allow these new weapons into Europe; and finally, for Britain to resume the manufacture of chemical weapons.

"It is understood that Mrs Thatcher was in favour of this last option, against the advice of both Michael Heseltine and Sir Geoffrey Howe."

The report said the committee did not decide to abandon efforts to negotiate a chemical weapons treaty and had not yet reached a collective view on the option of Britain producing its own chemical weapons.

But Mrs Thatcher's "support for that option is said to be enthusiastic."

Labour will press the Prime Minister in the Commons today about whether the report is true.

Mr Denzil Davies, Labour's defence spokesman, said last night: "I would be appalled if this were true. If Mrs Thatcher were thinking about chemical rearmament, it could only damage the progress made in Geneva on nuclear arms."

U.S. 'got what it wanted' at Geneva talks

By FRANK TAYLOR in Washington

AS Mr Shultz, the American Secretary of State returned to Washington yesterday after his talks in Geneva with Mr Gromyko, the Soviet Foreign Minister, a White House official said President Reagan was proud of the result of the meeting.

"We got what we went for." The official added: "The President hopes there will be an agreement eventually, but it takes two."

The three-track arms control negotiations for which the Geneva meeting set the stage would amount to the most far-reaching effort to rid the world of nuclear weapons ever undertaken, other officials said.

They stressed, however, that it could take years to reach solid accords with the Russians.

The assessment in Washington is that both sides at Geneva made concession, but Moscow gave the most ground.

Space weapons

Mr Gromyko won a major point in getting Mr Shultz to agree to the objective of "preventing an arms race in space." Up to that point, the Americans had been willing only to say they would "discuss" their space-based anti-missile defence programme at some future date.

But Mr Shultz persuaded his opposite number to agree that any negotiations on space defence systems should include ground-based missile defences. The Russians had previously tried to keep these systems out of the space talks.

The American side also said they made a gain in getting Mr Gromyko to agree to new arms control talks at all. It was the Russians who brought the previous talks to a halt, saying they would not continue while the Americans deployed new intermediate-range Pershing and cruise missiles in Europe.

Diplomats said yesterday that Moscow had apparently realised that it had gained nothing by this stance, least of all a split in Nato.

In a television interview, Mr Shultz indicated that the Russians are prepared to negotiate substantial reductions in their offensive nuclear arsenal.

Mr Shultz told journalists on his plane yesterday that research for President Reagan's space-based missile defence system would not be halted. Eventual deployment could be a matter for negotiations in future years.

Other officials said yesterday that the general build-up in America's defences would not be slowed while the three-track arms negotiations — on strategic, intermediate-range and space-based weapons — were in progress.

MOSCOW CLAIMS CREDIT

By NIGEL WADE in Moscow

MOSCOW claimed credit yesterday for the success of the Geneva arms talks between the Soviet Union and the United States.

"We have plenty of good will and desire to co-operate on an honest and equitable basis," said a Tass news agency commentary issued after Mr Gromyko, the Soviet Foreign Minister, returned to Moscow.

PRAVDA had earlier published the joint Soviet-American communique from Geneva on an inside page.

"The ball is now in the West's court," the Tass analysis said. There were no issues which could not be solved through negotiations based on a constructive approach and goodwill.

"Radical solutions"

"True to its principled policy of peace, the Soviet Union and its diplomacy consistently stand for checking and reversing material preparations for war," Tass said. "This is precisely why our country addressed President Reagan with a proposal for both sides to open talks."

Tass again stressed Moscow's view that "it is particularly important that militarisation of outer space be prevented" and repeated that Russia would seek "the most radical solutions."

The coming negotiations, agreed upon at Geneva, would not be easy. "There is no doubt that a long and difficult road lies ahead."

PLEDGE ON PUBLIC WORKS SPENDING

By ROLAND GRIBBEN Business Correspondent

GOVERNMENT action to see how spending can be increased to reduce a backlog of repair and maintenance work on schools, hospitals, council homes and roads was promised at a meeting of the National Economic Development Council yesterday.

Ministers, headed by Mr Lawson, Chancellor, also agreed to set up a working party to examine pleas from the Confederation of British Industry and T U C for a public works programme to help stimulate faster growth and reduce unemployment.

The moves came during an often stormy meeting where the Government came under strong pressure from both sides to change economic priorities.

But while Ministers agreed to more studies there was no sign that Mr Lawson was shifting from his arguments that tax cuts rather than public spending programmes would do more to reduce unemployment.

The council also accepted a year-long work programme to assess where new jobs can be created against the background of a gloomy report from Mr John Cassells, director-general of the National Economic Development Office, the body which serves the council.

The report said that unemployment is far above any level which is desirable or necessary and added: "It is hard to find any solid grounds for expecting much improvement till the end of the decade."

'Robust discussion'

The debates on public works programmes, punctuated by demands from Mr Norman Willis, T U C General Secretary, for increased spending, dominated the near four-hour meeting, only the second atended by T U C leaders since they ended their boycott.

Mr Willis afterwards described the discussions as "robust" while Mr Lawson, who chaired the meeting, said it was "civilised."

The Government agreed that priority should be given to examining ways of spending more on repair and maintenance after the presentation of a report from Mr Cassells which showed that buildings and roads were being neglected because of spending cuts.

Mr Jenkin, Environment Secretary, accepted the report as an "accurate and useful" contribution but disputed estimates o fa £5 billion backlog on council house repairs alone.

But he promised to report back to the council within six months on issues raised by the report

A group consisting of Sir Peter Middleton, Treasury Permanent Secretary, Sir Terence Beckett, C B I Director General, Mr Peter Willis and Mr Cassells, will also lok at the scope for follow-up action after the Government reports.

The group will also examine presentations on public works programmes from the C B I and T U C. The C B I wants a major roads programme and the T U C a £50 billion, five-year public works programme.

The report from Mr Cassells described a disturbing situation where large sums were being wasted and where buildings and roads had deteriorated because of a heavy maintenance backlog.

County surveyors told officials in Mr Cassells' office that without maintenance spending two or three times the current level many local roads will soon deteriorate to the point where far greater investment will be needed.

The backlog of hospital maintenance work is estimated at £2 billion and in some education authorities spending on repairs was only 6 p.c. of the amount needed on th most urgent jobs.

There were serious defects in council housing and while the report says it was impossible to put an overall figure on the cost of remedying the backlog it was substantial

£15m offer to Laker creditors

By Our Business Correspondent

BRITISH AIRWAYS and the 11 other defendants in the conspiracy case brought by the liquidator of Laker Airways are offering trade creditors a total of £15 million to settle their claims, it emerged yesterday.

The 15,000 plus trade creditors claim they are owed substantially more by Laker. But the key creditors are seriously tempted by the offer.

The 12, who also include British Caledonian, T W A and Pan Am, are offering to settle all claims up to £50,000 in full. The bigger creditors are being offered £50,000 and 20 p.c. of any balance.

The creditors range from small to major Laker suppliers in Britain and overseas, and are one of the major stumbling blocks in the way of a deal with Mr Christopher Morris, the Laker Liquidator.

Anxious to settle

British Airways is particularly anxious for an out of court settlement in the case brought by Mr Morris in America. He claims that the 12 conspired with cut-price transatlantic fares to drive Laker out of business.

The 12 are understood to have made an offer of about £44 million to settle the case, but Mr Morris has tabled a claim that could produce up to £877 million in damages if he is successful.

Claims against Laker could total £250 million according to provisional estimates, including the £4 million owed to 4,000 stranded ticket holders.

A settlement of the Laker claim would help clear the way for the £1 billion flotation of British Airways later this year.

MINERS SEEK LIMIT TO MASS PICKETS

Miners in South Wales will seek an injunction in the High Court today aimed at limiting the number of pit pickets in the area.

Twenty miners, some working and some not, have issued a High Court writ challenging the legality of mass picketing which, they say, amounts to unlawful intimidation. It is the first time that the volume of picketing has been challenged in the courts.

The Welsh miners are suing Mr Emlyn Williams, the South Wales N U M president, Mr George Rees, secretary, and Mr Terry Thomas, vice-president.

BACK-TO-WORK LEADER ON THEFT CHARGES

Ken Foulstone, one of the rebel miners' leaders in the back-to-work revolt in the Yorkshire coalfields, has appeared in court at Doncaster charged with two burglaries allegedly commited in 1977 involving the theft of property worth more than £3,000.

Foulstone, 44, of Markham Flinton Pumping Station, Milton, near Retford, Nottinghamham, is accused of breaking into Cantley Hall, near Doncaster, and another house in Doncaster.

He was remanded on bail until Feb. 5.

GAS BLAST CAUSED BY DOG

A BLACK mongrel bitch called Trixie yesterday caused a gas explosion which wrecked her owners' home in Clifton Street, Athersley, Barnsley.

The four-year-old pet is thought to have pulled off a taper used to light the cooker, leaving an open-ended pipe with gas pouring out. It was ignited by the pilot light.

The blast lifted the three-bedroomed terraced house from its foundations, blew off the roof, shattered windows, cracked interior walls and ripped up floorboards and ceilings.

But the sleeping family, Mr Gerry Peel, 50, his wife Eileen, 46, and their son Darren, 14, escaped unhurt. So did Trixie, a budgerigar called Jackie and a tortoise called Gerry, who was not even roused from his hibernation.

Mrs Peel said Trixie was normally very well-behaved. "It's a miracle we weren't all killed." The Peels are now staying in alternative council accommodation.

Dikko affair stops adoption, say couple

By CON COUGHLIN

A BRITISH couple claim they have been prevented from adopting a Nigerian orphan in revenge for the Government's decision to consider granting political asylum to disgraced Nigerian minister Dr Alhaji Dikko.

Mrs Sheilagh Jeffery, 41, applied to adopt Daniel, a 10-year-old Nigerian after she met him in an orphanage in Nigeria while working for a charity in October.

But when she returned to Nigerial before Christmas to collect Daniel she was told by a welfare officer that the Nigerian government would no longer authorise the adoption because Britain had agreed to consider granting political asylum to "that traitor and murderer" Dr Dikko.

Dr Dikko, a former Nigerian transport minister, was the centre of a diplomatic row when he was found drugged and bound in a crate at Stansted Airport, Essex as part of an ill-fated attempt to smuggle him back to Nigeria.

Last resort

Dr Dikko applied for political asylum shortly before Christmas and Mrs Jeffrey, of Cove, near Tiverton, Devon, claims her adoption request was turned down in revenge for the British Government's action.

"They made it quite clear that the only reason I could not have the child was because I was British," she said yesterday. "Everything else had been sorted out and the adoption was set to proceed. Now I don't know what will happen."

As a last resort Mrs Jeffery says she is prepared to return to Nigeria and live as the common law wife of a Nigerian for six months so that she can gain Nigerian citizenship and adopt the child without interference from the authorities.

"My husband and I are prepared to consider it as a last resort. But we hope we will be able to find a more sensible solution to the problem," she said.

A spokesman for the Nigerian High Commission in London said the Nigerian government would not prevent British parents adopting a Nigerian child purely for political reasons.

"There is absolutely no question of this matter having anything to do with the Dikko Affair," said a spokesman. "The application may have been rejected on other grounds but there are many British people currently adopting Nigerian children without any difficulty."

Big farm policy 'ignores investment in people'

By GODFREY BROWN Agriculture Correspondent

BIG business agriculture may have been heading down the wrong road in its striving for ever-increasing productivity and efficiency, it was suggested at the annual Oxford Farming Conference yesterday.

Mr F. E. Shields, general secretary and treasurer of the National Federation of Young Farmers' Clubs, said agriculture had moved down the road of ever-increasing business size, high inputs and high mechanisation, "which has meant that we must have higher returns."

Supposedly, this had been done in order to survive, but it had enabled large farmers to get even bigger and to do so on increased borrowing.

Missing ingredient

"Had we fought to ensure that the income from small farms was adequate to support a family and to ensure that the advantages of size did not overwhelm the small businesses, we may have had a different farm structure today without the worrying trends to industrialised agriculture." Mr Shields said.

Some people inside agriculture and many of those who had been squeezed out questioned the validity of arguments that ignored anything other than the business size.

They were all swallowing the definition of "efficiency" that missed the vital ingredient, which was that the efficient use of resources must include land, people, environment, machinery and capital and weighting these in the interests of all the people concerned.

"We cannot condone the casting aside of our small farmers and workforce, and abandoning them to an urban lifestyle on social security," he said.

Pressures also came from environmentalists, who saw parts of the countryside changed beyond acceptable levels, from young people who saw neither housing nor job opportunities, and from a few farmers who saw the big business agriculture being very vulnerable to political whims.

The days when farming could shed its labour without any social responsibility had gone. Generations of unemployed farmers had been soaked up by the first industrial revolution, but now the technological revolution was shedding labour and cities no longer had a pool of jobs for those displaced from agriculture.

Farmers were safer and much more acceptable as people and as an industry when the farm structure was smaller, Mr Shields said. "It is time for us to ask the policy-makers to look at new and bold policies. Small, safe and comfortable is happier than large, vulnerable and deeply in debt, and the present examples of large viable farm businesses swallowing their neighbours should tell us the rules of the game are wrong.

"We are considering the return per acre rather than the return on the investment in people, and this will lead us into the kind of social problems that exist in our urban areas," he said.

Shedding labour

Prof Colin Spedding, director of the Centre for Agricultural Strategy at Reading University, and dean of the university's agriculture and food faculty, said one criticism of large-scale, intensive farming was that it had pursued efficiency of labour use solely by shedding labour at a time when unemployment had been growing.

Agriculture, as so often, gave the impression that it could only see one path to progress. It argued that more people would simply share the wealth now generated, increasing costs and reducing profits.

But little serious thought had been given to the use of labour to avoid losses and wastage, increase output, and generate additional value-adding enterprises. Yet some farmers were already doing this.

Parents rapped for 'playing at teacher'

By SARAH THOMPSON Education Staff

TOO many parents are "playing at teachers" and are pushing professional teachers out of jobs, the second largest teachers' union said yesterday.

Mr Fred Smithies, general secretary of the National Association of Schoolmasters and Union of Women Teachers, said: "Children like to play at parents and it sems that many parents like to play at teachers.

"But even the best-intentioned amateurs need to be subject to close professional control and direction if they are to venture into any classroom."

The 126,000-strong union says: "The increasing use of parents and other volunteers in primary schools is often a reflection of the reluctance or inability of most local education authorities to provide adequate staffing, ancilliary help and other resources."

Parents in the classroom should always be there with the agrement of the teaching staff, says the union, and should be held legally accountable for their actions. They should act under the teachers' supervision and should never be used to substitute for a teacher.

It said that roles undertaken by parents include helping out at school functions, providing transport for school teams, working alongside teachers in lessons and doing work such as library duties, which would otherwise be done by paid staff.

"Parental involvement in school can help to raise standards by bringing school and home closer together," says the union. But it warns members that the trend threatens their jobs.

Owen to press for more SDP peers

By VALERIE ELLIOTT Political Staff

DR OWEN, S D P leader, would like to see the creation of more S D P peers, and is hoping that this year the Prime Minister will agree to add to the party's 43 members in the House of Lords.

He believes in the need for working peers in the Lords, nominated by political parties, until there is a reformed second chamber.

This would contain an elected element and nominated members would be chosen by an independent commission.

Last year Dr Owen submitted a list of S D P nominees but Mrs Thatcher did not approve any of his recommendations. The S D P did not receive any honours in the New Year's list published last week. By tradition, however, the Jan. 1 list does not contain names of new working peers which are usually announced during the summer.

Dr Owen now has six months to convince Mrs Thatcher that the numbers of S D P peers should be increased, but the general view in the party is that she is unlikely to agree to strengthening the Alliance in the Lords. There are now 43 S D P and 41 Liberal peers.

S D P candidates

Among the names favoured by Dr Owen is Lieut-Col Richard Crawshaw, 67, former M P for Liverpool, Toxteth. As a former deputy speaker Dr Owen believes he is entitled to a peerage by convention.

Other possible candidates include Mr Tom Bradley, chairman of the Transport Salaried Staffs Association, and Dr Jesse Dickson-Mabon, both former S D P M Ps who lost their seats at the last election.

The Alliance parties, although favouring reform of the Lords—a joint consultative paper on reform o fthe Lords has been drawn up—believe strongly in the need for a second chamber to act as a check on the power of government to force through legislation.

They also stress the value of a second chamber which can fully scrutinise bills which pass through the Commons often largely unexamined.

BMA VOTES TO FIGHT DRUGS LIMIT

By Our Health Services Correspondent

PARENTS will have to make their children swallow foul-tasting medicines if the Government goes ahead with its plans to limit the number of drugs doctors may prescribe on the N H S, the British Medical Association claimed yesterday.

A meeting of the B M A council voted unanimously to seek a meeting with Mr Fowler, Social Services Secretary, to present their objections.

The association, which is opposed to the principle of a limited list of medicines, voted by 34-9 not to discuss with Mr Fowler which drugs might be included on such a list.

Dr John Marks, chairman of the council, is writing to all M Ps urging them to vote against the proposal for a limited list when it comes before Parliament.

The doctors' anger is directed against plans to save £100 million a year by limiting the number of drugs doctors may prescribe in certain categories. These include cough medicines, laxatives, indigestion remedies, low dose vitamins, pain killers, tonics, sedatives and tranquilisers.

Dr Marks says in his letter to M Ps that from the day the health service was started in 1948 doctors have been able to prescribe medicines on the basis of what patients need rather than on the basis of what they can afford.

ULSTER AIM IS TO 'GRIND DOWN TERRORISTS'

By Our Belfast Correspondent

The Government's top priority in Northern Ireland this year was "grinding down the terrorists," Mr Hurd, Ulster Secretary said yesterday.

But Mr Hurd said security and the defeat of terrorism in the province could not be dealt with in isolation and the Government would continue to tackle the crucial political and economic problems.

Last year terrorist violence dropped to its lowest level since 1970 with 64 deaths compared to nearly 400 in 1972. Mr Hurd stressed he would not be rushed into trying to get quick political solutions.

CND WOMAN LOSES FIGHT OVER TAX BILL

Mrs Joanna Kirkby, a peace campaigner, lost a battle with the Inland Revenue yesterday, but vowed to fight on. Mrs Kirkby, 65, of Western Hill, Durham City, was ordered by the Durham County Court to pay a £44 tax bill within 14 days.

She said later she would not, but her refusal would give the taxman the power to seize the money from her bank or send bailiffs to her home.

Mrs Kirkby, a widow, and member of Christian C N D, has repeatedly refused to pay the portion of her annual tax bill she believes would be used on defence spending, and has sent it instead to the National Insurance contributions account. She was told at yesterday's private hearing that her defence was a political one, and had no standing in law.

Fight ahead over city task forces

By JOHN CRIGSBY Local Government Correspondent

MINISTERS will announce early in March details of Government plans to set up five task forces to tackle the problems of unemployment and inner-city decay.

The new bodies will be based on the Merseyside task force, set up by Mr Heseltine, then Environment Secretary, after he visited Merseyside more than three years ago in the wake of the Toxteth riots.

There will be stiff resistance from leaders of the Labour-controlled councils in the areas involved who are suspicious of the whole idea as a "Trojan horse" designed to introduce more central government control into their areas.

They also argue that the comparatively small amount of public money available to the task force will divert attention from the loss of far larger amounts in rates support grants — the money the government gives local authorities to help meet their costs.

Liverpool warning

Merseyside Metropolitan Council is to call a meeting of the other authorities to be involved in the new Government initiative to warn them of what it sees are the dangers of task forces. It claims that the Merseyside force has got bogged down in the details of small-scale projects without managing to tackle the underlying problems of the area. The Labour-controlled Liverpool City Council has refused to work with the force on any housing initiative.

Under Mr Heseltine's scheme a team of civil servants and people seconded from private industry moved in to co-ordinate efforts of different Government departments, including Environment, Employment, Trade and Industry, as well as the Manpower Services Commission, and the private sector.

Mr David Renshaw, an Under-Secretary at the Department of the Environment, who is the task forc edirector, said: "A lot gets done. We have to work within the current economic climat, but one of our most significant achievements has been to help tackle the housing problems of Mersyside."

Under a community refurbishment scheme, 7,000 homes have been repaired and redecorated by unemployd tenants on local huosing estates.

Mr Renshaw called the scheme "a classice example of self-help, a classic of people in rundown areas able to pull themselves up by their own bootstraps."

Training places

The force was also responsible for the Stockbridge Village scheme where a rundown estate in Knowsley was takn over by a trust, houses refurbished and new homes built for buyers.

Soon after it was formed, the force persuaded local mployers to provid e1,200 training placs. It promoted information technology centres, encouraged the Ellesmere Port boat museum and pioneered the Wavertree technology park.

The force, which has a staff of 39 plus three from the MSC, has spent about £80 million over the last three years, apart from the money available under the urban programme and the ordinary rate support grant. This year's budget is about £35 million.

PAY FROZEN

The French-owned Michelin factory, in Stoke-on-Trent, which has announced 2,400 redundancies, yesterday warned the 5,300 remaining staff that they were being given a last chance and that their pay would be frozen for the next 12 months.

RABBI BACKED BY GIRL HE TEASED

By DAVID MILLWARD

A YOUNG Jewish girl, once the butt of a wisecracking Rabbi's joke, yesterday spoke up for the rabbi, who was sacked for his saucy jokes in the synagogue.

JACQUI COE, now 15, was nine years old when she slipped during a service after sipping wine, causing Rabbi CLIFFORD COHEN to quip: "One drink and she's anybody's."

Jacqui told an industrial tribunal in London that subsequently she had been happy to attend the rabbi's confirmation classes.

"I always had a good relationship with him," she said.

Her father, Mr ALAN COE, said he had not been in the slightest bit offended by the joke.

"It was part of the atmosphere of the service, and was an impromptu remark made off-the cuff.

"It was said without malice and I took it in the spirit it was intended and so did the congregation."

Good timing

Mr KEITH BLACKBURN, who resigned from the synagogue in protest at Rabbi Cohen's dismissal, paid tribute to his personal kindness at times of stress and his wit.

"Rabbi Cohen's humour was very sharply honed and his sense of timing was very good. It usually helped lift the services at a point when they could have become very tedious."

Earlier Mr Cohen told the tribunal that he believed in Jewish celebrations being fun.

"There is a tendency to treat every synagogue service as if it is a memorial service," he said.

"It is easy for a religious occasion to become a serious occasion, but I don't think that is appropriate at a barmitzvah."

Rabbi Cohen, 36, was dismissed by the Southgate Progressive Synagogue last February after nine years' service because of his behaviour in the synagogue and for neglecting his pastoral duties.

He denies the claims, alleges unfair dismissal, and is seeking reinstatement.

He admitted yesterday on the third day of the hearing that he had told saucy jokes at services, but had not realised at first that they had offended anybody.

But once after making a remark about a boy learning "about this, that and the other — especially the other" during his barmitzvah, he had been approached by members of the synagogue.

"I learned something, and did not on any future occasion make any remark from the pulpit with a sexual overtone," he said.

The wisecracks were often at the request of the congregation, including Mr JONATHAN WHYCER, the synagogue council chairman, who had criticised Rabbi Cohen's use of humour at the tribunal earlier in the week.

Rabbi Cohen said he was approached by Mr Whycer and his fiancée before the Sabbath services which immediately preceded their wedding.

"I was asked by both of them if I could give an amusing address. I did so to the extent that there were loud chuckles in the congregation. There were never any complaints about that."

Speaking of his "Mazel and Tov" cabaret act with Jane Ward, he said the duo initially performed satirical material written by American performers such as Tom Lehrer.

"Over the years we have started writing our own songs. It is how satire directed at the Jewish community. I think I will have to write some more songs after this week," he said.

'We poke fun'

"We poke fun at most of the things people take seriously: the religious establishment, dietary laws, God, sex and rock and roll."

He likened their material to Flanders and Swann. "The audience has a chuckle rather than a big guffaw."

The songs are written in English. "I know only 15 words of yiddish and my entire yiddish vocabulary is in the song."

He denied allegations that he was lazy or failed to perform his pastoral duties.

His average working week lasted 60 hours, he said.

"I visited as many people as I could. The list of people I have visited includes over half the Synagogue council."

He also denied misusing the answerphone provided by the synagogue at his home. His duties often meant he was away from home and the machine was his only effective way of maintaining contact with his congregation.

Given the long and erratic hours he was expected to work, he occasionally did use the machine while he was in the flat in order to run his home and prepare his meals undisturbed.

The hearing was adjourned until today.

Glue-sniffer dies after family killing

By JOHN SHAW

A YOUTH who wore punk clothes and sniffed glue killed his mother and grandmother in a knife attack yesterday and then fell to his death from an upstairs window at their home.

Police found the body of Stephen Webb, 17, in a snow covered front garden in London Road, Leigh-on-Sea, Essex.

Stephen was unemployed and his parents were divorced. His mother Pamela, 38, drove a delivery van and his grandmother Mrs Margery Rolph, 70, was a part-time cleaner in a bank. Their bodies were found in a downstairs room.

Det Ch Insp Ken Smith, head of Southend CID, said police were looking for no one else in connection with the "domestic tragedy."

The youth died in jeans and a sweatshirt, but neighbours said he usually wore black leather, tartan and chains, and dyed his hair orange and green.

Mr Henry Stennett, head of Belfairs School, which Stephen left last May said there had been no glue sniffing problems in school but he was aware that Stephen, "a quiet relatively well-behaved boy, indulged outside school hours.

HUNT RECLAIMS RESCUED HOUND

A foxhound which hunt saboteurs rescued from the main Exeter to Paddington railway line at Silverton, Devon, during a New Year's hunt has been returned to its kennels.

Mr Ralph Cook, 25, a hunt saboteur from Exeter, had cared for the eight-year-old bitch, which had lost the rest of the pack, until the Hunt reclaimed it. He was paid £6 to cover the cost of dog food.

SHOCK FOR DOGS

Two escapers caught

By JOHN WEEKS
Crime Staff

TWO men escaped from a prison van in the Marylebone Road yesterday after threatening to cut a prison officer's throat with a razor blade unless the handcuff keys were handed over.

The pair later forced a woman to give up her car in Seymour Place, Marylebone, but they abandoned it shortly after and took a taxi to Amberley Road, Maida Vale.

The taxi driver became suspicious and alerted police after dropping the two men off. They were arrested later outside a garage in Amberley Road.

The pair had escaped while they were being taken from Canterbury Prison to Wormwood Scrubs, where they are on remand awaiting trial on varying charges including motoring offences, theft and causing grievous bodily harm.

MOTHER WATCHES EXECUTION

By IAN BALL in New York

WITH a whispered "goodbye, mother" to the woman watching the execution through the witness room window, Roosevelt Green, a convicted murderer, was put to death yesterday in Georgia's electric chair.

Green, a 28-year-old black, had asked that his mother, Mrs Annie Green of Roosevelt, New York, witness his execution:

He spoke his final farewell to his mother while he was strapped in the wooden electric chair and just before guards placed a leather mask over his face.

Mrs Green lifted her hand to acknowledge his farewell and showed no emotion during the execution.

Earlier, Green had winked at one of his lawyers, also witnessing the execution at the condemned man's request. The lawyer responded by giving the thumbs-up sign.

The son of a pentacostal minister, Green showed no fear as the electrodes were attached to his body. He went to his death proclaiming his innocence.

'Arbitrary' penalty

His final statement was addressed to the witnesses: "What you people are about to witness is a grave injustice. I am about to die for a murder I did not commit, that someone else committed.

"I have nothing against anyone and I have no enemies. I love the Lord and hope that God takes me into his Kingdom, and goodbye, mother."

Green was the fourth inmate and the third black to be put to death in Georgia since the Supreme Court allowed states to restore the death penalty.

He had argued in his various appeals that Georgia's death penalty was being administered in an arbitrary and discriminatory way.

His mother neither closed her eyes nor turned her head as Green's body jerked rigidly against the back of the chair with fists clenched during the two minutes that high-voltage electricity was applied.

After waiting six minutes for the body to cool, two doctors checked for a heartbeat and pronounced Green dead.

He was executed for the 1976 murder of an 18-year-old white undergraduate who was abducted from the shop where she was working, raped and then shot twice with a high-powered rifle.

31 ACCUSED OVER THATCHER DEMO

Thirty-one people, mostly undergraduates, are to face charges after demonstrations against Mrs Thatcher outside All Souls College, Oxford, last month. They have been summoned to appear before the city's magistrates on Jan. 22.

Most face allegations of public order offences. They were arrested during the trouble on Dec. 7 when Mrs Thatcher attended a seminar.

Test case over council ban on private pupils

By JOHN IZBICKI Education Correspondent

MOVES to stop a local authority's vendetta against children at independent schools are to be made in the High Court today. The test case is almost certain to have national repercussions.

Mr Barry Staniforth, a Newark farmer, is applying for an injunction against Nottinghamshire council to prevent it from stopping his 11-year-old son taking a computer course at a local technical college.

The son, Ben, who attends a £359-a-term prep school at Newark, had signed up for the course being run for juniors on Saturdays at Newark Technical College.

A letter from Mrs P. E. B. Allen, head of the Department of Adult Education at the college told Ben, however, "I have just been advised by the Nottinghamshire education authority of a new policy regarding admission to junior college to be implemented from January, 1985.

"This restricts junior college students to children resident in Nottinghamshire and not in private school education."

Mr Staniforth said last night: "I pay my rates the same as all other residents in this area and I resent being deprived of facilities available to other ratepayers simply because my child attends a private school."

One of Ben's friends, who also attends Highfields Prep School, is also barred from attending the Saturday course though his friend's sister, at a State school, is eligible for it.

The High Court action is a development in the battle being fought by parents in both the private and State sectors against a decision taken by a schools sub-committee on the Left-wing county council to bar independent school pupils from all council-run facilities.

These include the Saturday music schools and county orchestra and band as well as the use of playing fields for soccer and cricket matches and of swimming pools.

ROBBERY THEORY IN M4 ATTACK

By T. A. SANDROCK
Crime Correspondent

ROBBERY was the probable motive for the attack on an Iraqi doctor found with multiple stab wounds alongside the M4 near Reading, police said yesterday, but added that they were not ruling out a terrorist motive.

Dr Enad Hamoudi, 31, had publicly criticised the Iranian regime and acused it of providing a haven for international terrorists. The possibility that this led to a revenge attack, made to look like a robbery, is under consideration.

Det Supt David Freedland, in charge of the investigation, saw the doctor in the Royal Berkshire Hospital yesterday and was told that £200 was stolen during the attack.

Dr Hamoudi, a research assistant in the Department of Medicine at Bristol University was driving his own car early on Tuesday from his lodgings in Bristol to visit his wife in London.

He stopped briefly at a service station at Membury, Wiltshire. He told police that two men in a light coloured van or car forced him on to the hard shoulder of the M4 shortly after and then attacked him.

Although police have not ruled out the terrorist motive they have not yet questioned any Iranians or sought the assistance of leaders of Iranian groups in this country.

Get the top rate 8·50%=12·14% and passbook flexibility

If you're investing, then you'll want top interest. And you'll either want to take that interest as monthly income, or leave it in your account to make your money grow. And that's exactly what Nationwide offers you.

Passbook flexibility

Nationwide Bonus-90 gives you passbook flexibility: you can withdraw your money as you wish and you can add to your investment at anytime. The minimum investment is £200.

Top rate 8·50%*=12·14%

Nationwide Bonus-90 pays our top rate, that's 1.75% extra above the variable Share Account rate: 8.50%, worth 12.14% to basic rate income tax payers.

Real growth 8·68%=12·40%

Nationwide adds the interest to your account every six months and it then earns interest itself at the Bonus-90 rate. So you get 8.68%, which is worth 12.40% to basic rate income tax payers.

Monthly income

Alternatively, if it's monthly income you want, then Nationwide is happy to pay your interest direct into your bank account, or into a Nationwide Share Account where it earns interest until you withdraw it. You need to invest at least £2,000 if you want monthly income.

No-notice withdrawals

There are no-notice withdrawals, with a loss of 90 days' interest on the sum withdrawn. Or you can give 90 days' notice and lose nothing.

The big investor

In addition, you can withdraw from balances above £10,000 without notice or penalty provided £10,000 remains invested.

HUGE TASK LIES AHEAD ON ARMS, SAYS GROMYKO

By DAVID ADAMSON Diplomatic Correspondent

MR GROMYKO, the Soviet Foreign Minister, said on leaving Geneva yesterday that immense tasks still lay ahead regarding arms-control negotiations.

Commenting on his agreement with Mr Shultz, the United States' Secretary of State, that the superpowers should re-enter arms talks, he added that they had so far taken "but a step" compared with the work which was to be done.

During their two days of talks with the Americans, the Soviet side had "particularly stressed" the importance of preventing the militarisation of space.

In contrast to Mr Shultz, Mr Gromyko made no direct reference to a point on which both had agreed: the need for radical reductions in nuclear arms leading to their eventual elimination.

American proposals for the deployment of an anti-missile system in space were the issue on which these exploratory talks about talks could have foundered.

Mr Kenneth Adelman, director of the American Arm Control and Disarmament Agency, said yesterday that Mr Gromyko had at one point been on the verge of terminating the talks with a vague statement instead of the agreement on negotiations which eventually emerged.

Agreement on U.S. Research

As a result, it had seemed for a while that Mr Shultz might have to go to Moscow for further talks. Mr Gromyko held out for a long time for an American commitment not to proceed with research.

Eventually the Americans agreed that the research programme could be considered in the negotiating group which will deal with space weapons. That fell short of an agreement to halt the $26 billion research programme but it was nevertheless a concession.

The Soviet concession seems to have been that the same group could consider American accusations that the Russians have breached a 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile (A B M) agreement which covers land-based defensive systems.

The chief violation alleged by the Americans is that the Russians are building a huge radar at Krasnoyask, in central Siberia. The treaty stipulates that early warning radars must be on the periphery of the country.

Mr Schultz admitted in his Press conference on Tuesday night that "we didn't have much luck" in persuading the Russians that the development of defensive systems in space would improve "strategic stability."

He, too, warned that the way ahead might prove difficult when the two sides faced the substantive issues in negotiations.

"Whether we will get anywhere in the negotiations that start remains to be seen," he said. "I don't know the answer to that."

Space weapons controversy

The Russians argue that space weapons would cause a new and highly undesirable arms race. They see the research programme as a violation of Article 5 of the A B M treaty and do not accept the American interpretation of the treaty which, they claim, makes testing of defensive non-nuclear systems in space legitimate.

However, Mr Shultz emphasised the American desire to reverse the erosion of the A B M treaty, as he did the fact that no decision to go beyond research had been taken.

One issue on which there seems to have been a meeting of minds was the need to preserve and strengthen the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, which comes up for review in September this year.

The N P T restricts nuclear weapons to the five countries which have them, America, Russia, Britain, France and China and seeks to halt their spread.

The failure of the Soviet Union and United States to stop their own proliferation of new and improved weapons is often cited by non-nuclear weapons states as a violation of the spirit of the treaty.

Russia and America have continued, despite their differences, to meet frequently on the issue of non-proliferation, since it is in the interest of both to restrict the spread of nuclear weapons.

"If you have the aspiration of eliminating nuclear weapons then the subject of non-proliferation has got to be right up on the front burner," said Mr Shultz on Tuesday night.

The agreement between the superpowers allows for the subdivision of the negotiations into three groups: space weapons, long-range inter-continental weapons and intermediate-range missiles, such as the Soviet SS20 and the American cruise and Pershing 2 missiles, which are being deployed in five West European countries.

So far as the land-based and submarine-launched offensive missiles are concerned the structure of the negotiations seems to be little different in practice from what existed in Geneva until the end of 1983, when the Russians walked out.

Although progress in the three groups will be linked, the preservation of intermediate-range weapons as a distinct group will make it easier for the Americans to keep their pledge to consult closely with their Nato allies on the conduct of the talks.

Tensions still running high

It will also prevent the Euro-missiles becoming confused with the long-range "strategic" missiles when the two sides reach the stage of considering how to make cuts in their armouries.

The talks will, of course, take place within a political environment in which the tensions between the superpowers are still running high. There is still little trust between them.

The first task for the United States and the Soviet Union will be to decide within the next month where to meet.

Geneva would appear to be the most suitable venue but the Soviet insistence that they are entering entirely new talks may make them seek some other neutral city.

Vienna would be an obvious alternative. Stockholm is a possibility, although it is already host to the 35-nation European security conference. Belgrade is another neutral or non-aligned capital which might be considered.

BALANCE WILL BE KEY WORD

By Air Cdre G. S. COOPER Defence Staff

MILITARY advice for the American and Russian arms control negotiators remains firmly based on appreciating that it would be dangerously unwise to seek to alter the strategic balance in weapons that support mutual deterrence.

The military requirement is for equitable and verifiable reductions in nuclear forces to be achieved in a way that would enhance deterrence and thus ensure peace.

Balance will be the key word in the talks to be held by the three groups set up to discuss long-range intercontinental missiles, intermediate-range weapons and space weapons.

The ultimate aim of eliminating all nuclear weapons would make no military sense without full and verifiable agreement on balancing all other weapons of war.

Last year at the Geneva conference on disarmament the United States introduced a draft treaty calling for a comprehensive and verifiable global ban on chemical weapons.

Central points

Central to the American proposals are strong verification and compliance provisions, including automatic and unimpeded on-site challenge inspections of military and government-controlled facilities in the event of a suspected treaty violation.

The Soviet Union, though stating that it, too, seeks a complete ban on chemical weapons, has not shown itself willing to accept such measures.

Going back to the need for strategic balance in intercontinental ballistic missiles (I C B Ms), the Americans blame the Russians for upsetting it by reaching beyond equality to establish a superior position in key areas.

The Soviets are credited with 1,398 land-based I C B Ms and the United States with 1,045.

The Soviets are seen to be testing new systems, which raise questions in American minds as to the overall size and quality of the Russian forces in the coming years.

Negotiations in this area, therefore, will involve a serious effort on America's part to cut these systems to a stable level.

As for intermediate-range nuclear weapons, Mr Richard Burt, chairman of Nato's Special Consultative Group, has announced that the alliance is prepared to halt, reverse, modify or dispense altogether with the deployment of 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles

The Defence Ministry attaches great importance to the achievement of substantial negotiated reductions in the strategic arsenals of the two superpowers and has said that, if such reductions were to be achieved and if no significant changes had occurred in Soviet defensive capabilities, the British position would be reviewed.

U.S. MARINE TRIED TO SELL SECRETS

By Our Washington Staff

A United States Marine was sentenced to 12 years in prison last August for trying to sell military secrets to the Russians, it was disclosed yesterday.

An F B I spokesman said that Private Robert Cordrey, 23, was convicted by a military court in North Carolina of attempting to sell information on American nuclear, biological and chemical warfare systems.

$50,000 BAIL FOR 'SUBWAY VIGILANTE'

By Our New York Staff

Bernhard Goetz, New York's "subway vigilante," accused of shooting four black teenagers who allegedly tried to mug him in an underground train, has been freed from jail after drawing on his own resources to raise the $50,000 (£43,859) bail.

In doing so he shunned public efforts to provide his bail money. More than $4,000 has been contributed to a defence fund in four days of collecting.

Goetz, a 37-year-old electronics specialist, was back in Manhattan Criminal Court yesterday for what was to have been his formal arraignment on attempted murder charges. But the case was adjourned until next Wednesday after the prosecution said that it needed more time to prepare its case.

Healey's policy snubs Labour unilateralists

By VALERIE ELLIOTT Political Staff

A LABOUR Government would work for a non-nuclear defence policy for Nato, Mr Healey, Shadow Foreign Secretary, said yesterday. But he denied Britain would be free of nuclear weapons if Labour were elected.

He also denied that a future Labour government would remove every American base from Britain, but would rather enter into negotiations with the United States on the matter.

His views, in strident conflict with most of the party's Left-wing and passionate unilateralist caucus, are set out neatly in a comprehensive pamphlet for the Fabian Society, "Labour and a World Society," an update of an essay he wrote for them in 1951 "Power Politics and the Labour Party."

The pamphlet makes up what he believes would be the defence strategy of a Labour government and which he claimed yesterday was backed in principle by Mr Kinnock, Labour leader.

He believes that the main argument inside the Labour party should be concerned with how to shift Nato policy towards a conventional deterrent.

"The Labour party has never believed that it is possible to achieve its objectives by unilateral action alone, or by multilateral action alone," he writes.

He stresses that Britain can act unilaterally but only if this did "not lead to reactions by other governments inside or outside the alliance (Nato) which make the situation more dangerous."

No use for cruise

Thus he argues that Britain could get rid of cruise missiles "because they serve no military purpose and undermine public support for the alliance," and could cancel the Trident programme.

Mr Healey also stresses Labour's commitment to decommission the Polaris force which during Mr Kinnock's recent visit to Moscow was matched by President Chernenko's commitment to match the dismantling of every British missile by the dismantling of a Soviet missile.

"It would be foolhardy to take other unilateral actions without first making sure they did not provoke reactions by other members of Nato which made it more difficult to achieve the non-nuclear strategy we want...

"I believe we could strengthen the defensive capability of Nato's existing forces rapidly, and at a small cost, by certain changes in strategy and organisation so as to make a conventional deterrent totally effective."

In his view, however, Britain must work alongside the United States. "To expel American bases from Britain without consultation in the first days of a new Labour government would create a serious danger that America would reduce her conventional contribution to Nato.

"It would be equally dangerous if the American response was to move nuclear bases from Britain to West Germany, where they would appear very much more provocative to the Soviet Union than they are in Britain."

Changing needs

He thought that it would not be difficult to persuade the Americans to remove their nuclear bases from Britain. He doubted, for example, that they would need the submarine base at Holy Loch in Scotland once their Trident submarines were in service, and also predicted that within a few years their F111 bombers would be outdated.

He sums up: "The best answer is to seek common security through multilateral agreements between the superpowers and their allies. This must be the overriding objective of the foreign and defence policies of a Labour Britain.

"We must remain in Nato, and our membership in Nato must be designed and reshaped so that we can support this objective effectively."

PRIEST 'LAUGHED AT LAW'

By ROBIN GEDYE Diplomatic Staff

A POLISH policeman accused of killing a pro-Solidarity priest said yesterday that he acted because the authorities were "indecisive" against anti-Communist opposition within the church.

Capt. Grzegorz Piotrowski, one of four policemen charged concerning the kidnapping and murder last October of Fr Jerzy Popieluszko, said the priest was making "a laughing stock" of the police through his supprot for the banned free trade union.

"He violted the law and it irritated me that his respect for the law was non-existent. I often asked myself what I was doing working for a law that cannot be observed."

The presiding judge read a statement made by Piotrowski during interrogation in which he said that when Fr Popieluszko was detained for 24 hours in December 1985, "many, many men (in the police) wept as if they were children. The leadership attitude "was so indecisive."

The police ould have arrested the priest in May when about a ton of underground literature was found in his home but they were prevented from doing so by the Interior Minister.

"We were convinced of the need to neutralise him in his political activities but the affect of the secret police on him is nil," the statement said.

First remorse

Piotrowski, accused by his co-conspirators of having administered most of the beatings against the priest, showed remorse for his act for the first time.

"I now lack any pretext to live," he told the court. "I have already sentenced myself to a civil death. I died an October 19. A civil death is worse than a natural one."

Piotrowski sought to shift the ultimate blame for the crime onto Col Adam Pietruszka, 47, his immediate superior. Pietruszka had told Piotrowski: "The scoundrel should be crushed into the ground."

"Without Pietruszka I would not have been able to undertake the operation against the priest. I am a normal man and I still react to evil and I am guilty for the death to a certain extent," he said.

The case, being heard in Torun, was adjourned until today.

White House role for Kirkpatrick urged

By FRANK TAYLOR in Washington

PRESIDENT REAGAN was urged by the more conservative members of his Republican party yesterday to take on Mrs Jeane Kirkpatrick as one of his senior White House advisers.

Leading a campaign to place a conservative thinker at Mr Reagan's elbow now that his three closest aides are leaving is Senator Gordon Humphrey.

He declared that Mrs Kirkpatrick, the outgoing Ambassador to the United Nations, had done more for America's standing in the world than anyone except the President himself.

Mrs Kirkpatrick is giving up the U.N. post voluntarily and has said she will return to private life unless Mr Reagan finds her another suitable job. She is due to discuss the prospects with Mr Reagan after the presidential inauguration on Jan. 21.

With the impending departure from the White House of Mr Edwin Meese, the presidential counsellor, Mr James Baker, Chief of Staff and his deputy Mr Michael Deaver, the Right wing of the Republican party believes there is an opportunity to have a conservative ideologue like Mrs Kirkpatrick fill the gap.

The conservatives are concerned that Mr Reagan has not been pressed hard enough on such issues as school prayer, abortion and the continuing need to take a hard line with Moscow.

Senator Humhprey, speaking for the conservatives, said that Mrs Kirkpatrick "should be given a position of authority and influence in the White House." He complained of a "slow abandoning of the ship" by White House conservatives.

SECRETS FOR SHARON CASE JURY

By IAN BALL in New York

INFORMATION from a secret Israeli report which was declassified this week in connection with Gen. Ariel Sharon's $50 million libel suit against TIME magazine, was read to the jury yesterday after the judge ruled it was admissable as evidence.

Gen. Sharon, former Israeli Defence Minister, claimed that the document clinched his case against TIME.

The magazine suggested that Gen Sharon had discussed "revenge" with the Lebanese Phalangists and in effect, had helped instigate the 1982 massacres of hundreds of Palestinians in two Beirut refugee camps.

The TIME report said the secret appendix to the report of the Israeli Commission that investigated the massacres had taken note of Gen. Sharon's "revenge" discussions.

But the declassified material provided this week by Israeli Justice Yitzhak Kahan, who headed the inquiry commission, said that the appendix contained no "evidence or suggestion" that Gen. Sharon discussed revenge or knew in advance that the Lebanese Phalangists would commit a massacre.

DRUG SQUAD'S OVERTIME RULE HANDICAP

By Our Correspondent in The Hague

Amsterdam's drugs squad missed arresting the brain behind a heroin smuggling operation with connections in Britain and West Germany, because of restrictions on police overtime.

The squad seized 25 kilos of Pakistani heroin in a weekend raid and decided to close in on seven Pakistani suspects before the drug was handed to the gang leaders.

A police spokesman said the drugs squad had charted up 1,500 overtime hours on the case since December. A new collective labour agreement which came into force on Jan. 1 stipulates that policemen may work no more than 60 overtime hours per quarter.

Pretoria bans jail visit to Mandela by Kennedy

By CHRISTOPHER MUNNION in Brandfort, Orange Free State

AS Senator Edward Kennedy made a well-orchestrated trek to the Orange Free State to see Mrs Winnie Mandela yesterday, he was told he could not visit her husband in jail.

Nelson Mandela, the African National Council leader, is serving a life sentence in Cape Town for high treason.

The Senator's party had twice asked Pretoria for permission to visit Mr Mandela.

"I think it very sad that the authorities have refused," Mr Kennedy said on board the airliner hired to fly himself, members of his family, aides and Press on his "anti-apartheid crusade."

"Nelson Mandela is a leader of international stature and I was prepared to go into the prison alone to meet him. There is a lot of concern about his well being."

Implication dismissed

Mr Kobie Coetzee, the Justice Minister, said the visit "could prejudice a decision on Mandela's future." But the implication that the government might be considering his release was dismissed by observers as a political palliative.

Mrs Winnie Mandela, who received the party at her home in Brandfort, a farming community in Orange Free State to which she is restricted by government order, said that she did not expect an early release of her husband.

In terms of her "banning" order she is not allowed to speak with more than one visitor at a time but the law was cheerfuly ignored as she chatted with the Americans.

She happily posed for television cameras as she was presented with a bust of the late Senator Robert Kennedy, which she confused with one of the late President John F. Kennedy.

Mingling with reporters were burly gentlemen with cameras, but no Press credentials, who claimed they were "students of photography" at the state university.

Mrs Mandela said later that she did not think the Senator's visit would bring about any meaningful change.

Hollywood style

Mr Kennedy then drove on to Onverwacht, the resettlement area for blacks in South Africa and described by church groups as "the largest rural slum in the country." As always his movements and remarks were well rehearsed and conducted with the skill of a Hollywood producer.

A bonus for the Kennedy team was the appearance of Mr Hennie Kriel, a local government official, who attempted ot explain the situation in the area but who was clearly ill-informed.

The hapless Mr Kriel wilted under the hectoring interrogation of the well-briefed Senator. Kennedy aides called it a "masterpiece of diplomacy" while others spoke of a cynical piece of stage-managed bullying.

Late last night, Mr Kennedy flew to Durban to meet Archbishop Dennis Hurley, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Natal. At the airport once again a group of black demonstrators chanted "Kennedy go home."

Famine victims at risk in hard-up Zambia

By A. J. McILROY in Lusaka

GOVERNMENT leaders in drought-hit Zambia have told visiting British officials that famine victims in their thousands are at risk because there is no money left to fuel relief operation planes.

Their plight is being used to underline how desperately the near-bankrupt state needs emergency aid.

World Food Programme organisers in Lusaka confirmed yesterday that 15,000 people were suffering severe malnutrition, mainly in the southern region of Gwembe, after crops failed for three consecutive rainless seasons.

Near-impassable roads had taken their toll of badly serviced lorries starved of spare parts, and little if any food and other supplies were getting through.

A Zambia Government spokesman said that more than 20,000 bags of maize were in store but that the planes available to fly them were more than the country could afford "because there is no money."

Friendly talks

The gravity of the situation pinpointed the urgency Zambia's leaders gave to bilateral issues in "wide-ranging and extremely friendly" talks yesterday with Sir Geoffrey Howe, Foreign Secretary.

Sir Geoffrey is in Lusaka with an 11-member delegation during an eight-day African tour.

An additional emergency payment of £15,000,000 from Britain in October nearly doubled annual aid through the Overseas Development Programme, and a further £6,000,000 is pledged to service agricultural machinery.

Between 1980 and 1983 British aid of all kinds was more than £73,000,000, and British-owned companies are making a major contribution. One scheme to export strawberries to Europe is expected to bring in £2,500,000 in foreign earnings over five years.

But amid reports of corruption and inefficiency compounding the ravages of drought, the Zambian government appears to have as little prospect as ever of tackling the country's daunting £3·7 billion foreign debt.

Zambia relies on copper for about 90 per cent. of foreign earnings and has never come to terms with the slump in the world price.

STERLING DELAYS

Howe's view

Representatives of the private sector and some individuals among the 15,000-strong British community in Zambia have raised with Sir Geoffrey concern at delays in agreed remittances in sterling on money earned in Zambia.

In 1984 a total of £600,000 was in the pipeline, the euphemism for delayed payments for individuals, mainly expatriates, who can take a third of their salaries in sterling. But the biggest amounts outstanding involve payments to British companies.

The Foreign Secretary was assured the situation would be reviewed as soon as the economy improved.

Sir Geoffrey described relations with Zambia as extremely important and at their best and said that the Government was impressed with the "realistic" approach Zambia was making towards repairing the economy.

NAMIBIA LINE EXPLAINED BY HOWE

By A. J. McILROY in Lusaka

SIR GEOFFREY HOWE yesterday responded to pressure from black African leaders to justify Britain's support of American-led peace negotiations for the independence of Namibia.

Difficulty has arisen over the Americans taking to Luanda South African proposals making early withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola a condition of Namibian independence. And the "front line" African states want to know how this reconciles with the Foreign Secretary's position.

Britain supports the United Nations' resolution 435 which is for South Africa to grant independence without linking this to the Cuban presence in Angola.

Mr Robert Mugabe, Zimbabwe's leader, has accused South Africa and the Americans of "acting fraudulently" in taking linkage proposals to Angola while Sir Geoffrey, who is on an eight-day tour of black African countries, has stressed that the American initiative is "genuine."

In Lusaka yesterday Sir Geoffrey appeared also concerned to reassure the Americans that he has no criticism of their action.

'Political reality'

He repeated his assertions made earlier this week in Zimbabwe that it was Britain's view there should be no linkage of the Namibian question to that of the presence of Cuban troops in Angola.

But he added: "We must bear in mind the political reality that the scale and duration of the Cuban presence in Angola is a factor of which it is necessary to take account if we are to achieve what we all want, early implementation of the United Nations' plan.

"The Angolan President has not endorsed linkage in any way but has recently come forward with specific proposals for Cuban withdrawal.

"We welcome this move and very much hope that the current U S-led negotiations between Angola and South Africa will succeed in removing this last obstacle in the path of Namibia's independence."

WAITE PLEDGES CHURCH HELP FOR LIBYANS

By JAMES ALLAN in Tripoli

THE Church of England's assistance in securing visas for Libyans wanting to visit relatives held in British jails was promised in Tripoli yesterday by Mr Terry Waite, the Archbishop of Canterbury's special envoy.

He pledged that Dr Runcie would raise "at the most senior level in government" any cases of maltreatment of Libyans brought to the Prelate's attention.

Mr Waite was making a determined effort to remove one of the obstacles raised by Libyans since they began their debate on whether or not to free the four Britons detained in Tripoli.

Col Gaddafi, the Libyan leader, who has recommended the country's 2,000 Basic People's Congresses to release the four men, has also complained of harassment and intimidation of Libyans in Britain.

The opportunity for Mr Waite to give assurances about the conditions in which Libyans are held in British prisons came at a meeting with the families of some of the detained men.

There was a catalogue of complaints from men and women that their sons or brothers were being tortured, made to eat like dogs, intimidated, harassed and generally imprisoned for having committed no offence at all.

Mr Waite said: "I don't believe that necessarily everyone is innocent. I haven't said that about the Britons in Libya and I have not said that about the Libyans in Britain."

'Just and fair'

"What I have said is this. What we must guarantee is that the situation we are facing is dealt with in a just and fair way. That is what I want to guarantee and that is what I want to work for."

Mr Waite said he had seen quite a few of the Libyans held in Britain in private without any prison officer present. "Some have told me how they have been caught up in politics but they have spoken to me in confidence and privately.

"But in some cases it is true to say that it is a case of unfortunate involvement in politics. I am concerned about the dignity and proper treatment of people and the Church can and will do something about that."

He then outlined the practical steps the Church of England planned to take.

"If I could have the name and passport number and basic details of the principal member of each family who would like to go to England to see their relatives I will make sure that their visa applications are speedily processed.

"I will make sure that if you give us proper notice and tell us when you are arriving you will be met by someone from the Church at the airport.

"Also we will try to see that while you are in England you are looked after and given proper hospitality by people from the Church in whatever sector you are to go to."

Meanwhile, said Mr Waite, he would try to visit all the Libyans in British jails or get some of his colleagues to see those he could not to ensure they were being properly looked after.

'Authority and power'

"I think it would be helpful if your Islamic leaders here could be in touch with leaders of the Islamic faith in Britain so that they too could help in this particular matter," he said.

"The Church will do everything within its power to make sure your people are treated with the respect, the dignity and the justice to which they are properly entitled."

Mr Waite said he would discuss the points raised by the families with the Archbishop of Canterbury, pointing out that he "is the senior religious leader in England and he has the authority and the power to take these matters up at the most senior level in government.

"I can assure you if there have been or are going to be in the future any abuses of power it will be thoroughly and properly looked into."

Confident of release

Mr Waite remains reasonably confident that the four Britons will eventually be released.

His visit, appearances on Libyan television and meeting with the families yesterday all appeared to be part of a conditioning of the Libyan people for the ultimate freedom of the Britons without a specific condition that Libyans held in Britain be released in exchange.

The role of the Church in ensuring the welfare and safety of Libyans in Britain along with the government's indication of making visas available for Libyans seeking medical treatment in Britain are what are being offered in exchange for the freedom of the four men.

They are Mr Malcolm Anderson, an oil engineer, Mr Michael Berdinner, an English lecturer at Tripoli University, Mr Robin Plummer, a telephone engineer, and Mr Alan Russell, an English teacher who was jailed for 39 months on Sunday.

Drug charge Briton jailed for 5 years

By JAMES ALLAN in Tripoli

ONE Briton unlikely to benefit from the mission of Mr Terry Waite, the Archbishop of Canterbury's special envoy, currently in Tripoli, is Mr Michael King, a Scotsman in his late twenties.

He was jailed for five years yesterday by a court in the Libyan capital for possessing two grams of hashish which he said he had been given for a bad back.

He was also fined the equivalent of £8,000 or an additional three months imprisoument in default.

Mr King, an oil company worker from Fife where he has a wife and two young children, intends to appeal against the sentence which appears severe, even by Libyan standards.

He told the court yesterday that he had a recurring back problem and while in Rome someone suggested he took some of the substance to relieve the pain.

He thought it to be a kind of medicine and it was not until after he was detained in Tripoli airport and the substance was analysed that he knew what it was.

Shattered look

When the sentence was announced Mr King looked shattered, staring unbelieving and speechless at the judge before he was led away in handcuffs.

In court was the British Consul, Mr Hugh Dunnachie. He said later: "The prisons here are humane and based on the principle of rehabilitation rather than punishment.

"They have workshops where they carry out car maintenance, carpentry and so on.

"You generally don't have the cell system in the same way as we do. Many prisoners are housed in dormitories.

"The food is good though rather boring but there is plenty of it."

FALKLANDS NAVY ROLE REDUCED

By DESMOND WETTERN
Naval Correspondent

THE Navy's forces in the Falklands are being reduced with only two frigates, one of them with Prince Andrew on board, departing from Portland this week to replace three currently in the South Atlantic.

The two frigates, the Brazen, 3,5000 tons, in which Prince Andrew is the Lynx anti-submarine helicopter pilot, and the Diomede, 2,500 tons, were to have been joined by a third, the Danae, 2,450 tons, but the Ministry of Defence has admitted her departure has been cancelled.

The two ships will replace the missile destroyer Southampton, 3,500 tons, and the frigates Minerva, 2,450 tons, and Berwick, 2,380 tons.

The reduction in the number of frigates is part of the £132 million the Prime Minister told Parliament in October would be cut from the Falklands' garrison cost of £684 million this year.

Home waters

By reducing the number of ships in the South Atlantic some of the present overstretch in the Fleet will be eased a little as at present many ships are spending more time at sea and away from home ports than did many in the war years.

So high is the level of sea time that even ships nominally in home waters are spending as much as nine or 10 months away from their bases and the consequent separation from wives and families is effecting the numbers of men seeking to quit the Service.

In addition, the Navy faces a reduction in its manpower of some 10,000, almost a fifth of the total of trained men, by 1991 as part of the cuts ordered under the 1981 defence review.

Mr Kinnock being welcomed yesterday by Mr Peter Summerscale, British Ambassador to Nicaragua, when the Labour leader arrived in the capital Managua to attend today's inauguration of President Daniel Ortega.

Kinnock praises Nicaragua system

By IAN BRODIE in Managua

MR KINNOCK praised Nicaragua for its "celebration of democracy" when he landed in Managua in hot sunshine yesterday for the opening of the National Assembly and the inauguration of Commandante Daniel Ortega, the Sandinista leader, as President.

At the same time, however, the occasion was being marred by a government decision to censor the leading opposition newspaper, LA PRENSA, which failed to appear.

And then the Labour leader was introduced to the inevitable uncertainties of life in Central America. He was told on his arrival that Commandante Ortega would welcome him privately within 90 minutes.

But by the time he had driven to his hotel the meeting had been mysteriously cancelled and no new date arranged. Mr Kinnock went instead to a reception in his honour at the British Mission.

At the airport he said last November's election demonstrated the Nicaraguans' confidence in democarcy which was the "original undertaking of the Sandinistas and is being fulfilled."

He also commented: "The progress for democracy makes our job as stating the case of Nicaragua easier." In short, Mr Kinnock is aligned with those who believe the controversial election was better than no election at all.

Although he supports the Sandinistas, who overthrew the Romoza dictatorship in 1979, his aides say he is not totally uncritical. During his four-day visit he hopes to see opposition politicians and maybe the Roman Catholic hierarchy which has clashed repeatedly with the Sandinistas.

The problems at LA PRENSA began when a young woman lieutenant from the media department of the Ministry of the Interior took exception to a number of articles intended for publication yesterday.

Court appeal

One was about the newspaper's appeal to the Nicaragua Supreme Court against censorship. In all she objected to 80 per cent. of the six-page paper's Editorial content, said Senor Jaime Chamorro, an official of LA PRENSA which has a healthy circulation of 70,000.

"The law states that only military operations can be censored. We don't object to that but none of these articles was about the military. We are not allowed to print blank spaces and it became impossible to produce the paper at all," he said.

President-elect Ortega will be sworn in today in the huge new "Plaza of the Heroes and Martyrs" on the shores of Lake Managua.

The Sandinistas are capitalising on world-wide interest in the event. They are charging foreign television networks £1,200 for a satellite feed, nearly twice the customary rate and the money has to be paid cash.

GAS FLOWS IN FROM MAMMOTH OFFSHORE FIELD

By GEORGE TURNBULL

THE FIRST supplies of natural gas from the Morecambe Bay field, one of the richest in British waters, are now flowing ashore at the rate of 120 million cubic feet a day, it was disclosed yesterday.

The new and largest "gas tap" in the country was turned on just before midday on Tuesday, 25 miles off the Lancashire coast, without publicity or ceremony.

Eight hours later as pressure built up the first supplies from the £1·3 billion field were arriving at the Westpoint Field coastal reception terminal near Barrow-in-Furness.

At a Press conference in Manchester yesterday, senior British Gas executives reported that the project, the largest ever undertaken by the corporation, was on-line and on time.

The field, which has recoverable reserves of five million million cubic feet of gas was discovered in 1974, but it was four years before the corporation decided to develop it to help meet peak demand in winter.

When fully developed it will be able to meet between 12 and 15 per cent. of the corporation's national peak day demand.

Mr Robert Evans, the chief executive said: "This was a mammoth project by any standards and the largest we have undertaken. It has been carried out with great commitment both inside and outside British Gas and will benefit not only the North West but the nation as a whole for a long time to come."

The only black spot in the operation has been the 12-month delay in the delivery of an accommodation vessel from Cammell Laird at Birkenhead which has cost the corporation £15 million in hire charges for another vessel.

Gas is now coming from two wells but by the end of this year more than half of the 19 wells will have been drilled bringing production up to 450 million cubic feet a day.

Another phase of the Morecambe Field is also to be developed at a cost of 500 million involving three more remote drilling platforms to drill a further 21 wells.

This means that by the end of the decade the field, which has an expected life of 40 years and will cost £1 billion to operate will have a production capacity of 1,200 million cubic feet a day.

End of line for second class

By JOHN PETTY
Transport Correspondent

BRITISH RAIL, which today unveils a £9 million advertising campaign to change its image, aims to "abolish" second class on its Intercity expresses later this year.

It is spending millions of pounds on upgrading services and feels the term "second class" gives the wrong impression of its trains.

While "first class" will be retained, it wants a new name to suggest quality travel at bargain prices for what is now named "second class."

New names are being sought and though it wants to avoid comparisons with airlines, the most likely name is "economy class."

Inter City will spend £2 million in the next 18 months improving 400 coaches, with the first complete new look train going onto the Euston-Preston-Glasgow route next week. Over the following four years another £14 million will be spent to upgrade a further 900 coaches and 120 locomotives.

Pink decor

All refurbished coaches will be air conditioned and get new subdued pink decor in first class and red seats and carpets in second class. They will get new exterior livery of light and dark grey and red, with white waistline stripes.

The new advertising campaign, replacing the long running "This is the age of the train" which featured Jimmy Saville, puts the accent on BR "trying harder" to please the customer and is aimed at staff as much as at passengers.

It will draw on a range of popular singers in a tongue-in-cheek approach. The background to one advertisement will be Dusty Springfield singing: "You don't have to say you love me," and another will have Elton John with "Sorry seems to be the hardest word."

Sound tracks by Cilla Black, the Police, Diana Ross and Billy Swan will also be used.

'We're getting there'

The new slogan will be "We're getting there," which is intended to indicate that BR is making progress and improving services — something which many Southern Region and Eastern Region commuters will hotly dispute.

Mr Jim O'Brien, joint managing director of railways, said many people thought BR was in a state of decline. Nothing was further from the truth. Its trains ran the equivalent of 22 times the distance round the world every day. More stations were being opened than closed.

The theme within BR is to be "the customer come first."

"Our aim is to build customer confidence," Mr O'Brien said as unions were meeting to consider ways to disrupt the railway network in support of striking miners.

AIRLINER FIRE RISKS CAMPAIGN

By Air Cdre G. S. COOPER
Air Correspondent

A PASSENGER who smuggled a stolen paraffin lamp on to an airliner is cited by the Civil Aviation Authority as one of many who flaunt the rules by packing dangerous goods in their luggage.

In a drive to improve safety, the authority is appealing to air travellers to show greater awareness of the dangers.

The authority is becoming increasingly concerned at the number of incidents in which passengers have packed matches and other dangerous items.

British airlines have reported 26 offences in the past two years, including three in which packed matches have caught fire.

Packing matches in checked luggage is illegal, as is carrying other dangerous goods, such as fireworks, lighter fuel, corrosive acids, gas cylinders and mercury thermometers.

Case exploded

Last April a passenger's baggage in a DC-10 airliner was found emitting smoke. Five books of matches were found, of which two had ignited. A month later a box of matches ignited in baggage in the loading bay at a British airport.

One suitcase was found to contain three bottles of nitric acid and one of hydrochloric acid.

One passenger's case blew up as he approached the final gate at Heathrow's Terminal 3. He was carrying a box of toy pistol caps which ignited. Two airline staff received minor injuries.

Twelve large fireworks and 2,500 firecrackers were removed from various passengers' baggage in the hold of a Boeing 737.

Although there have so far been no serious accidents, a CAA spokesman said: "The potential danger is obvious to anyone who thinks about it."

10 pc RISE IN HOUSE PRICES FORECAST

House prices rose by 9·1 per cent. in 1984 and should climb by about 10 per cent. this year, Britain's biggest building society, the Halifax, said yesterday. Average prices at the year's end were £52,211 throughout the country but £53,182 in London.

Price rises on private houses varied regionally with a figure of 14·1 per cent. in London, 5·1 per cent. in the North West and 5·3 per cent. in Wales.

Society figures also showed that council tenants buying their homes paid on average a third of the price of private purchases. Tenants paid on average £11,800 but in London the figure was £18,750 and in Ulster £7,750.

£21·50 OFFERED FOR HERMES

Eight-year-old Aidan Platten has offered the Navy £21·50 for the 27,800 ton aircraft carrier Hermes—£14 in cash and £7·50 worth of W. H. Smith gift vouchers. "I had heard it was going to be scrapped," said Aidan of Penny Street, Portsmouth.

Rear Admiral John Warsop, Flag Officer Portsmouth, told the boy: "Hermes is a lovely ship but I'm afraid she is not mine to sell." He has offered Aidan a guided tour of the 630ft Falklands flagship, which was launched 32 years ago, and is now held in reserve. It could be ready for action in 30 days.

Bailey bridge for Burnham

Daily Telegraph Reporter

BRITISH RAIL said yesterday it was now prepared to provide a Bailey bridge to keep road traffic flowing into Burnham-on-Crouch, Essex, during this summer's tourist season.

Residents had feared that a reduction to single-lane traffic during electrification work on the rail line would strangle trade attracted by the town's sailing events. More than 2,600 people, over half the voting-age population, signed a protest petition.

The road bridge over the railway is the only traffic route into the town. Its level has to be raised to allow electrification of the line.

At first British Rail thought the bridge could simply be jacked-up, but then a survey revealed structural defects and in co-operation with Essex county council it was decided to modernise the bridge and widen carriageways and footpaths.

Work is due to begin in March and be completed by September. Under original plans the bridge would have been partially closed throughout that period, when the traders say they do 80 per cent. of their business.

MOVE TO CLEAN GANNET SITE

A 300ft high cliff which is the world stronghold for gannets and England's only nesting site for the breed is to be cleared of plastic fish netting which is killing many birds.

The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds which operates the site at Bempton, near Bridlington has arranged for the clean-up. The netting which does not rot is picked up by gannets for nesting material but traps them by becoming entangled around their legs.

SHIPYARDS REDUNDANCY MOVE ATTACKED

By PETER PRYKE Parliamentary Correspondent

A GOVERNMENT announcement that it is to drop its redundancy payments scheme for shipbuilding workers at the end of next year was denounced in the Commons last night as a "devious" means of furthering its privatisation plans.

It is proposed to sell off the warship yards by March, 1986, and Mr NORMAN LAMONT, Industry Minister of State, told MPs that the existing scheme will not be extended to workers in privatised yards.

In addition, the existing scheme for British Shipbuilders' employees would finish at the end of 1986, and it would then be up to management and trade unions to negotiate a successor scheme.

Mr JOHN SMITH, Shadow Trade and Industry Secretary, said that workers in the yards to be privatised, knowing that they were about to lose the redundancy scheme, would be encouraged to apply for redundancy before privatisation.

"Is this not a way in which the workforce is going to be reduced immediately prior to privatisation, the bill for redundancy being paid by the taxpayer, so the new private owner has a much slimmer workforce without any obligation to pay the social costs?" he said.

'Knockdown prices'

"Once again the taxpayer will have to pay the bill for social change, and the benefits will go to the new owners, probably taking over the yards at knockdown prices."

Mr Lamont's announcement was made during the second reading debate on the Shipbuilding Bill, which extends the life of the redundancy scheme for another 18 months.

Revealing that the Government had decided to abandon it after that, he pointed out that with the privatisation of the ship repair yards, the disposal of Scott Lithgow, and the coming sale of the warship yards, the public sector of shipbuilding would account for less than one-third of the industry by the end of next year.

It would have no more than about 18,000 employees.

"The Government is saying it would be inappropriate for such a small state sector to have the full panoply of a statutory scheme."

Extending the scheme to the private sector would be "expensive, bureaucratic, and wrong in principle."

The workers involved could be assimilated into an existing scheme or a new one established through negotiations between the new owners and the work-force.

Denying Mr Smith's charge that he had announced "a new twist in the privatisation saga," he said that when parts of British Shipbuilders had been privatised in the past, those affected had lost entitlement to the scheme.

What followed the ending of the statutory British Shipbuilders scheme would be a matter for management.

Ministers proposed to ask them, and that of Harland and Wolff, in consultation with their unions, to establish an appropriate successor scheme by the early autumn of 1986.

"I see no reason for concern that the work-force will end up worse off."

'Jewel in the crown'

Mr SMITH retorted that the Minister could not know that the new scheme would not be worse than the existing one.

"This seems an extremely devious proposal put forward by the Government under the apparently innocent and generous terms of this Bill."

Attacking the proposal to sell off the warship yards — "the jewel in the crown profit-wise" — he raised the prospect of the remaining merchant yards, denied cross subsidy, being closed down one after the other.

He emphasised the importance of domestic shipbuilding to service Britain's crucial shipping industry, and urged the acceptance of a national maritime strategy.

The would have to provide real incentives for the British shipping industry, and for ships to be built in British shipyards.

With the prospect of the merchant shipyards closing one after the other, it was "ludicrous folly" to hand over the warship yards and allow the others to wither.

'Encouraging signs'

Mr LAMONT said that the scheme, introduced by a Labour Government in 1978, had been a valuable tool helping change in shipbuilding in a very difficult period. Some 35,000 workers had benefited at a total cost of £150 million.

Some 7,000 people were in receipt of weekly payments. The inevitable contraction in the industry had occurred. But some "encouraging signs" had emerged within British Shipbuilders last year.

The Bill also writes off liabilities of £2,300,000 arising from a loan to Upper Clyde Shipbuilders, now liquidated.

More control for toxic materials

By WILLIAM WEEKES Parliamentary Staff

THE Government was planning to introduce stricter controls on the use and storage of toxic materials, Mr GOW, Environment Minister, indicated in the Commons yesterday.

Legislation would be introduced as soon as possible, he said, replying to questions on the use in Britain of methyl isocyanate — the chemical responsible for the deaths of at least 2,000 people in Bhopal.

Mr Gow said the chemical, which was not made in this country, was used and stored by Ciba-Geigy at its factory near Grimsby, and small quantities were stored for research purposes at four other places within the United Kingdom.

In all cases storage was subject to stringent control by the Health and Safety Executive, and before and after the Bhopal disaster officers inspected the Ciba-Geigy factory and were satisfied about the safety of the operation.

"I am advised that the disposal of this chemical is not considered to be a significant problem," added Mr Gow.

Lorry routes

He pointed out that whereas Ciba-Geigy stored a maximum of eight tons of the chemical in 40 drums, each containing 45 gallons, in Bhopal 45 tons were stored in a single container.

Mr KEN EASTHAM (Lab., Blackley) said environmental health officials hould have control over the routes taken by lorries carrying toxic materials as well as the siting of premises where such materials were stored and used.

Mr DOUGLAS HOGG (C., Grantham) called for a review of the planning laws to ensure the safety of local people when applications for the manufacture and storage of toxic materials were being considered.

Mr GOW said he could give that undertaking.

The Government had held consultations on proposals for strengthening regulations and controls, and legislation would be introduced as soon as possible.

Officers 'satisfied'

Dr JOHN CUNNINGHAM, Shadow Environment Secretary, criticised the Government for presiding over a rundown in the factories inspectorate—"the very people responsible for monitoring, checking and supervising these very important matters."

But Mr GOW told him there was no cause for public disquiet. Health and Safety Executive officers were satisfied that the Grimsby operation was being carried out with full and proper regard to safety and in strict accordance with prescribed standards.

'A SIGN OF DESPERATION' SAYS BENN

By WALTER ABURN Parliamentary Staff

MR ANTHONY WEDGWOOD BENN (Lab. Chesterfield) was yesterday refused a Commons debate on the implications of an inquqiry by the British embassy in Oslo which he said was seeking details of a Norwegian trade union's support for the NUM.

He queried what effect it would have on international relations if foreign embassies in London made similar demands on British unions.

The inquiry relating to the Norwegian National Union of General Workers made the Government a party to the dispute if the Foreign Secretary had authorised it, he said.

It was a "sign of desperation by the Government, coming on top of failure a secure a return to work, the possibility of a rail strike and the possibility of the interruption of fuel supplies."

Michelin redundancies

Mr JACK ASHLEY (Lab., Stoke on Trent S) also failed to get a debate on the redundancies at the Michelin tyre factory in his constituency which he said would raise local unemployment to more than 40 per cent.

Without urgent Government action against aggressive foreign competition our whole national manufacturing capacity would suffer and we would become a national derelict area, he said.

Mr WEATHERILL, the Speaker, ruled that neither issue warranted precedence over other business.

Calls for more work on infrastructure

By OUR PARLIAMENTARY STAFF

PRESSURE on the Government to do more to improve Britain's infrastructure of roads, housing, water and sewerage services came from both sides of the Commons yesterday.

Mr WILLIAM HAMILTON (Lab., Fife C.) said the recent report by the National Economic Development Office on the state of the national infrastructure was a "devastating" criticism of Government policies.

Almost every independent review institution was now saying that public investment was the best way of cutting unemployment, he added.

'Strong case'

Dr KEITH HAMPSON (C., Leeds, N.W.) said if oil revenues were going to be £1,000 million more than expected because of the strength of the dollar, the Government should take a more relaxed view of the way local authorities used their accumulated surpluses from the sale of council houses and other assets.

Another Conservative, Mr ROBERT McCRINDLE (Brentwood and Ongar), said that having aside arguments about unemployment, there was a strong case for additional investment in the infrastructure in the near future.

Mr GOW, Environment Minister, said the best way of reducing unemployment was by pursuing policies that would result in honest money and sound finance, and by creating an economy in which there was low inflation and high investment.

"It is just that which is occurring," he added.

Drawing attention to higher spending on roads and the water industry, Mr Gow told Mr McCrindle: "There is a programme of increasing investment in exactly the areas you describe."

Liberal MP wants vote for 16-year-olds

By VALERIE ELLIOTT Political Staff

A BILL to lower the voting age to 16 and to allow 18-year-olds to stand for Parliament was introduced in the Commons yesterday by Mr Jim Wallace (Lib., Orkney & Shetland).

Introduced under the 10-minute rule, it is the first of a series of Bills from Liberal MPs aimed at encouraging more rights and opportunities for young people.

The initiative coincides with a Liberal party campaign to attract more young people into the party.

Mr Wallace, 30, the youngest Liberal in Parliament, said last night that he did not want to force young people to make a greater contribution in the community, "but if they want to do so they should be able to do so."

He suggests that representatives of the under-16s should be allowed to sit in school governing bodies, police committees and other public authorities. He also believes that there should be an elected youth council — a forum for young people to express their views and needs.

Mr Wallace said he was particularly anxious for the voting age to be lowered to 16. He said: "Those 16-year-olds fortunate to have jobs pay tax and I firmly believe that taxation gives the right to representation."

His Bill has little chance of making progress because of lack of Parliamentary time.

RATE-CAPPING OBJECTORS 'MUST HURRY'

Rate-capped councils will have to act swiftly if they want to object to the Government's limits, Mr PATRICK JENKIN, Environment Secretary, told the Commons yesterday during Question Time.

He rejected Labour criticism of next Tuesday's deadline for objections and said that once orders setting out the limits had been laid before Parliament it would be much more difficult to secure any change.

He told Mr Chris Smith (Lab., Islington and Finsbury) that he would be "very happy" to meet representatives of the 18 rate-capped authorities. But he gave no indication that the deadline would be relaxed.

Jail pay dispute ends

By T. A. SANDROCK Crime Correspondent

A FOUR-year industrial dispute between the Government and the Prison Officers Association over meal break allowances has ended with the acceptance of an offer which is to cost the Government an estimated £17 million in back pay.

The dispute, which started in November 1980 and was suspended after three months, though still unsettled caused the Government to seek emergency powers in Parliament to hold remand and convicted prisoners.

Prisoners had to be kept in inadequate and unsuitable police cells which led to severe criticism and was mainly responsible for the use of an Army camp and partly finished prison, guarded by the Army, to ease the situation.

The payment sought was for time spent on meal breaks during a prison officer's tour of duty.

This allowance, known as the continuous duty credit, was paid in about half Britain's 120 prisons.

Payment depended on the duty scheme worked at prisons which varied according to the role of the prison, the type of prisoners, agreed overtime hours and weekend working.

The amounts of retrospective payments to prison officers, backdated to 1981, will vary from a few hundred pounds up to £5,000.

If you live in the fast lane, why just bank in the high street?

Dunbar & Company Ltd is the banking services arm of Allied Hambro. It provides specialist banking and investment services for private as well as institutional customers.

And now it's offering a specialised account which gives a level of personal service unavailable from most high street banks.

It's called the Dunbar Master Account.

It isn't just a current account, even though you get a cheque book, guarantee card and a full range of banking services.

It isn't just a gold card account, even though you get a Dunbar VISA card and, subject to normal banking considerations, an immediate overdraft facility.

It isn't just a high interest account, even though you earn high interest on credit balances.

It isn't even a combination of the three, because that wouldn't describe half of it.

The Dunbar Master Account is for those people whose financial requirements are too big or too involved for just one bank to handle. Whose needs have, in effect, overtaken their high street branch.

Which bank would pay a deposit rate of interest on balances up to £1,000, and at money market related rates on balances over £1,000?

And which would send you an itemised monthly statement, with the name of the payee as written on your cheques, and incorporating your VISA transactions?

To open a Dunbar Master Account all you need is £1,000.

For full written details of the services available write to Peter Emms, Investment Marketing Director, Dept. JEG, Allied Hambro Centre, Swindon SN1 1EL or telephone 0793 488499 (24 hours).

ENGINEERING MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS

Could you manage the development of a complex management information system within a multi-project/multi-resource environment?

Cossor Electronics, the world-leading designers of sophisticated avionics and communications systems, are already well-advanced with the implementation of a computer-based project and resource management system using ARTEMIS. This system will assist with the management of over 200 engineering projects.

In order to develop this highly advanced facility still further, we wish to make the following key appointment:

ENGINEERING MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS CONSULTANT

As the technical expert on all aspects of our ARTEMIS computer-based system, you will initially be expected to provide advice and assistance on the use and development of the current system, make important recommendations and develop the strategy for the future growth of graphics-based management information systems within the technical division.

A minimum of 3 years relevant experience is essential, with preferably a degree or HND level qualification in Computer Science or Business Studies. You should ideally have direct experience of computer-based planning techniques, as well as detailed technical knowledge through extensive 'hands on' use of management information systems. Familiarity with ARTEMIS would obviously be an advantage, but not essential.

This is a vital role in a rapidly developing and increasingly important field, and we are therefore prepared to negotiate a highly competitive salary for the right person, in addition to our normal attractive benefits package.

Please write in the first instance, or telephone for an application form, quoting ref: C73 to Liz Wood, Senior Personnel Officer, Cossor Electronics Ltd., The Pinnacles, Harlow, Essex CM19 5BB. Tel: Harlow (0279) 26862.

Thinking for tomorrow

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

where Quality Engineers can build a better life

If the thought of working in Southern California attracts you, then so it should. Because it has much to offer both the single person and the family. There's the more obvious attractions such as the countryside, the sunshine and the quality of life.

But as important are the opportunities - the chance to build a successful career at the very heart of electronics development. Especially with a company such as International Rectifier - a company at the very forefront of semiconductor technology and world leader in both integrated circuits and CMOS technology.

We're a company that's always been committed to quality and reliability. Indeed, we've built our sales on just that. We spend 30% of our R&D budget on improving techniques in this area, so that's an indication of how we value Quality Engineers and why we're seeking to recruit additional people for our Southern California world headquarters.

We're seeking people who are familiar with wafer processing and assembly methods, their effect on overall device quality & reliability, coupled with a knowledge of semiconductor materials and characteristics. It means that you're likely to have a degree in either Materials Science or Physics, have at least 2 years relevant QA experience plus some supervisory experience.

In return, we can offer the room to grow, complete relocation expenses for you and your family and the salaries you've come to expect in the heartland of electronics development.

OXTED'S NOT AS WARM BUT AS CHALLENGING

We're also seeking QA Engineers for our UK headquarters in Oxted, Surrey.

Personnel Director

U.K. Manufacturing Group

Potential earnings c.£25K including bonus, plus car

Late 30s-early 40s

West Bromwich

The creation of our new U.K. Manufacturing Group with its wide range of engineering related activities has identified the need for a Group Personnel Director.

That the person appointed will be a Graduate and already have held a senior personnel job in a substantial business reporting directly to the Managing Director will be self-evident. What may not be so apparent will be that the successful candidate will have demonstrated an appreciation of the vital contribution that the personnel discipline makes to the profit column of a successful business.

Reporting to the Chief Executive of the U.K. Manufacturing Group, and a member of that Board, the Personnel Director will be someone from a manufacturing environment who understands productivity in its widest sense, has displayed an imaginative approach to the development of payment systems, and has an indepth knowledge of trade unions.

Active rather than reactive, the person appointed will have displayed the capability of being involved in the taking of commercial decisions and whilst previous line experience, however limited, would be an advantage, the ability to persuade and influence the Managing Directors of successful operating units is essential.

This is a personnel job with a difference providing a unique blend of line and staff involvement and there will not be too many people who meet the specification.

Please write with full career history to:

Staveley Industries plc

Quality Engineer

With a demanding product introduction programme, multi-source procurement and internationally based manufacturing, our Quality Engineers face a more challenging task than most.

You will undertake detailed engineering work to ensure product quality and manufacturing efficiency, for both current and future products. In this highly active role you should be able to recognise problem areas and provide complete solutions based on detailed redesign, choice of components, manufacturing methods etc.

To meet the challenge of this role you should have at least 2 years' experience in Design, Quality or Production Engineering. A relevant degree is preferred, although your ability to achieve is viewed as being more critical than qualifications.

If you can meet the challenge, we will produce a salary and benefits package to meet your needs. A full relocation package is available for your move to Cambridge.

Please send your c.v. to John Graham, Sinclair Research Limited, 25 Willis Road, Cambridge CB1 2AQ quoting reference QE/CC or phone 0223 353204 for an application form.

Professional Management

- could you teach it to others?

Bletchley, Milton Keynes Up to £15,700

Our Management College runs a wide range of courses and seminars at all levels and in every sector of our business. This is a vital function particularly in the light of recent developments within the organisation and the challenges – and opportunities – created by the growth of Information Technology.

Basic qualities: The College is looking for men and women with good managerial experience to develop in others those skills which are the hallmark of a really good manager.

Personal skills – like the way to handle information, take decisions, manage time. Interpersonal skills – how to listen to people, interview them, negotiate with them. Group skills – how to improve collective performance, build up teams and motivate them.

Full training: We'll teach you the techniques of organising, running and maintaining courses; how to evaluate the usefulness of your training programmes. And to play your part in researching the special skills needed for our rapidly developing business. It will be highly varied, absorbing work, involving extensive travel throughout the UK.

To be considered, you'll need recent experience in management; preferably also, a degree in business studies, behavioural sciences or in some other relevant subject.

Your starting salary as a Tutor: up to £15,700, depending on age, qualifications and experience.

For further information about these appointments, please ring David Shephard on 01-404 0005 ext. 240. For an application form, please ring Angela Clark on FREEFONE 2237 or write to her at British Telecom, Room 1119, 151 Gower Street, LONDON WC1E 6BA.

Control Systems – Building Services

Already a recognised international leader in Control Systems, this rapidly expanding division has created these exciting Midlands based opportunities for:

Technical Sales Manager

Hotel Control Systems Salary neg. + Car

To sell micro processor based access control systems either individually or on a turnkey project basis to the modern hotel industry. He/she will preferably, but not essentially, have some previous knowledge of the hotels market but will certainly be able to demonstrate a proven sales track record. The ability to co-ordinate sales staff activity will be important, together with the individually disciplined and professional sales aptitudes to take advantage of the career advancement prospects that this excellent new product can offer. Ref: 82/205

Field Sales Engineers

Environmental Control Systems Salary neg. + Car

Selling to building contractors, specifiers and direct customers, he/she will promote both high-tech integrated systems and conventional low technology building services. Typically this will cover applications in controlled heating, ventilating and security, so the ideal candidate will have an M & E or Building Services background and now be working in a selling role. This position offers an excellent platform for sales growth of an established first class product in a competitive field. Ref: 82/206

Systems Development Engineers

Advanced Security Systems

Expansion has now created these additional opportunities which will offer wide ranging involvement in the development of highly advanced electronic security control systems from prototype design and build through to commissioning.

Experience in software configuration is essential and a working knowledge of networking and/or hardware will be an advantage.

In return he/she will be joining an exciting and energetic team in a profitable high growth company offering excellent development prospects. Ref: 82/193A

All the above positions carry relocation assistance to an attractive Midlands location and interested candidates should send full career/salary history details in confidence to John Wanklin or telephone Isobel Grundy for an application form quoting appropriate reference number.

General Manager (Switches & Keyboards)

Cambridge Excellent salary, car, etc.

Our Client, part of a major successful British Electronics Group, is a £3.5m t/o manufacturer and marketer of switches and keyboards, and one of the companies nominated by the Group as having very significant growth potential. A dynamic General Manager is now being sought to ensure the achievement of this growth.

The person we are seeking will probably already be in a general management, or in a demanding sales or marketing role, in the switches and keyboards industry, or, perhaps, with a major user of these items. If you are such a person and are looking for a new challenge with even further career progression opportunities, with a very successful Group, this could be the right post for you.

Knowledge of membrane switches would be an advantage as would a degree, and an age within the 30 to 45 bracket.

The benefits package is flexible, provided you have the right experience and are the person to do full justice to the post.

VAT CONSULTANTS

Join our expanding specialist team

Price Waterhouse is a leading international firm of chartered accountants with a large and expanding tax practice.

We have an established indirect taxes practice, operating in both customs and excise duties and VAT consultancy, which offers our clients a comprehensive advisory service in these specialised areas of taxation.

Due to its success and our plans for continued growth, we now have further opportunities for those who wish to specialise as VAT consultants.

You should have either an accountancy qualification or HM Customs and Excise training, probably at Higher Executive Officer level. You must have VAT experience, and some knowledge of customs and excise duties would also be an advantage.

You will be responsible for consultancy assignments, ranging from large international companies to small businesses, and will deal directly with clients frequently at senior management level. You will develop a thorough practical knowledge of VAT by working alongside our existing team of specialists and will gain exposure to the complex financial transactions of our clients in a wide range of industries. You will be expected to liaise extensively with other parts of the PW practice and to participate in detailed negotiations with HM Customs and Excise.

We are looking for men and women, aged 25 to 35, with initiative and a sound understanding of business operations.

The positions, based in London, offer an attractive salary, BUPA and a contributory pension and life assurance scheme. A car will be provided for those appointed at managerial level. Career opportunities with early promotional prospects are excellent.

Opportunities in Engineering Management

Watney Combe Reid & Co. Ltd. are seeking to strengthen their professional engineering management teams at both the Isleworth Packaging and Process Centre and the Stag Brewery, Mortlake.

Section Engineer — up to £14,000

Based at Isleworth the successful candidate will report directly to the Chief Engineer and have full responsibility for a team of 8 shift engineers/supervisors and a maintenance craftforce of 66. This includes:

- handling industrial relations, safety at work requirements, grievance and disciplinary matters,
- developing and managing all plant maintenance systems on site,
- preparation and control of engineering maintenance budgets.

It is unlikely that anyone aged under 28 will have the necessary experience for this position.

Engineering Shift Managers — c £12,500 including shift pay

Responsibilities include controlling a multi-discipline shift craft workforce which is involved in problem-solving on all aspects of site engineering, and acting as the senior engineering manager outside normal working hours.

Assistant Line Engineer — £7,300 – £10,000

Reporting to the Senior Line Engineer the successful candidate will be responsible for the day-to-day engineering control of a section of the packaging operation. This is an ideal career development opportunity for a graduate with up to 2 years' experience.

A chemical, mechanical or electrical engineering qualification at degree or equivalent level is a requirement for all vacancies. As these positions include a substantial element of man management, candidates must be self reliant and able to demonstrate highly developed leadership and communication skills.

There is a comprehensive benefits package which includes generous relocation expenses where necessary.

Application forms and further details may be obtained from Jenny Morris, Manpower Resourcing Manager, Watney Combe Reid & Co. Ltd., 14 Mortlake High Street, London SW14 8JD. Tel: 01-876 3434, ext. 331.

Two key opportunities for engineering professionals

Automotive Components — City of York

Due to an increase in our engineering activity, Armstrong Patents Co. Ltd., one of Europe's leading automotive shock absorber designers and manufacturers, is seeking experienced Engineering staff for the following new positions

Applications Engineer
Aftermarket

This post calls for a self starting, academically qualified engineer with a keen, commercial awareness. We envisage that the successful candidate will be in the 25/38 age bracket and may have already been exposed to the pressures of the Automotive industry and preferably will have had some design and development experience with automotive components. Drive and diplomacy are necessary qualities to achieve the liaison with our manufacturing and marketing divisions, both in the United Kingdom and in Spain which will be essential to provide an efficient catalogue of new applications — worldwide, establish market sizes and determine supply sources. If you feel you have the right experience and are prepared to dedicate yourself to an organisation determined to succeed let us hear from you.

Development Engineer

A first class mechanical engineer, preferably qualified to degree standard, is required to control the day to day conduct of established, current product development and its support needs in accordance with pre-determined time scales in order to ensure our customers' approval. The successful candidate, preferably in the 25/38 age bracket and perhaps already experienced in the field of Hydraulic shock absorbers, will be based initially at our York Engineering Department for a period of up to three years before being transferred to our Manufacturing plant in Spain, or some other overseas location for a tour of some two to three years. It follows, therefore, that you should be either reasonably fluent in Spanish or prepared to make yourself so by the time such a transfer becomes imminent.

Both posts are open to male and female candidates. We offer competitive starting salaries, usual benefits packages and relocation expenses where appropriate. Please write with full career and personal information to Mr. S. Dunkerley, Director of Personnel, Armstrong Patents Co. Ltd., Gibson Lane, Melton, North Ferriby, North Humberside.

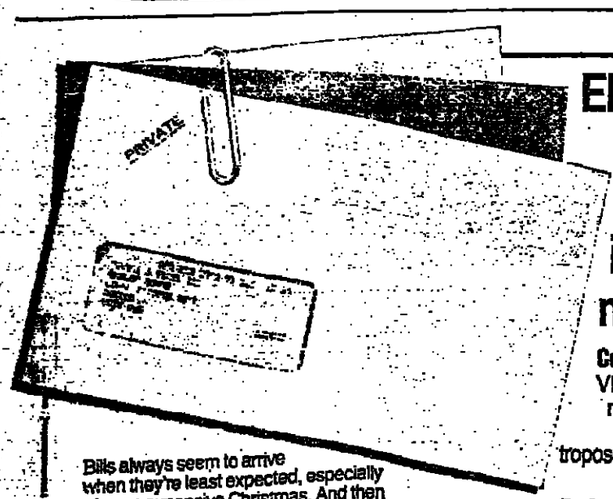
THE PERSON filling this vacancy should hold a good Honours degree or equivalent in physics, electronics or an allied engineering subject. Knowledge of acoustics, communications and signal processing would be an advantage. An ability to liaise effectively with senior technical staff is desirable.

THE APPOINTMENT would be as a Higher Scientific Officer (£8,735-£11,339) or Scientific Officer (£7,209-£9,453) depending on qualifications and experience. For an application form write to:

The Recruitment Officer,
HM Government Communications Centre,
Hanslope Park, Milton Keynes MK19 7BH.

Completed forms should be returned by 21st February 1985.



ELECTRONICS ENGINEERS

At certain times around £24,000 tax-free in Saudi Arabia seems more attractive than ever.

Bills always seem to arrive when they're least expected, especially after an expensive Christmas. And then not just one, but a whole flurry at the same time. It's the same for everyone. Or is it?

Not if you work for IAL. We've been retained by a major Saudi Arabian organisation to find the key technical staff who can help the Royal Saudi Air Force achieve full self sufficiency in operating and maintaining the Kingdom's own air defence system.

We are now looking for electronics engineers with experience in the following disciplines.

Communications
VHF, UHF, SHF, radio and radio links including troposcatter systems. Ref. G001/01.

Radar
3D surveillance and mobile radars: airfield radars. Ref.G001/02.

Data handling and display
On line real time processing. Ref. G001/03.

Navaids
ILS, TACAN, Vor-Tac and ground-to-air comms systems. Ref. G001/04.

You'll need a degree, HNC or equivalent, with 5 years post-qualification experience.

Apart from the tax-free salary of around £24,000 which includes an end of contract bonus, there are other attractive benefits which include free accommodation, return flights to the UK, life assurance and medical cover, as well as accompanied status if required.

With the tax-free salaries we're offering, your financial worries will fade away and become distant memories.

PER MANAGEMENT SELECTION

Ferranti Scottish Group

Airborne Displays Systems

Ferranti in Scotland has a fine reputation for electronics engineering excellence and the ability to fulfil its potential through rapid, sustained growth.

Our new Airborne Displays Group shows why. We have moved into a complementary area to our traditional specialisation and already taken orders from all around the world.

This expansion and establishment as a separate business unit within the group has created new and challenging positions for the following professionals:

Head of Head up Displays

The prime objective of this post will be to create a successful product, through technical skill, effective control of resources and initiative.

Day to day this will involve financial forecasting, analysis of marketing information, monitoring current contracts including customer liaison and the formation and supervision of project teams.

Extensive expertise is required for this post, which is based in Edinburgh but involves worldwide travel. The successful candidate will most probably have a degree in an engineering subject with more than three years experience in a design function.

Candidates, probably employed at present at a junior manager level in a head up displays or aircraft navigation and displays systems department, will be aged between 30 and 40. In addition, proven leadership and management qualities are required ideally combined with a sound knowledge of financial functions.

In reply please quote reference number HUD/1/DT.

Senior Maintainability Engineer

This professional will play a vital role in shaping customer attitudes by ensuring maintainability is built-in to the groups' products.

Day to day activities will include defining test equipment, collecting design data, setting up of testing methods, and liaising with production departments to ensure smooth transition into manufacturing of maintainability features.

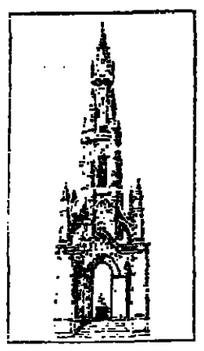
Candidates will probably be currently employed in the RAF, Ministry of Defence or industry with a leading company in military avionic systems development and manufacture.

An HNC, HND or BSc in electrical or electronic engineering, or HM Forces equivalent is essential. Around 10 years minimum wide ranging experience of aircraft systems test procedures and methods, especially relating to cockpit displays, is vital. Ideally aged between 30 and 48, candidates must be committed, energetic, analytical and meticulous. A knowledge of Spanish would be an asset.

In reply please quote reference number SME/2/DT.

Salaries in both instances are extremely competitive and benefits include a very generous relocation package, available to those who currently reside over 20 miles from our Edinburgh sites.

Comprehensive applications, in writing only please, quoting appropriate reference number to:- Mrs J McQugh, Recruitment Manager, Ferranti plc, Crewe Toll, Ferry Road, Edinburgh EH5 2XS.



FERRANTI
Selling technology

Dow is the world's fifth largest chemical company. In Europe, the Company employs 12,000 people, with 60 sales offices, 20 manufacturing sites, and has a sales turnover in excess of £3 billion a year. Dow produces the raw materials upon which virtually every known modern industry you can name depends in some way. So Industrial Sales with Dow is one of the most exciting and challenging environments you can hope to find. For those who have the talent and technical background, the opportunities and personal rewards are outstanding.

We're looking for really bright graduates, with a couple of years' industrial experience, who'd like to take up the challenge we're offering to join our sales organisation in a field sales role. Or you could start by spending a year or so in inside sales in one of our 3 UK Sales Offices, which will give you an understanding of our commercial organisation. In either role, you will receive the required training, both on-the-job and through specialised courses. In our small team environment, there's an unusual degree of scope for personal achievement, which you will find we're swift to recognise and reward.

Your long term aim may be to work abroad. Those who demonstrate sufficient ability can achieve this goal in Sales, Marketing or other functions.

Personality, of course, will play a key role in your development, and you will need to demonstrate drive and enthusiasm to make your mark. Knowledge of another European language is preferable. Salaries are highly competitive, geared to performance and are accompanied by excellent benefits, including pension scheme, medical insurance, accident insurance and relocation assistance where necessary.

THE RIGHT CHEMISTRY FOR A SALES CAREER WITH DOW

UNPARALLELED IN AUTOMATIC TESTING

Northern Telecom is a leader in telecommunications technology. The largest producer of fully digital switching and transmission systems in the world, our products are used in more than 90 countries.

The LRS-100 line testing system represents one of our most ambitious and exciting advances. A network of state-of-the-art measurement equipment controlled by a central computer, it takes automatic line testing into the next generation by providing a fully integrated automatic testing and fault analysis facility, including nightly analysis.

These are senior positions within our new operation, based in Maidenhead. The LRS-100's planned development throughout the UK presents excellent opportunities for technical and career progression.

In building highly effective teams, we are particularly looking for a background in line testing, ideally involving DEC equipment.

TECHNICAL SUPPORT MANAGER
An influential role with full responsibility for a specialist team involved in all aspects of the LRS-100's support, from commissioning and test to post-sales activity. A degree-level qualification in electrical/electronics engineering or equivalent must be supported by sound experience of public telephone exchanges and computer systems.

PROJECT ENGINEERS
Working throughout the UK, you will liaise with our customer: manage and co-ordinate the installation and commissioning, and provide acceptance testing of the LRS-100s. Calling for at least three years' experience of managing a computer-based project, your knowledge of project planning and scheduling must include PERT and CPM. A background in telephone networks and telephone repair is ideal.

CUSTOMER SUPPORT ENGINEER
You will be involved in all aspects of the support and maintenance of LRS systems, travelling throughout the UK. Your experience will include three years' computer-based systems support and preferably a background in telephone repair operation and exchange maintenance.

APPLICATIONS ENGINEER
This is a wide ranging role covering pre-installation engineering, dimensioning and preparation of installation documentation. To succeed you will need sound experience of provisioning systems and telephone exchange and inter-exchange trunking. A working understanding of interfacing between test circuits and data circuits would be particularly advantageous.

PRODUCT MANAGER
In managing the development of the LRS-100 as a first choice subscriber product, tasks will span defining overall strategy, identifying new feature/product opportunities and liaising frequently with both customer and our design managers. Industrial marketing experience, preferably from a repair services environment, must be supported by a working knowledge of telephone network operation and software development.

COMMERCIAL ADMINISTRATOR
All commercial aspects of administration will be under your control including quotation preparation, order processing and contract tracking. This will involve liaising with our customer's contract personnel, working closely with our sales and applications engineering teams. Computer-based quotations and contracts experience is essential, and knowledge of telephone network operation is desirable.

We are also keen to hear from Commissioning Engineers with main exchange experience

Northern Telecom operates a comprehensive salary plan which rewards and recognises an individual contribution to the company. The negotiable salaries are highly attractive, full training will be provided (in some cases in North America), and an extensive benefits package includes generous assistance with relocation costs.

To apply please telephone or send your CV to Colin Luker, Recruitment Manager, Northern Telecom plc, Langton House, Market Street, Maidenhead, Berkshire SL6 8BE. Telephone Maidenhead (0628) 35031.

Operations Director Packaging

Corrugated Products Limited is a highly successful independent company which manufactures an exciting range of corrugated display packaging and bag-in-box systems to market sectors with rapid growth potential.

As part of our corporate strategy for further expansion and diversification of our activities we are seeking a top executive, who can demonstrate a record of management achievement in our industry, to:

- Provide direction to the company's efforts in product development and the installation or acquisition of new manufacturing facilities
- Reinforce our reputation for high quality products and customer service through technical innovation in our manufacturing processes
- Plan and implement a programme of cost reduction based on improvements in materials utilization and development, manufacturing efficiency, value engineering, and distribution

The successful candidate will have an effective combination of flair, practical experience and engineering skills, and will probably have industrial relations experience and be in his or her early forties. The capability to contribute quickly, and the confidence and authority to lead a highly motivated and energetic management team are essential qualities.

This key post, which will lead to a Board appointment within a year, commands a correspondingly high remuneration package comprising a basic salary well in excess of £20,000, plus incentives, executive car, generous relocation costs to Rugby and the fringe benefits associated with a top management position in a substantial organisation.

Applications, which will be treated in confidence, should include full details pertinent to the above requirements, and should be addressed to: The Managing Director, Corrugated Products Limited, Butlers Leap, Clifton Road, Rugby, Warks.

PRODUCTION ENGINEERING MANAGER

A KEY ROLE IN ELECTRONICS MANUFACTURE FOR THE FUTURE

Herts Salary Negotiable

Our client, a lively subsidiary of a Billion Pound group, a world leader in the design and manufacture of highly advanced electronic equipment has an outstanding record of sustained growth.

To further this expansion and maintain its presence at the forefront of technology our client is now seeking an innovative production engineering specialist to head up a function of around 40 staff, at one of its major sites, and lead the initiative in the introduction of new production techniques and the implementation of a major capital investment programme.

Candidates must be able to demonstrate the ability to develop further to general or corporate management level and it is unlikely that those aged below 30 or above 40 will have both the experience and future potential sought for this key position. They will also be able to demonstrate successful achievement in such areas as CAD/CAM, surface mounted technology, automated PCB assembly and test, and flexible manufacturing systems in a batch production environment.

To discuss your background and future career possibilities, please call David Carter on (0494) 25128 or write to him in strictest confidence quoting ref: 1110/DT.

SALES PROFESSIONALS

Cellular communications is set to revolutionise the working lives of thousands of key decision makers. When you think how important effective communications are in today's fast moving commercial environment and consider how many people spend large parts of their day outside the office, clearly mobile communications has a market of enormous potential.

This month will see the launch of the sophisticated technology of cellular radio. This will be so superior to existing car telephones that, by the end of the decade, a market of over £500 million will have been established.

An untapped market of £500 million–

With some of the most prestigious names in the City investing in this company, our client plans to launch their range of products initially in the London area and rapidly followed by the rest of the UK.

They are looking now for a small number of high calibre sales professionals to help them establish a prominent market position. People who, with the experience of at least six years in the office automation, telecomms or computer fields, will recognise the enormous scope of this greenfield situation. Individuals who're looking for a groundfloor opportunity and have the ability and incentive to participate in this exciting new business.

Prospects, naturally, are outstanding, and the income for the successful men or women will be close to £30,000. Our client is offering an extremely generous package overall including a car and relocation assistance where required. But to earn it, you really will have to show us the power and persuasiveness of your selling ability.

So, for the opportunity to tap a market of £500 million, contact us right now. Either telephone Andrew Wilkinson at Moxon Dolphin & Kerby Ltd., 178-202 Great Portland St., London W1N 5TB (tel. 01-631 4411), for a confidential discussion or, alternatively, send him a comprehensive CV, quoting reference number 2519.

Regional Sales Manager

Birmingham Area Excellent Salary and Benefits Package

Ambitious diversification within Bekaert, a highly successful multi-million pound international group of companies, has given rise to the formation of a company, Computer Identics, to enter into the field of Barcode Scanners, Decoders, Data Collection and Control Systems for a wide range of industrial applications. Expansion into the U.K. market creates the need for an outstanding sales orientated engineer capable of starting and developing business from scratch.

Reporting to the International Sales Manager based in Belgium, you will have full responsibility for the U.K. market. This will cover a wide range of sales activities from direct selling and negotiating at board level to creation and motivation of a distributor network. Self motivation and entrepreneurial ability coupled with the drive and interpersonal skills to ensure the success of this new role are, of course, essential.

Educated to degree level in an engineering based subject, you will have had several years' experience of sales of electronic hardware and software products to OEM's and through distributors.

Like the challenge, the rewards are high and, in addition to an excellent salary, you will be provided with a company car and will receive a benefits package of the type associated with a large multinational company.

Applicants, male or female, who feel they have the requisite skills, experience and qualities should apply with full career details to Stephen Jackson, Mercuri Urval Limited, 1 College Road, Harrow, Middlesex HA1 1YZ, quoting reference no. 501.

c. £20,000 plus car

Hertz Car Leasing, a specialist organisation within Hertz Europe, has recently embarked on an ambitious growth plan. Through new commercial strategies we expect a substantially increased market share.

Innovative systems will be fundamental to the success of the division, as will the maintenance of a high level of user support, which is why we are establishing an in-house systems development group.

Based at Hertz Europe's Management Systems and Services Centre in Hounslow, the initial task of the group will be to define and implement the systems needed to meet the demands of operating divisions in the UK, Holland and Italy.

The Systems Manager, reporting directly to the Director, Management Services for Hertz Europe, will, as head of a small team, initiate a substantially new development direction involving decision support and DP systems, and assume responsibility for existing systems support in a minicomputer environment. The role will involve you in formulating a new systems strategy and in selecting the development and computer tools required for its implementation.

Experience should include non-procedural as well as high level languages and database products in a minicomputer/microcomputer environment, with a knowledge of Hewlett Packard 3000 series or Texas Instruments 990 minis a distinct advantage.

The successful candidate will probably be a graduate, or professionally qualified, in the age range 30-40. He or she will be able to demonstrate significant experience of leading skilled, multi-disciplinary staff, and will possess above average communications skills, both oral and written.

The usual large company benefits will apply and opportunities will arise for travel to Europe and the USA.

Please write, with full details, to: Rita Hales, Personnel Manager, Hertz Europe Limited, Hertz House, 700 Bath Road, Cranford, Middlesex, TW5 9TW. Telephone: 01-759 2244.

GRADUATE SALES OPPORTUNITY

SALES PLANNING ASSISTANT

Sunbury-on-Thames

CC Soft Drinks is a subsidiary of The Coca-Cola Company: a progressive, dynamic organisation totally committed to growth. The brand portfolio includes Coca-Cola, Diet Coke, Quatro and Club.

An opportunity now exists for a resourceful, enthusiastic person to provide assistance in our busy sales operations department. Initial duties will include collating sales data and maintaining records. The main role, however, will be undertaking special projects within the overall sales department, presenting results and subsequent recommendations to senior sales management. The successful applicant will, therefore, gain a thorough insight into the elements determining the success of a sales operation and, indeed, the success of the whole company.

Preferably educated to degree or HND level in Economics or Business Studies, you should be numerate and articulate with the first-class communications skills needed to liaise at all levels. Drive, mobility and commitment will be essential.

This is the first step on a clearly defined career path, ultimately leading to sales management. An attractive salary will be supported by generous benefits. Applicants wishing to apply should enclose a copy of their CV and support their application by submitting a synopsis of no more than 1,000 words on the following topic.

"Discuss the importance of departmental interactions, with specific reference to the sales department; to the overall performance of an organisation operating within the FMCG market."

Applications should be sent to Pauline Garrett, Personnel Assistant, CC Soft Drinks, Club House, Hanworth Road, Sunbury-on-Thames, Middlesex TW16 5DF, to arrive by Monday, 28th January, 1985, at the latest.

THE ARTS

MUSIC / The Stockhausen sound

STOCKHAUSEN has come of age. Or rather our relationship to his music has, at any rate to some of it. Such was the lingering effect throughout the first of six concerts presented by B B C Radio Three at the Barbican. Exclusively devoted to his music, the series is entitled "Music and Machines."

Only the night before, one had experienced the familiar frustration when in a film of Stockhausen's 1972 I C A lectures, the prophet of total serialisition and subsequently of indeterminacy illustrated his disregard of reality by insisting that, say, a Beethoven symphony would retain its identity if contracted to last just one second.

How delightful, then, to find Stockhausen in his live pre-concert introduction comparing himself to a hunter tracking down novel sounds.

And indeed, it was this flair for acoustic magic that enthralled the ear as soon as the B B C's Symphony Orchestra under Peter Eötvös embarked on 'Mixtur," composed in 1964 but heard here in the chamber version made three years later for 31 players. This live-electronic work, where what reaches the ear are the orchestral sounds merging with their electronic transformations, hence the title, prove, that Stockhausen was born into the right part of the century.

The fascination of these 20 short episodes or "Moments" resides in the colouristic inventiveness, precisely calculated and brilliantly realised on this occasion with the compser in control of the ultimate sound projection. It far surpassed in plasticity and subtlety what I remember from 1967 Darmstadt, though also attendance in the hall is of the essence, since both on the D G recording and on the tape I made of the live broadcast much of the acoustic character specific to this medium tends to get lost.

There followed the 1961 Klavierstuck X. Its 23 minutes were dazzlingly played by Bernhard Wambach, suitably equipped with mittens to protect the back of his hands, during the orgies of glissando in between the delicate poetic figurations. Quite often the cataracts of sound produced by many a violent elbow thrust are followed by rests of unprecedented duration, and it was hard to believe that the crowded hall should wait motionless throughout such silences.

Admittedly, the placing of microphones behind the piano lid—a new feature—served to prolong the pedalling effect throughout, though here again this proved less effective over the air when of, say, 30 seconds the last nine would transmit nothing audible. I only hope listeners were not deceived into switching off, as did thousands of them when the piece was first broadcast in this country without that resonance-prolonging device.

The concert ended with another performance of "Mixtur," but played in reverse order. Significantly, the experience was much the same, confirming that its sense resides in the sound, not in the sequence.

Peter Stadlen

Marini Trombone Ensemble

AFTER the novelty of Monday's solo trombone recital at the Wigmore Hall, there was more music for the slightly less unusual combination of four trombones at the Purcell Room on Tuesday night in the second pair of concerts of the Park Lane Group's annual Young Artists series.

Not all the pieces presented by the Manchester-based Marini Trombone Ensemble were of equal interest, but they had been well chosen to illustrate their versatility, the deftness and corporate precision of their playing, their seriousness and their humour.

A new soberly crafted, if rather protracted Sonata by Edward Gregson produced a neatly plotted variety of texture and nuance from its five contrasted and interleaved blocks of material. And if another new piece, "Incantations" by Michael Maxwell, was undistinguished in its ideas, it at least had the virtue of brevity. So too had a seven

The pianist Tuija Hakkila, seemed unwilling to go much farther than an overtly self-assured dexterity in music by Lutoslawski and Debussy and the Sonata of George Benjamin, composed in 1977-78 and a remarkably powerful, bigboned work for a composer who was then in his 18th year.

Until she unaccountably omitted its final page, the flautist Jadwiga Kotnowska conveyed a much more subtle, more refined sensitivity of response to the more familiar music of Benjamin's "Flight" for unaccompanied flute. Together with her pianist Barbara Halska, she also brought to the mixed Korean and Western modes of Isang Yun's "Garak" and to the controlled delirium of the Boulez Sonatina an instantly convincing elegance and virtuosity, and a distinction of expressive line that she eloquently carried through into the Ballade of Frank Martin.

Robert Henderson

THEATRE / Gateway to the Fringe

AH, those old intimate revues! Our fathers are always talking of the devastatingly smart little-theatre shows before the war, when Hermione Gingold was a girl and you only had to mention Beverley Nichols's name to win a reputation for wit.

To give an idea of what they were really like, Islington's King's Head is staging "Meet Me at the Gate," a nostalgic pot-pourri of songs from revues seen 50 years ago at the now vanished Gate Theatre, just off the Strand.

It may be said quietly that the best of such shows also include sketches, and dancing of a high standard. But in its modest way the present show tilts neatly at windmills whose sails are still turning. Tart social comment predated "Beyond the Fringe."

Diana Morgan, the best of the lyricists, has a deadly poison dart for the effeminate men who design clothes to make women look hideous. She discovers in her gushing "Kensington Girls," pre-war Sloane Rangers pathetically giggling about their forthcoming awful marriages.

Sardonically she notes Fleet Street's inane cult of youth, and can drop a sympathetic tear for the gin-sodden bar-fly of Chelsea, and the old women who tyrannise waiters in dying south-coast hotels. All these are still with us.

Lynda Bellingham, Diana Martin and Gaynor Sinclair bring freshness and charm to those old numbers. The biggest laughs are won by Robert Glenister's ditty about a yodelling goldfish, and for Graham Hoadly's skit on a languid ballet-dancer: "I do a dance with a bubbil/Which is really a big balloon."

But the material would justify calling the revue "Sweet and Sad." And the sadness becomes grisly when a war siren sounds for the coming of 1939, and the jesters quip about making rooms gas-proof. Playtime will not last very long.

They say television has killed the genre. I wonder. If New York can devise long-running shows of the kind, with songs no more pertinent or impertinent than these, London could surely do the same.

John Barber

Some of these reviews appeared in later editions yesterday.

Kathy Healy 15, the youngest principal dancer with London Festival Ballet as Louise in "The Nutcracker".

DANCE / Little Miss Sugar Plum

ICE SKATING and film acting are unorthodox early pursuits for a classical dancer but Katherine Healy, the little American ballerina who took the leading role in "The Nutcracker" with London Festival Ballet at the Festival Hall on Tuesday night, has already appeared with John Currie and with Mary Tyler Moore as well as being awarded a junior first class distinction at the Varna Ballet Concourse of 1983.

At 15 she is the youngest of the promising newcomers to the London scene—although fractionally older than Toumanova and Baronova were in the 1930s—and she looks it: petite, round-faced and snub-nosed, with an eager and occasionally touching freshness in her acting. Cheryl Liss had her work cut out to be convincing as the coltish younger sister of the story.

Healy's potential was most clearly visible in her Sugar Plum variation. She took the stage for it with a justified assurance and gave a delightfully accurate and well phrased account of its every inflection.

In the pas de deux she was less suited, although her feeling for the choreography and music was evident. Her arms and hands were often insufficiently controlled and she owed much to the considerate and helpful partnering of Patrick Armand.

Armand, a recent Festival recruit from Ballet Theatre Français of Nancy, has an exciting virtuoso command in his solos, giving them an enjoyable aroour and fluency.

Originally trained by Roland Petit, he is a further indication of the present formidable standard of French classicists. His rhythm and impulsion in sequences of leaps and turns were admirably sustained.

In the Spanish Dance, Lucia Truglia and Matz Skoog showed how a short, run-of-the-mill duet can be given distinction by the finesse and brilliance of its expressive artists. Craig Randolph had good bounce and elevation in the role of Fritz and Mary McKendry dominated the Snowflakes with a charmingly crystal-clear precision.

K. Sorley Walker

Mysteries of Pilobolus

EVER since its first visit to this country, the Pilobolus Dance Theatre from the United States has impressed by the fascinating mystery of the images it projects: but the current programme, which opened on Tuesday night at Sadler's Wells Theatre, goes far beyond any previous programme shown here.

"Bonsai" begins with four dancers arranging their bodies in such a way as to suggest one or more Japanese miniaturised trees; this seems an unlikely theme for choreography, but the arms of the dancers move with a strange beauty, somehow translating the tree-image into dance. Then their bodies create even stranger images, such as that of a big caterpillar moving across the stage: a caterpillar which is both grotesque and beautiful.

As in all the pieces, the choreography is collective, but Moses Pendleton is chiefly responsible; and the music by two Japanese composers Hisao Tanabe and Osamu Kitajima skilfully blends together ancient Noh sounds with modern rock music.

"What grows in Huygen's window" is very different. The four dancers wear big red hats hiding their faces, and very wide capes; under the capes they hold rods fitted with hands—just visible beyond the edge of the capes—and so they create figures with arms much longer than their legs and bodies. Their movements have a wild humour, and this humour reaches a climax when the dancers' heads emerge from where one would expect their knees to be—and confront the hats resting on the knees. Here the witty choreography is chiefly by Jonathan Wolken.

All six dancers take part in "Day Two," with the almost-nude bodies of the dancers looking strangely beautiful as they move through a wide variety of moods. In the most striking of the scenes, pairs of men carry rods, and the two women dance in space, hanging from the rods or balancing elegantly. For a curtain call, the dancers slide elegantly across the stage at high speed, aided by the water now covering the stage: a perfect ending to the programme.

Fernau Hall

TELEVISION / Sing along with Arthur Scargill

BROADCASTING executives keep commissioning documentaries from Kenneth Loach and then keep being surprised that the result is not impartial enough for the controlling authorities. It should be obvious by now that he has a political position, and that if he has any notion about balance it is that television as a whole is balanced against his friends of the hard or romantic Left.

Last night he asked Which Side Are You On? (C-4) and proclaimed, through the assertions, songs and verses of striking miners and their wives, and very selective use of news footage, that he is on the side of Scargillism.

The classily made LWT film, with typically evocative camera work by Chris Menges, was intended for "The South Bank Show" and ITV. It was rescued by the junior channel, which has satisfied the authorities by scheduling an "Opinions Special" for next Sunday, where Jimmy Reid will attack Scargillism with all the fervour of a reformed former Glasgow Communist.

This is hardly necessary. The Loach message collapsed naturally under the weight of its own contradictions. It sang that mining was a nasty and dangerous job and that it should be sustained as a social benefit for the mining communities of this and future generations. It held that the present strike, teaching the nation how to use less coal, would safeguard this future.

The appalling conditions endured by the labouring classes around the turn of the century did not much concern Arnold Bennett as he dwelt on the entrepreneurial end of his local community and confused the world by turning the six towns of the potteries into five. Money, and its alliance with Wesleyan Methodism, is the main concern of humourless Anna of the Five Towns (BBC-2), dramatised as a four-part serial by John Harvey.

After an excellent credit sequence, in which painting and music summoned the atmosphere of time and place, there could have been more such visual adventure evoking the communal backdrop so important in the book. But the locations were carefully chosen and observed by director Martyn Friend, along with the other well-dressed conventions of the classic serial. Linsey Beauchamp in the title role, a much better daughter than her miser father deserves, is so fervently right that I was mostly blinded to a sense of plod about the acting as a whole.

Also looking back is Colin Thomas's The Dragon Has Two Tongues (C4), billed by HTV as a 13-part history of the Welsh. Part one mostly consisted of looking back at Wynford Vaughan-Thomas and Gwyn Williams, the rival on-screen resenters, posturing in a variety of uncomfortable locations and conducting a whimsical disputation about when and where their tribe began.

Returning to the present Thames brought forward two new series. Stanley Price's Moving (ITV) is a six-part expansion of his stage comedy, with Penelope Keith and Ronald Pickup playing themselves as a couple plagued by the problems of house buying and selling. The absence of audience laughter was restful but made it hard to tell what was supposed to be funny.

More promising is Lytton's Diary (ITV), a knowing six-part inside view by Ray Connolly of a Fleet Street gossip column. Whether or not the reference to an Australian proprietor and the mannerisms of a Scottish editor are linked with present luminaries of the street of shame, the newspaper office looks uncomfortably realistic and Peter Bowles in the name part has clearly observed well.

WHEN IT'S OVER, YOU'LL FEEL YOU'VE BEEN THROUGH A KIDNAPPING YOURSELF.

It's what follows a terrorist kidnapping that makes it the most dramatic of crimes.

The psychological strain soon takes its relentless toll on all involved. The victims, relatives, police and negotiators. Not least the kidnappers themselves.

The perfect subject for a major new drama series, 'The Price.' A contemporary thriller set in Ireland and England starring Peter Barkworth.

'The Price' is heavily based on real life experiences so you'll find it authentic as well as gripping.

Episode One starts tonight at 9.30 and is shown again on Sunday at 9.15.

It'd be a crime to miss it.

KASPAROV ON VERGE OF WIN

By B. H. WOOD Chess Correspondent

GARY KASPAROV adjourned the 40th world championship match game last night in a winning position. He has an extra well-supported passed pawn which should certainly win the game.

A win from this game against Anatoli Karpov would leave the score 5-2, and while it still seems hardly conceivable that Kasparov could win the match the whole atmosphere of the contest is changing.

Observers report that Karpov, playing black, appears to be showing signs of strain. The 40th game continued the curious double-bluff of the previous two with exactly the same opening played by each in turn.

In the 38th Kasparov had diverged on move 22. Now Karpov diverged on the 13th with a strange move which offered to swap back knight and bishop leaving drawish opposite-colour bishops.

The game will be resumed this afternoon Thursday. The position on adjournment.

Tinplate toy chair goes for £1,000

By ALISON BECKETT Art Sales Correspondent

DEMAND for tinplate toys continued at Phillips in London yesterday where a little Man-Da-Rin sedan chair by Lehmann estimated at about £330 fetched £1,000.

Other highlights in the toy and railway model auction, which totalled £21,820, included a 12-inch long Bing four-seat open tourer finished in cream with red seats. Even without its windscreen and two tyres it realised £2,200.

CAP BADGES

Model frigate

At Wallis and Wallis of Lewes, Sussex, the National Maritime Museum purchased a colourful collection of 562 naval and maritime embroidered cap badges from all over the world for £2,050.

For £525 in the same arms and militaria sale the Naval Museum at Portsmouth acquired a model of the American frigate "Constitution," otherwise known as "Old Ironsides" and distinguished for her action against the Royal Navy in the American War of 1812.

NEW BISHOP IS DESCENDANT OF DICKENS

A great-great-grandson of Charles Dickens is to be the new Bishop of Southwell, the diocese which covers Nottinghamshire. The Rt Rev. Michael Whinney, 54, now Suffragan Bishop of Aston, succeeds the Rt Rev. Denis Wakeling, who retires at the end of the month.

He said yesterday that although when he first read Dickens at school he found him "somewhat long-winded" he thought he was a man ahead of his time. He hoped he had inherited his passion for social justice.

Obituary

SIR HAROLD HILLIER

SIR HAROLD HILLIER, who has died aged 80, was a leading horticulturalist who built up over 25 years a world-famous collection of rare plants and trees at his arboretum at Ampfield, near Romsey, Hants. More than 14,000 species were planted there.

In 1978 Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother officially opened the Hillier Arboretum and gardens, which Sir Harold had given to Hampshire County Council. The 100 acres of land had been turned into a series of garden scenes.

Plants had been brought from five continents. Sir Harold made expeditions to Russia, Korea, Japan, New Zealand and Tasmania, and others had journeyed through Turkey, Iran, and Nepal. The result was a collection unrivalled in the world.

The head of the Winchester firm of nurserymen, he acquired his knowledge of horticulture and botany from his father, Edwin Lawrence Hillier, whose own father had founded the business in 1864.

He joined the family firm in 1922 and took over the running in 1944. Every year from 1922 he had received a gold medal at Chelsea flower show for the exhibitions by Hillier Nurseries.

Besides his gift of the arboretum, he was generous in giving plants to other leading hardy plant collections in Britain, particularly Ventnor Botanic Gardens which he helped to create.

He was a Fellow of the Linnean Society, and from 1974, Vice President of the Royal Horticultural Society, which awarded him in 1958 the Victoria Medal of Honour. He also received the Veitch Memorial Gold Medal in 1962 and the Thomas Roland Medal of Massachusetts Horticultural Society in 1965. He was appointed a C B E in 1971 and knighted in 1983.

NICHIDATSU FUJII

The Most Ven Nichidatsu Fujii who has died at Tokyo aged 99, was a Japanese Buddhist monk who was awarded international medals and prizes for his ardent peace activities. In 1979 he visited Britain for the foundation of a peace pagoda, the first in the West, at Willen Lake, Milton Keynes.

Known to his followers as "Guruji" he founded in 1924 the Nipponzan Myohoji sect and after a tour of India in 1931, adopted Mahatma Gandhi's principles of non-violence.

In 1932 he organised an international convention in Tokyo, attended by religious leaders from 58 nations to appeal for the abolition of nuclear weapons.

Thomas Mann. At Seabrook, Kent, aged 86. Artist and cartoonist, son of Tom Mann (1856-1941) leader of 1889 London dock strike and founder member of British Communist party in 1920.

Johnny Guarnieri. At Livingston, New Jersey, aged 67. American jazz pianist who played with Artie Shaw and Benny Goodman. A descendant of famous Italian family of violin-makers, he made recordings with an Artie Shaw group of the first jazz solos on the harpsichord.

WAY OF THE WORLD

A Neat Trick

HACKNEY Council is to invite homosexuals to adopt or foster children as part of a "positive approach to encourage members of this minority group" and give male and female homosexuals "a fair and equal access to social services."

The intriguingly-named chairman of the council's social services, Mr Patrick Kodikara, says proudly: "As far as I am aware, these are the most far-reaching and advanced proposals ever discussed by a London local authority. We have a Gay Rights Directorate (sic) who have, with representatives from the community, taken a year to produce these recommendations. Ten per cent. of the population of Hackney belong to this minority group . . ."

Here we go again with the myth, so sedulously and impudently plugged by interested parties that many people now accept it as truth, that ten per cent. of the population of Great Britain and Northern Ireland is homosexual. When the hullabaloo about homosexuals erupted about 25 years ago, the figure given was five per cent. At this rate it should be 20 per cent. or more by the end of the century.

But this, though absurd, misleading and undesirable enough, is by the way. What is thoroughly objectionable here is that homosexuals should be treated as a "community" and a "minority group," as if they did not differ among themselves just like other individuals.

The reason why they are being treated — like women, blacks, "the Irish," "the handicapped" and so on — as a "group" or "community" is not hard to grasp. They have votes in local elections; and it makes the more gullible of them easier to manipulate for political purposes, which in practice always means the purposes of the Left.

Any sensible homosexual—or any sensible person told by Labour politicians and officials that he or she belongs to a "community" or "group" — will surely run a mile rather than fall into their far-reaching and advanced clutches.

Galvanic Days

DAMEMS, a small station on the Keighley and Worth Valley railway in the West Riding, was restored last year by railway preservationists. It has now been voted "the best restored station in Britain."

As everybody knows, Branwell Brontë worked for a short time as booking-clerk at Damems. He was soon sacked. Whether this was due to his being continually drunk or to his habit, when asked for a return ticket to Keighley, of issuing a single ticket to Samarkand, or both, is uncertain.

What is less well-known is that Doreen, the so-called "missing" Brontë sister discovered by Julian Birdbath in one of the greatest feats of literary detection in history, occasionally helped Branwell in the ticket office. Her brisk, no-nonsense method of issuing tickets kept the place going when Branwell was incapacitated, and as this was in the days before unions or demarcation rules, the railway authorities were at first glad to have her about.

It was her growing interest in technology which caused trouble. Before long she was experimenting with an electro-magnetic or "galvanic" ticket-issuing machine which, while leaving this robust woman unharmed, gave would-be passengers such severe shocks that some collapsed on the platform while others fled in panic to the nearest station down the line.

In view of Doreen's general efficiency the authorities might have overlooked this. It was when she began interfering with the trains — one of her experiments anticipated the present Advanced Passenger Train, achieving an extreme degree of "tilt" which caused the passengers to fall out of the carriage on to the platform, from which a "galvanic" netting device scooped them back again — that the authorities decided she had to go.

Residents

THE Stretchford Arts Association, which enjoys a grant from the Arts Council, has appointed Albert Rasp's brother Stan, who was commissioned to do a sculpture of the famous goal-conceding goal-keeper some time ago, official sculptor-in-residence on the Bog Lane Housing Estate.

Stan, who admires his brother immensely and has picked up a way of talking from football circles, said yesterday: "I am over the moon, dead chuffed. I've still got this block of stone they gave me to do Albert's statue and they have given me some more money. I may spend it on sweets, like I did the last lot. Or I may take a body-building course or buy a fork-lift truck so as to arrange these big blocks of stone in a kind of pattern, like, perhaps a sort of semi-circle or a triangle. I don't know yet. I am sick as a parrot," he suddenly said in a puzzling way.

The Arts Association has now made some more residential appointments. Russell Nadir, a drop-out and son-in-law of the Supreme Director of Tourism, has been appointed poet-in-residence; Arthur Goth-Jones, also related by marriage, is painter-in-residence; Edwina Nadir novelist-in-residence; Rodney Goth-Jones composer-in-residence; Heather Nadir potter-and-weaver-in-residence; and further appointments are expected.

"We may appoint Albert Rasp goalkeeper-in-residence," said a spokesman for the Arts Association. "His goalkeeping is a non-representational form of inaction art form which we feel should have a place if we are to bring the arts to the people."

There are a good many vandals and violent hooligans on the Bog Lane Estate. But the Arts Association does not think they will be a problem. "We may give them a grant and make them vandals and hooligans-in-residence. They represent a vital, contemporary trend in the Arts scene which we cannot ignore unless the money runs out."

Never at a Loss

WHEN Princess Margaret, who is known to be a heavy smoker, went into hospital for a lung examination, the zealots of the anti-smoking industry assumed that she was suffering from lung cancer. If his had turned out to be so, they would, of course, have claimed that it was due to her smoking and used this eminent example to step up their campaign of terror.

Happily, medical tests showed that the Princess did not have lung cancer. Were the anti-smoking fanatics discouraged? Not at all. They are using even this as grist for their mill.

A note in the London STANDARD says sanctimoniously that "as a heavy smoker" the Princess "now faces the struggle so many have had, to give up smoking altogether. We wish her luck, and a speedy return to full health again."

Who says she has got to give up smoking? Why should she? Those who object to being bossed about and terrorised by dubiously motivated fanatics will wish her, as well as luck and good health, the moral courage to defy them.

The problems of being a stage Mole...

BY LYNNE EDMUNDS

Picture by PAUL ARMIGER

LEFT: Simon Schatzberger, who plays the lead in "The Secret Diary of Adrian Mole," outside Wyndham's Theatre in London's West End.

SIMON SCHATZBERGER insists that he is in no danger of being submerged in the character of Adrian Mole, the anxious adolescent he plays in the new West End hit musical play, even though young fans write to him as though they were one and the same.

All the same, the reason he arrived breathlessly late for our interview was, he admitted, rather "Moleish."

He had locked himself at the flat where he is staying with another cast member of "The Secret Diary of Adrian Mole," had to break out through the back, then climb over gardens and knock on strangers' doors to be let through into the street.

But Simon, 17 in March, doesn't seem to have that much in common with the character from Sue Townsend's best-selling books, whom he plays non-stop for 2½ hours eight times a week. Adrian agonises entertainingly over everything from his physical attributes to his intellectual ambitions, and love for the precocious Pandora, while struggling to make sense of his parents' emotional antics.

Simon, perky with humorous blue eyes, struggled on in some pain for the final rehearsals, and several weeks' performances, with a broken arm in plaster. (He fell over a bar that was part of the scenery.) Having no understudy at that point he felt he had to do it to save the show, but he admits offhandedly that for the first three weeks the pain was bad every time he moved.

Now his arm is out of plaster and all the last-minute changes in action and dialogue he also had to contend with — in his first-ever role in the professional theatre — have been dropped.

"There's a lot that's physical in the part," he said. "Getting beaten up by the school bully, and falling about on stage. I can manage all that again now."

But although the demands of the part leave Simon so exhausted that his only recreation these days is . . . "sleep, basically" . . . he is obviously revelling in it all.

Devoid of any theatrical mannerisms, this young man, who had previously only appeared on the amateur operatic stage in his native Nottingham and with the go-ahead drama department of his comprehensive school, already talks like a veteran.

"I keep trying new things and different intonations on the audience, and when I find they work, I stick to them. You can relax into a play when it's going to go on running" — bookings for the next few months are extremely healthy — "and I'm getting to know Adrian more all the time."

There is a high percentage of teenagers and preteens in the audience and, like Simon, they empathise with Adrian as he struggles with adolescent pretensions and traumas.

"They write to me, using his name, and ask things like 'How can I be an intellectual like you?' A lot of them don't think it's a funny play at all and they say how they're going through just the same kind of problems. They find some of it very painful and cringe in their seats."

Simon, though, really seems to be the exception to the stereotyped, tormented adolescent. The son of a bingo-caller who could not take up his chance of a singing career, his interest in acting was stimulated by his elder brother Elliot. Simon followed him into the Central Television Workshop in Nottingham (and their younger sister Julie has just made it a trio). Two roles in children's television are Simon's only other commercial experience.

"I was one of a group of four average schoolboys who got into trouble in one play and then I played a purple alien in a space farce."

He recalls how he nearly fainted in the latter because the big, floppy fibreglass ears he had to wear for the part not only deafened him but sent his temperature up dramatically.

"I just feel so lucky to have landed this part and had such a brilliant start on stage," he said. His future, he feels, is wide open. He hopes the play will run and run and that he will be offered other parts. (Incomprehensibly, the television version, due to start filming at Thames in the spring, will, as a policy decision, have a totally different set of actors.)

If no offers materialise he is prepared to pick up his original plans and do a drama course in Nottingham. "What I would like is to play the widest and most varied range of parts — and to go on singing. I'm going to take lessons to learn the correct techniques for that in the spring."

EATING IN WITH THE WHOLEFOOD COOK

FILLING IDEAS FOR AFTER-SCHOOL APPETITES

"I CANNOT possibly give them sausages again," is the groan that I have heard from many mothers, pondering yet again the question of what they should give their children when they come in from school. They are extremely hungry and often tired; they want to eat now, and cannot possibly wait until Dad comes home in two hours' time.

The answer is something quick and nutritious which can look after itself while you are out on the school run.

Baked potatoes can sit in the oven for one and a half hours without any attention being paid to them. During the day, make a filling and tasty mixture to go on the top, so that all you have to do when the children come home is take the potato out of the oven and heat the topping.

Large wholewheat baps with savoury fillings are very satisfying. To make them fit for a winter's evening, fill them, put them into roasting bags and then into the oven so that the bread crisps and a soft and cheesy filling will begin to melt.

If your children have to be collected, prepare the baps and heat the oven before you go out.

Things on toast are many a mother's standby. Again, the bread can be sliced and the topping or spread can be prepared in advance.

Pasta shapes are one of my standbys for an easy meal. You can cook these in advance and reheat them with a little butter or margarine, chopped tomatoes and small amounts of diced meat, such as ham or corned beef.

Or you can make a mixed version of cauliflower and macaroni cheese which may not be very original but which is always enjoyed by children since it is very substantial and its flavours are mild.

Pancakes seem to be another children's favourite. They can be made and filled in advance and put into a hot oven for a few minutes to be reheated. Quiches and pies, with a variety of fillings, can all be cooked in advance. Serve them cold or reheat them for 10 minutes in a hot oven.

THE RECIPES

BAKED POTATOES

METHOD: Scrub medium to large, even-sized potatoes, prick them twice on both sides with a fork. Put the potatoes on the oven rack and turn the oven to 400F (Gas 6). Cook the potatoes for 1½hr. If you are putting the potatoes into a pre-heated oven, cook them for 1¼ hr. When done, they should have soft, fluffy middles and delicious crispy skins.

LENTIL BAKED POTATO TOPPING

INGREDIENTS: 2 medium carrots; 1 small onion; 1 large celery stick; 2 tablespoons oil; ½ garlic clove (optional); 3oz split red lentils; ½ pint stock; ½ teaspoon Marmite or other yeast extract.

METHOD: Finely grate the carrots. Finely chop the onion and celery. Heat the oil in a saucepan on a low heat. Stir in the carrots, onion, celery and garlic. Cover and cook gently for 5min. Stir in the lentils and cook, stirring for 1min. Add the stock and Marmite and bring to the boil. Cover and simmer for 30min or until the lentils are soft and use to top oven-baked potatoes.

SWEETCORN BAPS

INGREDIENTS: 4 wholemeal baps; 4 small tomatoes; 6 tablespoons tinned sweetcorn, drained; 4 teaspoons peach chutney; 6oz Edam cheese, grated.

METHOD: Heat the oven to 400F (Gas 6). Split the baps in half. Cut each tomato into four slices. Lay them on the bottom portions of the baps. Mix together the corn, chutney and cheese and divide the mixture between the baps. Sandwich the baps back together again. Put them, two at a time, into roasting bags. Lay them on a baking sheet and heat them in the oven for 10min.

LEICESTER CHEESE TOASTS

INGREDIENTS: 6oz Red Leicester cheese; 1 tablespoon tomato purée; 4 tablespoons milk; 8 large slices wholewheat bread; butter or vegetable margarine for toast if required.

METHOD: When you make cheese on toast it is very easy to cut off large slices to cover the bread and, before you know where you are, you have used nearly 1lb. Grate it first and cream it with something tasty to make a cheese spread and it will go much further.

In this recipe, grate the cheese and cream it with the tomato purée and milk. Toast the bread on one side only, turn it over and butter the other side if wished. Spread the cheese mixture over the toast and return the slices to the grill so that the cheese melts and bubbles. You will get an attractive marbling effect with the orange cheese and red purée. When the cheese just begins to melt, you can, if wished, lay sliced tomatoes on the top and return them to the grill to heat through.

PASTA AND CAULIFLOWER CHEESE

INGREDIENTS: 8oz wholewheat pasta shapes (spirals work well); 1 medium cauliflower; 1oz butter or vegetable margarine; 2 tablespoons wholewheat flour; ½ pint milk; 4oz Cheddar cheese, finely grated; 1 tablespoon wheatgerm.

METHOD: Cook the pasta shapes in lightly salted water for 15min or until cooked through. Drain them. Break the cauliflower into small florettes and steam for 10min or until just tender. Mix the pasta and cauliflower in a flat, ovenproof dish. Melt the butter or margarine in a saucepan on a medium heat. Stir in the flour and milk and bring to the boil, stirring. Simmer for 1min or until you have a thick sauce. Take the pan from the heat and beat two-thirds of the cheese into the sauce. Pour the sauce over the cauliflower and pasta. Scatter the remaining cheese and the wheatgerm over the top. While you go out to collect the children, let the oven be heating to 400F (Gas 6). When you get back, put the dish into the oven for 15min or until the cheese has melted and the top is beginning to brown.

PANCAKES

INGREDIENTS FOR BASIC MIXTURE: 4oz wholewheat flour; pinch of fine sea salt; 1 egg; 1 egg yolk; ¼ pint milk; ¼ pint water; 1 tablespoon oil; oil for frying.

METHOD: Put the flour and salt into a mixing bowl and make a well in the centre. Put in the egg and egg yolk and gradually begin to beat in flour from the edges. Mix together the milk and water and beat them into the flour a little at a time, until you have used half. Beat well, making sure the batter is smooth. Beat in the oil and then the remaining milk and water. Leave the batter to stand for 30min. To cook: heat 1 tablespoon oil in a 7in omelette pan on a medium heat. Put in 3 tablespoons of the batter and tip the pan to spread it out quickly. Cook until the underside is speckled brown, the top is set and the edges are beginning to look lacy. Turn it over and cook until the underside has browned. Lift the pancake on to a plate. Cook the others in the same way and leave them to cool. Makes eight pancakes. To fill pancakes, put a portion of the filling on one end in a long shape. Roll up the pancakes from that end. Lay the pancakes in a flat, ovenproof dish and cover them with foil. To reheat, put the dish into a preheated 400F (Gas 6) oven for 10min. The pancakes will be soft and moist so there is no need to make a sauce for them, but they can be scattered with grated Cheddar cheese if required.

SCRAMBLED EGG PANCAKE FILLING

INGREDIENTS: 4 eggs; 2oz Farmhouse Cheddar cheese, finely grated; 2oz mushrooms; 8oz tomatoes; 1oz butter.

METHOD: Beat the eggs with the cheese. Finely chop the mushrooms. Scald, skin and chop the tomatoes. Melt the butter in a saucepan on a low heat. Put in the mushrooms and cook them for 2min. Pour in the egg and cheese mixture and cook it, stirring, until it sets into a scramble. Stir in the tomatoes. Cool the mixture before using it to fill the ready-prepared pancakes.

VIEWPOINT

YOU may, unknowingly, be a member of CALM: acronym for Campaign Against Loud Music.

It is rather a local movement as yet, launched by myself and a few friends, to persuade landlords of some pubs to reduce the volume of their juke-boxes and other nasties.

Some success can be reported. At least half a dozen people known to me locally have left noisy pubs for quieter watering holes.

One we use is normally quiet at lunch - time, in deference to the more elderly patrons. At night, when the teenagers take over, and at discos, it is another matter.

At Brighton recently a man who complained to the landlord about undue noise was told "the others like it." But when he spoke to some of "the others" he soon collected 30 signatures of those who did not like it: a victory for CALM.

There is no doubt that some decibel levels in pubs, and other public places, would be illegal in a factory, without ear protection.

No doubt in 30 years or so we shall have a large proportion of hard-of-hearing middle-aged people.

In ordinary everyday pubs where people go for what used to be called "a quiet drink," CALM can, by gentle pressure, help increase the quality of life. There is no organisation: just grumble away, quietly of course, and CALM may prevail.

GENEVA AND AFTER

IT WOULD HAVE BEEN truly astonishing if after those several gruelling hours talking in Geneva Mr SHULTZ and Mr GROMYKO were to have claimed in their own different ways to have achieved peace in our time. For one thing the issues dividing East and West are too many and too complex to be solved by foreign ministers and, for another, the two superpowers have hardly been on speaking terms for more than a year and it is a long time since they managed to reach any major ratifiable agreements. Yet it would appear that the talks about talks in Geneva have confounded the sceptics and the pessimists and have been a success. After having traded insults and rhetoric for so long the United States and the Soviet Union have managed to agree on negotiations which, to quote Mr SHULTZ, are aimed at "preventing an arms race in space, and terminating it on earth."

President REAGAN's sincerity in pursuing this goal should not now be doubted. Before Geneva tons of newsprint were devoted to emphasising the differences within the Administration on its whole approach to the Soviet Union. But it should be noted that the stated American position, at its most simple, was to encourage the Kremlin to resume talks on reducing medium and long-range missiles in exchange for "discussions" on space weapons and anti-missile defences. Something along these lines, and without pre-conditions and prior understandings, has been achieved by a determined Mr SHULTZ who, significantly, had Mr REAGAN's national security adviser, Mr MCFARLANE, right by his side throughout the hard bargaining. It may well be that it is Mr GROMYKO, who will have to work hard explaining the results to the Politburo.

This is surely a reasonable assessment. Such are the complexities, let alone the controversies, of the arms control negotiations, that it will take many months, even years, before any major new agreements are reached, ratified, and implemented. There is thus a lot more East-West wrangling on the horizon. The Geneva meeting has not managed to forge a fundamentally new relationship. Simply there is going to be some dialogue now which might just be able to produce a measure of stability somewhere between the so-called detente of the early 1970s and the post-Afghanistan years of antagonism. This is surely a good thing.

INDUSTRIAL ARCHAEOLOGY

THE QUIET BUT STEADY return to work of miners this week, while not everything that an American tycoon might hope for, is thoroughly respectable. With 1,958 men back so far this week the pit men have resumed the thick trickle of November. No one should be so foolish as to predict an early collapse of this foolish, tragic strike. But there is erosion. North Derbyshire now has a majority of its miners at work. Kellingly in South Yorkshire is working at a modest level without permission from Mr SCARGILL.

The irony is that had Mr SCARGILL been as skilled a strategist as he is a tactician he might have put together from the July offers and the Nacods settlement a deal which would have passed in a moderate light for victory. Given the same assertive powers which have claimed the return of 1,200 men in one day as "a catastrophe for the Coal Board" he could have asserted victory, and many people from miners to Conservative MPs, would have agreed with him. Now like that unfortunate naval midshipman discovered intact (since 1846) in Canada last year, he and his union are set in thick ice. All talk of extracting them by concessions, spurious or real, is quite naive. For this strike is the product of two things. One of them, the syndico-revolutionary potential of street politics as personally seen in a vision by Mr SCARGILL, we can forget about. But there is something else. People living in cut-off, economically unhopeful pit villages in South Wales and parts of Scotland do have genuine pre-Scargill feelings that the world which was their's is a world that is their's no more.

They are striking because they wish to continue being miners in Glamorgan and refuse absolutely to become miners in Leicestershire. Without wishing to be unkind to deeply held feelings this is irrational. The prospering, and working, miners of Nottinghamshire came originally in great numbers from the North-East. Fatfield and Chopwell in Durham are indeed ghost towns but the men who moved lived. The Industrial Revolution produced a vast migration. Mr SCARGILL will hate this, but his troops are marching against history.

THE WASHINGTON SHUFFLE

ON THE FACE OF IT, the decision of President REAGAN to permit his White House chief of staff, Mr JAMES BAKER, to switch jobs with Treasury Secretary DONALD REGAN is of rather less than earth-shattering significance. Although Mr BAKER had established himself as the second most powerful man within the Administration, it was no secret that he wanted a major cabinet post. Mr REGAN's ability has alway been as an administrator rather than as a theoretician and he can be expected to run the White House as a tight ship. What Mr REGAN may lack in subtle political skills, he makes up for with a forceful personality and a well-earned reputation for toughness in argument.

Of greater interest are the policy implications of Mr BAKER's arrival at the Treasury (assuming that there will be no problems with his Senate confirmation hearing next month). Mr BAKER very much belongs to the pragmatic wing of the Republican party. He is a moderate conservative who has little time for the economic and foreign policy ideologues who attached themselves to the first Reagan Administration. Indeed, it is a measure of his influence that they are rather thinner on the ground than they once were.

It is not realistic to expect Mr BAKER to make any major changes to the fiscal 1986 budget which the President will present to Congress in a few weeks time. It is, on the other hand, quite possible that with his huge experience on the Hill and his temperamental inclination for compromise, Mr BAKER will stand more chance than did his predecessor of negotiating a deal with Congressional leaders to cut the expanding budget deficit. If Mr BAKER was left to his own devices, there is little doubt that he would succeed—in the past he has been associated with the faction within the Administration which believes that there is no alternative to higher taxes and some restraint on ballooning defence expenditure. An early sign of whether Mr BAKER intends to fight hard for a realistic deficit reduction package will be the fate of the remaining supply-siders in the Treasury. A less ideologically committed U.S. Treasury would be the first step down the road to greater fiscal rectitude.

A FORMER TREASURY MINISTER WONDERS . . .

By ENOCH POWELL, MP

I HAD better confess it at once: I enjoy paying tax. I understand what the American Supreme Court judge, Oliver Wendell Holmes, meant when he said that his happiest day in the year was the day he made out his tax return. In a parliamentary democracy, the payment of tax is the assertion of a right and a privilege, the citizen's badge of participation in government, the act which makes the Crown's business his business.

I always deplored the vandalism of Wilson and Heath when they agreed to abolish the traditional form of Royal Assent to the Finance Bill: la Reine remercie ses bons sujets et accepte leur benevolence.

Mind, I admit I am really talking about income tax, the tax which comes nearest to the ideal: non-discriminatory, non-regressive, a straightforward levy on the current spending power of the citizen. Your purist worshipper of the free market feels uneasy when ability to pay is assessed by expenditure on this or that, in other words when taxation is raised by making certain goods and services dearer.

Indirect taxation no doubt has ancient precedent behind it; it is beloved of countries where dishonesty and administrative inefficiency render direct taxation uncertain; and only a fanatical single-taxer would imagine dispensing with indirect taxation altogether. But I would sooner progressively reduce than increase our reliance upon it.

I make an exception in favour of rates. Rates, though an indirect tax, are a good tax because they are the indispensable price we pay for an indispensable good thing — local administration through responsible locally elected representatives, alias local government. An iron logic links accountability to taxation, and therefore local accountability to local taxation.

Local taxation presupposes a tax base which can be unequivocally identified with an administrative area. The wit of man has so far found only one formula which meets that requirement: the annual value of occupied property. Until someone produces a viable substitute I shall continue to sing my hymn of praise to rates.

THE foregoing recital of prejudices will enable the reader to judge with what anxiety I approach the fiscal objectives of the present administration and the philosophic justification for them that has been offered. The objectives have been threefold: to reduce taxation generally; to shift the tax burden from direct towards indirect taxation; to abolish rates or, failing that, to place control of them in the hands of central government.

The corresponding philosophy may be stated as follows: (1) taxation is a bad thing in itself, because people work or think less hard and take fewer risks in proportion as more of their income is transferred by taxation to the State; (2) people are motivated more by the nominal size of their disposable income than by what they can actually purchase with it; finally, (3) taxation is so powerful a political lever that no significant part of it ought to be outside central government's control.

What I have to say about all those three propositions is that I simply do not believe them. I suppose one could speculate on the economic consequences if taxation approached either zero or 100 per cent. What seems to me perverse and unrealistic is to suppose that any likely variation — say, 10 per cent. either way — in the level of taxation would alter the economic motivation of the mass of our population or the standards of value which their attitudes imply.

The springs of action in society are more profound and more complex than to permit of so trivial and mechanical an assumption. Men labour, think, invent, imagine because they must, because it is in their nature; and the organisation of the different human societies in which they do so differs. Wages and other tangible benefits are part of that organisation: they are not its actuating principle.

The idea that men will be made more economically efficient by increasing the proportion of their income left at their private disposal comes about through a fallacious extension of the idea of the market mechanism. Relative profitability and relative prices are useful, indeed indispensable, methods of measurement and of prediction; they do not explain or control the behaviour of society.

The Parthenon was not built in defiance of the laws of mechanics; but the laws of mechanics did not cause the Parthenon to be built. It is against this error that criticisms of the Government for "monetarism" and "inhumanity" are an instinctive protest.

The volume of total taxation, direct or indirect, is intimately connected with the proportion of society's total effort over which government disposes. I say "connected with," and not "equivalent to," because at the margin public expenditure can be financed — that is to say, effort can be harnessed — by two other methods, namely, by soliciting loans or by cheating (less candidly called "inflating the currency").

Copybook morality teaches that cheating is bad policy; and so it is. The determination of this Government eventually to stop cheating altogether and meantime only to cheat 5 per cent. or less is wholly admirable. None of its opponents dare come out openly and demand more cheating. But there is a wavering line between government cheating (i.e. borrowing from the banks) and Government borrowing from the public.

The cry goes up: "Borrow more. Then you can have more public spending or less taxation or a bit of both." It is a seductive Eve's apple; but there is a canker at its heart. To borrow money for a productive enterprise is to finance that production out of current saving, which is thoroughly good sense. Some public expenditure is on productive investment—though, God knows, not much of it. But the service of government debt is never charged upon that investment, because of the great truth discovered by our forefathers when they created the Consolidated Fund, the truth that all government receipts and expenditures are one and indivisible.

So government borrowing from the public is a form of cheating, too, though less heinous than borrowing from the banks. It amounts to one of two things. Either it is an intention to defraud the lenders and their successors by future inflation or it is a promise to redistribute a fraction of society's effort in future years in favour of those who then possess bits of government paper.

I conclude therefore that taxation ought to be the full and accurate measure of that fraction of the national effort which government is to be held responsible for directing. To reduce that fraction is to reduce taxation: and conversely to reduce taxation is to reduce that fraction. This Government came into office in 1979, and remains to this day, deeply and emotionally committed to that purpose. Yet it has presided over the reverse, an apparently inexorable growth of the crucial fraction.

THAT for some decisions it is unwise and mistaken to make government responsible, most people would probably agree. Where profitability and the market will do the job of allocation and discrimination, government is likely to be a capricious, prejudiced and ignorant arbiter. There is much "de-nationalisation" — in the broadest sense of the word — still well worth doing.

On the other hand, it is perfectly possible for a society to fix aims and ambitions of which the achievement can only be organised socially and it is the perception of this truth which lends non-partisan dignity to some — not all — of the agonised protest against deliberate and progressive shrinkage of the public sector in total.

Britain at the end of the 20th century, earning a trade surplus and enjoying rising material standards of life without employing the energies of all her people, may well be just such a society, and that could be the reason why the reduction of taxation and public expenditure has proved so tantalisingly elusive. If so, there is nothing absolute about the nature of taxation which need enslave us blindly to the purpose of reducing it.

LONDON DAY BY DAY

Row over soaring cost of RAF 'taxis'

A FURIOUS row is under way in Whitehall over the bills which the RAF's purse-keepers are charging for ferrying Ministers around Europe in their fleet of executive jets.

The cost of ministerial flights has soared since the last of the propeller-driven Devons were phased-out in favour of the luxurious and expensive HS 125s.

A number of Departments are now threatening to query their accounts with the RAF. Not only are they being charged £1,000 an hour in-flight but like a commercial air charter firm the RAF is charging them hefty waiting time—especially during the interminable late night negotiations at Brussels.

Ministers are, of course, free to travel on commercial air taxis if it saves money. But my senior RAF sources are adamant that despite the fuss and whatever the cost most Ministers prefer the comfort, superior facilities and most of all the prestige of travelling with the RAF.

Paramount Rowe

ONE of the film world's currently most closely-guarded secrets has slipped out to me with the news that the young, almost-unknown actor chosen for the starring role in Steven Spielberg's new film "Young Sherlock Holmes" is the Old Etonian son of a backbench Conservative MP.

The young man who has landed the part under the most prestigious film producer in the world is Nick Rowe, son of the MP for Mid-Kent, Andrew Rowe.

Rowe, whose father taught at Eton before entering Parliament, is playing the part between leaving school and going up to Bristol University next autumn. With Spielberg's record as producer of a series of hits like "Jaws," "E.T." and "Gremlins," Rowe's film career, which started two years ago with a minor role in "Another Country," should be in safe hands.

According to many indignant Welsh readers Lloyd George was at least partly right in claiming Oliver Cromwell for his nation and was not, as H. G. Wells suggested, exhibiting a native passion for attributing erroneously the achievements of great men to his small country. Cromwell's great-grandfather was one Sir Richard Williams who eventually adopted the surname Cromwell to emphasise his relationship with his famous uncle, Thomas Cromwell, Henry VIII's Chancellor.

Modest measurement

A FRIEND waiting to be fitted at the Bond Street hatters, Herbert Johnson, where an elaborate device is used to measure the size of heads on each visit could not help noticing the cards recording the measurements of Lieut-Gen Sir Brian Horrocks, who died this week.

They started with him as a young lieutenant in the First World War, then captain and so on up the military ladder—each recording an identical size. Thus there is concrete evidence that as Horrocks rose to become one of the most famous and dashing generals in the Second World War he never grew big headed.

Plastic problems

THE Midland Bank has, I hear, been deluged with complaints from angry customers over the past few days after automatic banking machines began gobbling up their cards.

The problem arose through the reciprical arrangement with the National Westminster Bank for customers to use their machines. The two banks' computers fell out of synchronisation because of a Midland Bank programming error in dating over the New Year, leaving hundreds of customers penniless, without cards and unable to withdraw cash outside banking hours.

Embarrassed Midland, already the target of takeover speculation, is now gathering up the cards which will be returned to their frustrated owners shortly.

Not big in Brooklyn

DAVID STEEL may be famous in Britain, but for all his hobnobbing with prominent American politicians like Senator Gary Hart, it seems that the Liberal leader's features are not instantly recognisable across the Atlantic.

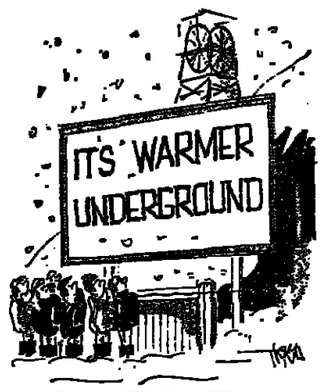
Publishers Weidenfeld have just completed the rights sale to the American house, Crown, of Steel's forthcoming book, "Border Country," a photographic tour of the region for which he provides the text. Crown particularly liked one picture of Steel and his son walking in the countryside close to his home at Ettrick Bridge and telexed: "We would like to see the photograph of the shepherds enlarged."

Chagall à son goût

YESTERDAY'S opening of the Royal Academy's Chagall exhibition represents a further move into arts sponsorship by shipping magnate James Sherwood, President of Sea Containers, albeit behind the scenes.

Sherwood previously sponsored the Academy's Genius of Venice show and even then had the idea of supporting a Chagall retrospective. Although he later decided he could not sponsor the new exhibition, he introduced the RA to someone who could, William Wood-Prince, of the First National Bank of Chicago, who collects Chagalls.

The bank came up with support and will surely be pleased that the exhibition has received the artist's help and approval. The Academy's President, Roger de Grey, announced at the opening that the 97-year-old painter's wife Valentina is hurrying over from Paris to see the show today.



Fox breaks cover

AT THE launch of his new book 'Antarctica and the South Atlantic" yesterday, Robert Fox who received an MBE for his BBC radio coverage of the Falklands campaign, stressed the similarities between the hardy settlers of the islands and their cousins in Patagonia, Argentina. He suggested controversially that it might be sensible to unite them under one government.

Fox originally wanted to call his book "From Disappointment to Deception" after the two capes on Antarctic islands so named by Captain Cook. But the next book, he joked, will be called "Despair"—"that will be about the BBC."

Fall-out zone

MUTUAL animosity and vituperation among London Tories over the abolition of the GLC appears to be reaching levels normally associated with comrades in the Labour party.

In response to a booklet by GLC councillor and former chairman of the Tory Reform Group, Rodney Gent, arguing in favour of the retention of a London-wide authority, the Tory leader of Hammersmith Council, Kim Howe, has fired off a stinging riposte.

After receiving the booklet in the post, Howe has written to Gent: "There are many overwhelmingly good reasons for abolishing the GLC, but I suppose a minor reason would be that people like you get elected to it."

Model employee

MY note that Mr A. Fox is Master of Hounds for the North Staffordshire Hunt has led a number of readers to point out that the hard-working administrative assistant to the Independent Programme Producers Association is one Miss Dilly Gent.

PETERBOROUGH

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

DECISIONS ABOUT ARMS CONTROL

SIR—I have read with interest the excellent article by Mr David Shears (Jan. 4) on Strobe Talbott's "Deadly Gambits." Mr Shears is right to focus his comments on the insight which this book gives on the problems of arms control decision-making in the American Administration.

Mr Talbott's authoritative account makes clear that, in the Reagan Administration, usual inter-agency difficulties from the dispersal of power within the structure of the American Government have been intensified.

Mr Talbott says they have been intensified because of divergent positions of principle on the desirability of arms control with the Russians. Decisions were not made, and opportunities like the "walk in the woods" compromise developed in Geneva, Intermediate range talks by the United States's negotiators, Mr Paul Nitze, were allowed to expire unexploited.

Something has now been done to improve decision-making. The President has instructed his National Security adviser, Mr Robert McFarlane, to chair an inter-agency co-ordinating committee on arms control policy, similar to those chaired by his predecessors Dr Kissinger and Dr Zbigniew Brzezinski, and the President has approved the appointment of Mr Nitze as chief adviser on arms control to the Secretary of State, Mr Shultz.

Neither Mr Shears nor Mr Talbott dwell on the role of Congress in arms control decision-making. The constitutional separation of powers, despite the visible disorder it creates in reaching decisions on national policy, does give the United States Congress some right of co-determination in foreign policy and arms control which it has been increasingly active in using.

In the coming period, Congress will continue to press the President to show greater flexibility in reaching an agreement on reduction of nuclear weapons, and greater realism in recognising the impetus his plans for space-biased missile defence can give the arms race and in coming to equitable terms with the Russians on this subject.

We need all the help of his kind we can get if the lengthy negotiations ahead are to have any positive outcome.

JONATHAN DEAN
Arms Control Adviser,
Union of Concerned Scientists,

Lack of consultation on Sunday post

SIR—I refer to the recently published letter of Mr Jerry Wiggin, MP, on the subject of Sunday postal collections.

I would draw Mr Wiggin's attention to the fact that it was the Post Office Board which abolished the service in May, 1976, without any consultation with the union, or allowing any comments from the public.

It is a pity that MPs at that time did little or nothing to place pressure on the Post Office, and it is no good now for people like Mr Wiggin to complain about this situation, nearly nine years later.

Is it any wonder that when eventually, the Post Office did seek to re-introduce Sunday collections there was opposition from the staff who had enjoyed being at home with their families for one day a week? Furthermore, they had become accustomed to the lower take home pay as a result of not working on Sundays.

I fail to understand how Mr Wiggin can associate the Post Office with the banks. At no time has the Post Office abolished Saturday working, and I cannot recall when banks have opened on Sundays.

We still have one of the best postal services in the world, and it saddens me as a Post Office employee with almost 24 years' service to hear and read only adverse comments. All postal staff, I believe, accept that everything is not perfect but it would be an encouragement to hear and read a little more of Post Office achievements.

ROY WARD
Middlesbrough.

Cost of special trains

SIR—I am surprised that Mr Jerry Wiggin, as an obvious supporter of a cost-cutting Government, is unaware of the reason why the Post Office does not re-introduce the Sunday collection and the weekend despatch of mail.

It has very little to do with the unions. The real reason is because of the very high cost which the Post Office would have to pay British Rail for the provision and running of the special mail trains which would be needed throughout the country, in addition to the overtime rates for all Post Office and British Rail staff.

J. E. C. HINCHLIFFE

Starved of wealth

SIR—I represent many small businesses in this country who agree that unemployment can be drastically reduced by encouraging the entrepreneur.

To the average unemployed person, however, the idea of starting a business is a daunting task. A visit to the local bank manager will doubtless prove yet again that banks will only lend money to people who can prove that they do not need it. The old cry for "guarantees" and the often negative answer to this cry will result in no loan, no business and no wealth creation.

It is traditional inflexibility of the banking system that is starving this country of tomorrow's entrepreneurs. A solution is for a special tax based on turnover to be levied on each commercial bank at the next Budget, this "tax" to be payable to the Inland Revenue less the amount lent to new entrepreneurs. Thus if a bank were to lend 40 per cent. of this sum to new businesses the remaining 60 per cent. would be "taxable."

This new "tax" would be the guarantee that the banking system needs. Many unemployed people would at last be given the chance to make their own way and the bank that often says no would have to say yes whether it liked it or not.

MARK STRACHAN
Man. Director, Domark Ltd.,

Cynical road tax

SIR—I am not surprised that tax-dodging drivers are costing the Government about £90 million a year.

Who can blame them?

Nothing is done for the motorist: either to reduce the amount of taxation imposed upon petrol sales—after all, the introduction of North Sea oil was supposed to make us rich—or for the conditions of the roads, which become progressively worse, witness the basic cause of the horrific M25 crash, the lack of the central reservation speed warning lights. Even now, they are not to be erected until 1988.

Some years ago, when the late Sir Gerald Nabarro discovered, prior to Budget Day, that the road tax was to be increased from £15/20 to £35, there was uproar in the House, and it was only increased to £25.

Nowadays there is a complete and cynical disregard for the fundamental rights of the motorist, and they are looked upon solely as a means of raising revenue by this Government, which gives nothing back in return.

Whisky loch

There is, I think, only one lake in Scotland, namely, the Lake of Monteith.

Injectable drugs available from addicts

SIR—As the relative of a former heroin addict, I share Mrs Mary Stuart's concern regarding the increasing tragedy of drug addiction and the ready availability of drugs in many of our communities (Dec. 31).

Many countries since the Shanghai Conference in 1909 have tried to control the manufacture, importation and distribution of drugs but with limited success. The economy of certain countries is greatly dependent on the production of narcotics.

Drug seizures (representing probably less than 10 per cent. of imported drugs) continue to rise and at an alarming rate; 2·8 kilos of heroin were seized in 1974 whereas in the past 12 months the figure has risen to 260 kilos. Since 1980 the world wide opium poppy production has increased 50 per cent, the coca production 40 per cent, and the cannabis production 20 per cent.

Pure unadulterated heroin or physeptone in injectable form will always be available from those addicts who are prepared to sell their legally prescribed surplus, whether the prescription comes from a doctor working in a "clinic" or in private practice.

It is obviously very difficult, if not impossible, to provide absolute clinical control over any drugs used in the treatment of drug abuse. Nevertheless the presence of a relatively small amount of pure "injectables" at street level compared to the vast amounts of the more lethal "illicit injectables," should not be allowed to propagate our current treatment philosophy which is very much against the use of "injectables" in treatment.

If we wish to help addicts, we need to encourage them to seek treatment in the first place. Less than 10 per cent. of drug addicts seek any form of treatment and of those who do seek help less than 50 per cent. go to the established treatment centres, the drug dependency units. Is this the result of an effective system of therapy?

Seventy-four per cent. of drug addicts first notified in 1981 were addicted to heroin in the first place. Heroin has been used as a relatively safe and effective medicine since its discovery in 1874: regretfully due to the injudicious prescribing of a relatively small number of medical practitioners, its use in the treatment of drug abuse was severely curtailed following the second Brain Committee report in 1968.

I believe that much of the discussion concerning heroin within the media serves little purpose save to increase its undeserved mystique; this is of benefit to no-one save to the criminal who can promote and magnify the tragic experimentation of our youth with drugs to the tremendous financial advantage of criminal organisations.

Illicit heroin sale at street level over the past 12 months may well have amounted to between £200 million and £300 million.

It is time we reassessed our attitudes towards the complex problems of drug abuse. Time is not on our side.

A bad agreement

SIR—I refer to Mr A. P. B. Cunningham's letter (Jan. 4) on the plight of the aged with blocked funds in Zimbabwe.

The Lancaster House agreement, although widely acclaimed, is viewed by many as one of the worst in the country's colonial history.

In particular, the part played by the Conservative party has by no means been noteworthy: its silence whenever blocked funds have been mentioned has been almost deafening.

There have been one or two honourable exceptions and in particular, I would mention Sir Patrick Wall. He has given the matter a lot of attention and has beavered away for some years in an attempt to get some action.

If enough like-minded Members could be rallied it might be possible to get action: after all, we have given or committed a total of £105 million and, make no mistake, this will not be the last of the demands to be made upon us.

Fit for all seasons

SIR—I was born and bred in Sussex. In the 'twenties and 'thirties Easter Sunday lunch, no matter on which date Easter fell, was always the first Southdown lamb with mint sauce. With the autumn came roast leg of mutton with red-currant jelly, or boiled leg of mutton with caper sauce.

According to Mrs Beeton, circa 1937, lamb is at its best between ten to 12 weeks old, seasonable March to September. Mutton is in perfection between four and five years old, seasonable all the year round, best from September to April.

Schools of thought

SIR—I see that Mr Fred Jarvis, general Secretary of the National Union of Teachers (report, Jan. 5), objects to teachers being compared with people in industry. This is splendid news if it means that teachers will no longer be urged to take "industrial" action.

More Britons enjoying longer and healthier lives

MORE Britons own their own homes, eat healthier diets, live longer and are moving to the country. More are going to prison, living in one-parent families and having illegitimate babies. There are also fewer abortions.

These are just a few of the facts and figures revealed today in the 15th annual edition of "Social Trends," compiled by the Government's Central Statistical Office.

Reports by BRENDA PARRY

The proportion of illegitimate births continues to rise.

In 1983 16 per cent. of all live births in England and Wales were illegitimate, more than 2½ times the proportion in 1961 although the general birth rate is declining.

There were 694,000 live births in Britain in 1983, more than 10 per cent. more than the trough in 1977, but 29 per cent. less than the peak year for births in 1964.

But with the general fertility rate in 1983 at 60 births per thousand women of child-bearing age, it is below that necessary for the long-term replacement of the population.

Adoptions fall

The number of adoptions in Britain fell by 11 per cent. to 10,000 in 1983 after a three per cent. rise in 1982 thereby resuming the downward trend of the last decade. The number is now less than half the 1971 total of 23,000 adoptions.

One conclusion is that many more lone parents are now willing and more able to support illegitimate children. Another is that couples with established relationships are choosing to have their children outside of matrimony, making fewer babies available for adoption.

Despite the greater availability of contraception, there were 127,000 abortions in England and Wales in 1983, a figure similar to those in the years from 1980, but an increase of 34 per cent. over 1971.

More than a quarter of the 1983 abortions were carried out on girls under 20 and thep roportion carried out on single women was 58 per cent. as opposed to 47 per cent. in 1971. Just over half of the operations took place in private clinics or hospitals.

The survey makes the point that the usual reason for legal abortion is risk of injury to the physical or mental health of the woman concerned. Only about one or two per cent. of abortions each year are put down to the substantial risk of the child being born with abnormalities.

8 p.c. without baths

The number of households in Britain without a fixed bath or shower has fallen from 12 per cent. in 1971 to three per cent. in 1983, still an alarming figure to the many thousands who enjoy two-bathroom households.

There was a great increase in the numbers of people holidaying abroad. In 1971 only 36 per cent. of adults in Britain had been abroad on holiday; by 1983 this proportion had risen to 62 per cent.

Spain remains the most popular overseas destination, while at home it is the West Country.

There has been a trend for an increasing number of people to take more than one holiday each year.

The proportion of adults who smoke was substantially lower in 1982 than in 1972. In 1982 38 per cent. of men and 33 per cent. of women smoked compared with 52 per cent. and 42 per cent. respectively in 1972, the year after the health warning was first printed on cigarette packets.

Heavy alcohol consumption is found to be more prevalent among unemployed men, despite the fact that their incomes are generally lower than people in work. But the proportion of abstainers was also twice as high among the jobless as those in work.

There were also higher proportions of heavy drinking among men in manual occupations.

People's eating habits appear to have improved during the past 20 years. More pork and poultry is being eaten but much less beef, veal, mutton and lamb. Consumption of butter fell by 47 per cent. while that of margarine and other fats rose by 24 and 30 per cent. respectively.

With the country's prisons already overcrowded, the average population of prison establishments in England and Wales is projected to increase by 12 per cent. between 1982 and 1992, compared with a projected increase of about two per cent. in the population aged 15 or over.

Moving away

In 1983 the population living in Great Britain was 56 million, half a million more than in 1971, but the number of people aged 65 or over has increased by more than two million since 1961 which means that pensioners now make up 15 per cent. of the population.

In 1981 almost 90 per cent. of the population of England and Wales lived in urban areas, but now people are moving away. Between 1971 and 1981 the numbers living in smaller urban areas increased by nearly 10 per cent., and the number in rural areas increased by just over five per cent. with predominantly rural East Anglia having the fastest growing population.

About 94 per cent. of the population of Britain in 1983 was of white ethnic origin.

Of the remainder, nearly three-fifths of the West Indian or Guyanese and over two-fifths of the Indian population lived in Greater London. The population of Pakistani ethnic origin lived predominantly in Greater London and in the West Midlands and West Yorkshire.

Nearly half the 665,000 deaths in Britain in 1982 were from circulatory disorders and the next largest cause of death was cancer, accounting for about 150,000 lives.

Walking and television are top pursuits

WATCHING television and going for walks are the most popular leisure activities for men and women in Britain today, according to the survey.

People spend more time watching television than listening to the radio, with average weekly viewing times in the first quarter of last year being 21¾ hours among men and 25½ hours among women.

By far the most popular sporting activity among men and women is walking. Nineteen per cent of men and 17 per cent of women had been for a walk of at least two miles in the month before interview in 1983.

Billiards, snooker and darts are also popular among men while swimming is the second most popular sporting activity for women.

Spectator sports

Wathcing sporting events is a male-dominated activity, with footbal lstill by far the most popular spectator sport followed by rugby and then cricket.

But attendances at football matches have been falling almost continuously since shortly after the 1939-45 war.

Other popular leisure pastimes for men and women are listening to records and tapes at home, gardening, going out for a meal or a drink, reading and D I Y.

The survey found that men were more likely to read news papers than women, while a slightly higher proportion of adults read Sunday newspapers than read daily morning national newspapers.

The daily newspaper with the largest number of readers per copy is the FINANCIAL TIMES with 4·78.

The RADIO TIMES and TV TIMES are the most popular of the general weeklies but COUNTRY LIFE has the highest number of readers per copy of any general weekly at 21·5 because of its long life in waiting rooms.

Men branded as Lazy in the home

MEN are branded as lazy in the home by the social trends survey.

Despite the fact that they have more than six hours a week more free time than their wives, husbands seem to play very little part in many of the major and most time-consuming household jobs, such as cleaning, cooking, washing and ironing.

Men are more inclined to participate in shopping and washing dishes, but come into their own only in respect of money and household repairs.

Husbands' admission

Nearly three-quarters of wives claimed to do all or most of the housework, and among husbands the proportion who admitted that their wives did all or most of the housework was only slightly lower.

The survey showed that washing and ironing was the least popular task among men, with only one per cent. performing this duty compared with 89 per cent. of women, and 10 per cent. shared equally.

Only five per cent. of men prepare the evening meal; three per cent. carry out household cleaning duties; five per cent. household shopping; and 17 per cent. wash the evening dishes. But when household gadgets break down, repairs are carried out by 82 per cent. of husbands.

In 1982, the richest five per cent. of the adult population owned 41 per cent. of marketable wealth, but only 24 per cent. of all wealth including pension rights.

The survey concludes that inequality in the distribution of wealth is reduced by pension rights, which represents an increasingly important component of personal wealth.

Apart from housing and land, few forms of marketable wealth have kept pace in value with inflation, says the survey.

Between 1982 and 1983 the average gross weekly earnings of all male full-time employees rose from £150 to £163—an increase of about eight per cent. The average gross weekly income for all female full-time employees was about £109, almost 10 per cent. higher than in April, 1982.

Miners highest paid

Coal miners were, on average the highest paid of manual workers, although the differential between them and those working in the gas, electricity and water industries diminished between 1982 and 1983.

Agricultural workers remained the lowest paid group, with hourly earnings in 1983 at about 73 per cent. of the average for manual workers.

It took seven minutes' work for a married man on average earnings with a non-earning wife to pay for a large loaf of sliced white bread in 1983 — a minute less than the previous year.

Most household commodities could be bought in roughly the same period of working time, or slightly less, except for instant coffee, gas and coal, which all required more working time.

FRIDGES ARE VITAL TO ALL HOMES

HOUSEHOLD gadgets such as deep-freezers are something of a luxury among tenants of local authority new town homes, according to the survey.

But television sets and refrigerators are vital pieces of equipment for all householders.

In 1983, 98 per cent. of all homes had a television — 81 per cent. colour and 17 per cent. black and white — compared with 66 per cent colour and 31 per cent. black and white in 1979.

Among owner-occupiers in 1983, 88 per cent. owned a colour TV and 11 per cent. a black and white set, compared with ownership of 73 per cent. and 23 per cent. among council tenants.

Even spread

Ninety-four per cent. of homes had a refrigerator, with ownership spread evenly among private and council homes, but only 41 per cent. of council tenants owned a deep-freezer, compared with 70 per cent. of owner-occupiers.

More than three-quarters of homes had a telephone compared with fewer than half 10 years earlier and 64 per cent. had central heating against 39 per cent. in 1973.

Car ownership in Britain has remained fairly steady at 45 per cent. but there has been a small increase to 16 per cent. in the number of homes with two or more cars.

DRUG ADDICTS RISE

The number of new narcotic drug addicts notified to the Home Office more than quadrupled between 1976 and 1983. Between 1982 and 1983 the number rose by 50 per cent. the survey notes.

SEAT BELT SUCCESS

Deaths on the road were down following the introduction of compulsory wearing of seat belts. The total number of road users killed or seriously injured in 1983 was 17 per cent. lower than in 1961, the survey says.

BLACKS 'DENIED JOBS BECAUSE OF COLOUR'

The vast majority of the population believe Britain is a racially-prejudiced society and that black people and Asians are denied jobs because of their race, the survey states.

Ninety per cent. of people said there was prejudice against Asians and blacks. The younger a person, the more likely he or she is to see Britain as a prejudiced country.

Nearly two thirds of the population thought that black people and Asians were denied jobs because of their race and around 70 per cent. supported laws against racial discrimination.

43 pc OF LETTERS SENT 1ST CLASS

More than 43 per cent. of the 10·2 billion inland letters posted in 1983/84 were sent first class, compared with 33 per cent. in 1975-76, the survey reports.

And the number of inland telephone calls in the United Kingdom in the same year, 22·6 billion, was more than double the total in 1970-71.

By IAN BALL in New York

FREDERICK ED SOUDAN, a Texas businessman accused in what was called in a Houston court "the biggest oil fraud in this century," claimed at the opening of his trial to be a victim of pressure from Lloyd's of London.

According to the prosecution, Soudan, 49, a Lebanese-born commodities broker, who runs a Mercedes dealership in Houston, acquired a 319,000-ton supertanker, stole its $56 million (£49 million) cargo of oil and sank the ship all "without a dime in his pockets."

The oil, intended for shipping from Kuwait to Gibraltar, was allegedly unloaded at Durban and sold to the South African government which has been having difficulty in securing oil because of an embargo by Middle Eastern nations. The tanker, the Salem, was allegedly scuttled Jan. 17, 1980, off Senegal.

Mr Randy Bellows, prosecuting said Soudan might have succeeded in his plan but for the British merchant ship, the Trident, which happened on the scene as the Salem went under. The British crew were astonished to find sailors in the Salem's lifeboat fully dressed with coats and ties with packed suitcases and even some food.

American Dream

Lawyers for Soudan, who is being tried with his cousin and brother-in-law, Syrian-born Abdul Wahab al Ghazou, 47, claim his prosecution resulted from pressure from Lloyd's so as to neutralise any claim he might have for the sunken tanker which had been insured with them for $24 million (£21 million).

They claim their client had been "pursuing what is commonly called 'The American Dream'" when he acted as middleman in what he thought was a legitimate oil deal.

Although Soudan never tried to collect on the insurance policy, he is being sued in another Houston court by Loundes Lambert Group Limited, a Lloyd's underwriting firm, for $352,062 (£508,826) in unpaid premiums. His claim is that he did not know the oil had been stolen when he stole it.

GORILLA WEPT FOR PET CAT

A GORILLA who cried after learning its pet cat had been run over by a car will be allowed to select another kitten from a new litter, says the woman who taught the gorilla sign language.

Koko, 12, who has an estimated vocabulary of more than 500 sign-language words, had received the kitten after repeated requests, and the gorilla and its tiny companion had been featured in the latest issue of NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC MAGAZINE.

But just days before Christmas, the cat was found dead alongside the road in Woodside, California, the apparent victim of a passing car.

Koko "really didn't say anything when I told her, but later when I left her with another workers, (the worker) said Koko was crying," said Penny Patterson, director of the Gorilla Foundation, a non-profit foundation.

Koko asked for a cat before Christmas in 1983 and again before her 12th birthday last July 4, Miss Patterson said.

Rapist gives Beethoven airing in Shanghai jail

By HUGH DAVIES in Shanghai

THE cell-blocks of Shanghai jail echoed yesterday to Beethoven's Ninth Symphony as "Conductor Chene," a convicted rapist, rehearsed the prison's orchestra and chorus.

Chen, a tall man in his 30s, waved his baton as if he were still on the rostrum at the city's radio and television studios.

Unhappily for him, he was forced to vacate the post recently after being convicted of sexually assaulting girls who wanted to join, the broadcasting ensemble as violinists.

He is now serving seven years, with his spare time devoted to introducing classical music to the less-fortunate, such as prisoner 5572, Zhao Derong, 27, a former glass-maker and bicycle thief.

Zhao, nearing the end of a four year stretch, has a marvellous tenor voice, and hitching up his blue overalls, he sang a plaintive self-composed ballad on life behind bars, "Don't Worry About Me Mother."

The refrain told of his wish to study hard, learn skills and "make my contribution to the motherland."

The jail, sturdily built by British workmen at the turn of the century, is a model institution within China's Lao-gai system of penal reform, re-education through labour.

The process, a so-called cleansing of criminal minds with hard labour and political theory, is still something that the authorities are reluctant to expose for foreign inspection.

However, municipal officials of Shanghai, who have kept their prisons closed to reporters for two years, decided to give me free access to all sections of their main jail, part of a provincial network including four labour farms and a series of homes for juvenile delinquents.

The prison is in Changyuang, a bustling avenue lined with plane trees in the north east of Shanghai.

Wang Chihe, 57, the governor, said that his only trouble with would-be escapers was when youths began long sentences. "Some young ones try it soon after arriving here. They hide under vans leaving the prison, but we always catch them.

"Our jobis re-education, and prisoners soon realise that the government wants to rescue them from their criminal life."

He claimed that only three per cent. of convicts returned to their own ways. "Some foreign lawyers who I meet query this, but it is perfectly true."

Of the 3,700 inmates, among them 300 women, only one or two per cent. were political prisoners.

'IMMORAL' NHS MAY BE SUED

By DAVID FLETCHER
Health Services Correspondent

A MOVE to sue Oxfordshire Health Authority over the decision to halt life-saving dialysis treatment for Mr Derek Sage, a homeless kidney patient, was backed by the British Kidney Patients Association yesterday.

Mr Michael Hall, warden of the Oxford hostel where Mr Sage lived, said he believed the health authority had a statutory obligation to provide medical care

He said: "The hospital's decision was completely immoral. It shows how homeless and poor people get second-rate treatment from the NHS.

Mrs Elizabeth Ward, president of the British Kidney Patients Association, said that the decision to "sentence a man to death" by cutting off his treatment was "horrendous." Her association would back a move to sue the authority.

Mr Sage is now being treated privately at the Hospital of St John and St Elizabeth, St John's Wood. The association is paying his £1,200 a month medical fees.

Freeze could be back by weekend

By GUY RAIS

OUTLOOK: Continuing cold with severe frost

ALTHOUGH temperatures were generally slightly up yesterday, the London Weather Centre warned that the big freeze could return by the weekend and continue until Monday, at least.

The centre said: "At the moment we are a battleground between the cold winds coming off the Continent and the mild winds from the Atlantic. And for the time being the Continental winds are winning."

Freezing fog yesterday replaced snow as the biggest hazard facing motorists.

The Greater London Ambulance service reported a record number of calls involving pedestrians who had slipped and been injured. There were 2,662 calls against the usual average of 1,700.

The sport of speed skating was revived yesterday on Bury Fen, near Earith, Cambridgeshire, which had been deliberately flooded to provide a course. The British professional championships are to be held tomorrow.

Death toll 100 on Continent

DEATHS caused by weather conditions rose above 100 yesterday as temperatures stayed well below freezing across the Continent, with snow falling on the palm trees and beaches of the French Riviera.

The cold has claimed at least 36 lives in France and the Government has ordered Paris Metro stations to stay open to shelter the homeless.

Spanish civil defence sources said 26 people had died so far from exposure or weather-related road accidents.

The polar cold caused serious damage of crops of Spanish oranges, French artichokes and lettuce and Algerian dates.

In Amsterdam the canals have frozen over and in West Germany tugs and fire boats worked as ice breakers on most major rivers.

294 COLD DEATHS

The death toll in two weeks of bitter cold in northern and eastern India has risen to 294.—Reuter.

PROFIT-TAKING caused a period of hesitancy in London stock markets yesterday, but a minor decline served only to encourage new interest and the main investment sections enjoyed a further advance.

The bulls were confidently predicting an early breakthrough of the 1,000-level in THE FINANCIAL TIMES "30" share index which seemed quite capable of fulfilling these expectations as American and local institutions were still looking for any available lines of stock.

The "30" index finished the session with a rise of 11·9 to 983·1, while the "100" index also moved into new ground with a gain of 15·7 to 1259·2.

Those seeking an explanation for the headlong advance in share values were told that the market was experiencing its own form of inflation, with too much money chasing too little stock.

The industrial sections have impressed observers by the way in which they have bounced back from recent periods of uncertainty and brokers are still reporting that, even when they take profits for clients, the first question is "what do I buy with the money."

In other words, there is still solid backing for those who believe in the extention of the bull phase, although hiccups should be expected from time to time as the market consolidates.

Continued activity on the takeover front again fuelled bouts of activity. P & O, pending the outcome of merger discussions, were suspended at 325p and Sterling Guarantee, at 74p. Wm Leech returned from suspension after the agreed offer from C. H. Beazer and closed 32 higher at 170p, while Beazer themselves were 14 to the good at 386p. Hoskins & Horton rose 13 to 311p on the increased offer from London & Midland Industrials.

The shares of British Telecom rose afresh to 116p before closing 4 better at 115p: dealers suggest that this highly successful issue has been instrumental in whetting the public's appetite for other investment operations. Cable & Wireless, where the Telecom factor has certainly encouraged interest, rose 24 more to 507p.

Further consideration of the satisfactory money supply statistics and the resulting calmer feeling about interest rates prompted increased activity in government securities where the yields on offer were considered attractive. The printed price lists recorded widespread gains of up to £⅝, with the tone still improving after the official close.

There was solid support for leading bank shares, with National Westminster 17 higher at 614p and Barclays 12 up at 584p. Midland, still the subject of takeover hopes, rose 8 to 357p, while Lloyds ended 5 better at 549p. Merchant bankings issues also met demand, Kleinwort Benson rising 50 to 410p and Schroders 13 to 748p.

Breweries accelerated as new buyers found the market short of stock. Bass were prominent with a jump of 22 to 512p, while gains of 6p to 10p were seen in Greenall Whitley, at 171p, Higsons, at 93p, Vaux, at 272p, and Matthew Brown, at 296p.

Imperial Chemical Industries, whose second interim report is due on February 28, were bought up to a high of 750p, a gain of 12p.

Elsewhere in blue chips, American demand lifted B O C Group 17 to 278p, B T R 10 to 634p, and Courtaulds 8 to 150p. Late demand ahead of today's interim statement left Thorn E M I 20 higher at 477p.

Grand Metropolitan ended 7 up at 315p and Trusthouse Forte 5 better at 160p, but sellers predominated in British Aerospace, 8 down at 385p, and Lucas Industries, 9 lower at 254p, the later following a profits downgrading by brokers, Laing & Cruickshank.

Marks & Spencer were wanted and closed 7 up at 127p on reports that the company's shares had been placed on an American brokers "buy" list.

Takeover suggestions accompanied demand for Redfearn National Glass, 5 up at 88p, L C P, 2 firmer at 99p, after 101p, and D R G, 9 better at 161p. Scapa Group jumped 36 more to 476p as buyers discussed the prospect of another surge in the company's United States earnings. Blue Arrow hit another high at 146p, a rise of 8p.

Thin market conditions hastened advances in Wolstenholme, 21 higher at 203p, S Pearson, 20 up at 605p, Invent Energy, 30 better at 570p, and Pleasurama, 18 to the good at 398p. There was a speculative flurry in Comtech, 3½ firmer at 33½p.

The results from Robert Horne were well received and the shares jumped 24 to 156p. On the other hand, Bespak plummeted 53 to 280p on disappointment with their interim figures and subseqent selling in a sensitive market. Johnson Matthey were another dull spot at 66p, down 5p.

Racal Electronics, whose figures are expected on January 23, advanced 14 to 286p. Bowthorpe came into demand and closed 25 higher at 455p, while G E C improved to 220p and Plessey to 210p.

Demand continued for F H Tomkins, up another 12 to 165p, while Howard Machinery, where F H Tomkins has a stake after the takeover of Havters, were 2½ better at 14p. Meggitt Holdings attracted interest at 79p, a gain of 10p.

Among properties, Mountleigh rose 15 more to 300p on further consideration of Tuesday's figures, while Capital & Counties advanced to 214p, London & Edinburgh to 196p, and Peachey to 238p. Trafalgar House enjoyed another burst of strength and closed 16 higher at a peak of 355p.

Life insurances were in good form, with Pearl, £½ up at £10⅝, responded to favourable comment in the QUESTOR column. London & Manchester closed 32 higher at 722p, and Britannic 15 better at 645p. Elsewhere, C E Heath were prominent with a jump of 29 to 596p.

Talk of further takeover developments in the food sector lifted shares such as United Biscuits, 15 up at 214p, Tate & Lyle, 10 higher at 465p, Northern Foods, 12 to the good at 220p, and Halewoods, 20 better at 960p. Stakis rose 8 to a high of 170p.

Stores shares had a relatively quiet session, but buyers appeared towards the close and values were quick to respond. Gains of 7 to 10p were showing in British Home Stores, at 272p, Great Universal, at 707p, Burton, at 430p, and Ward White, at 222p. Mail-orders were strong under the lead of Freemans, 10 up at 192p.

Weaker spot prices brought a reverse in oil shares, but selling was minimal. "Shell" ended 5 off at 650p, after touching 645p at one stage, while Britoil slipped to 200p, Lasmo to 333p, and Tricentrol to 190p. Burmah, initially lower at 222p in the absence of expected takeover news, soon rallied to 252p, up 1p.

Tailpiece

SUGGESTIONS in the City that Rothmans International is working on a plan to dispose of some of its overseas interests, resulting in a major return of liquid funds to its British headquarters, have yet to be confirmed. However, the feeling is that the group could soon be active on the takeover front and an obvious candidate is Dunhill Holdings, the manufacturer of luxury consumer products, which is already 50·6 p.c.-owned by Rothmans.

From their 1984 low of 89p, Dunhill shares have powered ahead to the present 278p, but it would seem reasonable to suggest that holders should be in no hurry to take profits since the price/earnings ratio of 16 does not look too demanding in the circumstances.

The shares look about right on trading grounds, but any takeover offer would probably be well in excess of the current price.

SE Council defers ruling

THE STOCK Exchange Council has deferred a final decision on new membership proposals while the membership sub-committee drafts an amended report based on six hours of Council discussion this week.

General agreement has been reached on the status of new corporate members of the Exchange, but essential details, including the level of voting and representation rights of external members and the level of the "entrance fee" have yet to be fixed. The next Council meeting is due next Tuesday but the committee, headed by George Nissen, may not report until later next week.

Dairies tops £53m

ASSOCIATED Dairies Group has increased its first half profits to Nov. 10 by more than £5m before tax to £53·7m, on turnover up from £876m to £993m.

The interim dividend is to be raised from 1·04p net to 1·15p, payable March 1.

JFB setback

JOHNSON & Firth Brown, the Sheffield special steel and engineering group, was let down by its associate in the year ended Sept. 30, and reports a pre-tax loss of £4·11m against a comparable £10·89m loss.

The group's attributable loss of £8·3m is wholly due to losses of Sheffield Forgemasters, the board says.

Peat in profit

GUINNESS PEAT returned to profit in the year to Sept. 30 with a pre-tax figure of £10·5m compared with a loss of £2·07m in the previous 17 months.

A final dividend of 0·8p takes the total to 1·4p, the first full year payment since 1981.

Harvard 'confusion'

TWO DAYS after its own public relations people announced that licensed dealers Harvard Securities were in possible bid talks with the giant Citicorp group, Harvard yesterday issued a statement to "categorically deny" the receipt of "any communication whatsoever in respect of a bid by Citicorp or any of its associates."

Harvard chairman Tom Wilmot said that "it happened while I was away and was simply a case of total confusion and misunderstanding. We couldn't be more embarrassed."

Gilt-edged options

THE Stock Exchange today introduces its first traded option on a government gilt-edged stock. The stock chosen is Exchequer 10 p.c. 1989 and, as with Ordinary share and index traded options, both calls, which give the right to buy the stock, and puts, giving the right to sell the stock at fixed prices, will be available.

The contract size chosen is £50,000 nominal of stock which makes the new instrument of most interest to institutions rather than private investors.

DMI gold loss

DMI TRUST, the Muslim investment bank which operates under strict Sharia law, sharing risks instead of taking interest, lost $43m on gold bullion holdings in 1983-84, which swallowed up operating profits of $1m and $2m in the last two financial years.

International stock markets race to peaks

By CLIFFORD GERMAN

SHARE prices on the stock exchange in Tokyo, Frankfurt, Zurich and Paris as well as London reached new peaks yesterday although Wall Street, the biggest and most influential stock market, struggled to top 1,200 — 7 p.c. below its all-time peak which was reached in November, 1983.

The Nikkei Dow Jones index in Tokyo rose 83·78 to close at 11,763·57, the Commerzbank index in Frankfurt rose 3·60 to 1,141·40 and the FT 30-share index jumped 11·9 to 983·1.

In Hongkong and Amsterdam share prices slipped back slightly from new peaks reached on Tuesday.

The ability of the European and Japanese markets to advance while Wall Street stagnates ignores the fact that the American economy has shown the fastest growth over the past two years and usually dictates the trends on the smaller markets. The FT 30-share index, which traditionally trades at around 50 p.c. of the Dow Jones index, now stands above 80 p.c.

Michael Prag, senior partner of Simon & Coates, explains the increasingly different paths share prices have taken in the past six months in terms of the prospect for steady growth in Japan and the United Kingdom and possibly faster growth in much of Western Europe this year compared with 1984.

On the other hand, Wall Street investors face the prospect of slower economic growth and increasing pressure on profit margins and continuing nervousness about the Federal government's budget deficit.

Brendan Brown, at Phillips & Drew, sums up the differences in terms of relatively weak currencies boosting company profits in Western Europe and Japan while the strong dollar is putting an increasing squeeze on the profit outlook for American companies.

Michael Walker, of Laurie Milbank, expects the Federal Reserve to act to ease United States interest rates in the next few weeks, a move which would support shares on Wall Street but also encourage the worldwide movement from cash into investments, strengthening bond and share markets alike.

But investors and analysts still expect European and Japanese markets to outperform the United States market. Michael Cook, of Panmure Gordon, contrasts the prospects in the United States with Europe and Japan, where profits have been held back by dear money, the cost of re-equipment and slower domestic growth but the outlook for corporate profits is now improving.

Michael Prag sees the British market possibly following a similar pattern to last year, with an early surge possibly followed by a period of consolidation. Share prices are being supported by a combination of plenty of cash in investors' pockets, the prospects of continuing good profits and dividend income and a series of takeover bids in prospect to tempt investors.

Those who a few months ago were bullish of fixed interest stocks now see equities as a relatively better bet.

CITY COMMENT

City watchdog chews up Stock Exchange plans

UNCONSCIOUSLY perhaps, the Council for the Securities Industry has presented a devastating indictment of the plans to restructure the Stock Exchange. This emerges in a 12-page paper entitled Conflicts of Interest. It comprises a complicated set of draft rules designed to prevent conflicts of interest developing once the clear distinction between stockbrokers acting as agents and stockjobbers operating as principals has vanished.

Instead of the present simple rule that stock market firms may act either for investors, or deal in shares as principals, but may not combine both activities, the Council has come up with 17 general principles. In addition it has put forward 11 ways of judging whether so-called "Chinese walls" between different parts of the same business are effective and has appended the advice, inevitable in the circumstances, that large investment businesses should establish a compliance section whose sole job would be to see that the above rules and regulations were being observed.

Alas, investors are now stuck with this absurdity and will have to make the best of it. The paper sensibly starts by spelling out the law of agency, which enjoins that agents owe a duty of loyalty to their clients. Building on this, a number of extra rules are put forward. They are couched in general terms, being relevant not only to the Stock Exchange itself but to the wider reaches of the securities industry.

The key provision is that where a practitioner can deal with a client either as a principal or as an agent, he or she shall ensure that the client understands the consequences of the practitioner dealing with him, or her, in either capacity.

Moreover, with each transaction, clients must be made fully aware of the capacity in which the practitioner is acting. Advice notes, contract notes or other documents relating to each investment transaction must show whether the practitioner acted as principal, or as agent, or as agent for another.

So far so good. But when the five tests that show whether a practitioner must abide by a best-advantage rule are reached, it has become clear that there will never again be anything simple or clear-cut about transacting business on the Stock Exchange. Most investors will close their eyes and hope for the best. And therein lies the danger.

Clearers losing market share

BRITAIN'S big high street banks appear to be losing their position as the country's most important providers of finance, having already lost their battle for control of the nation's savings. This is demonstrated by the latest official analysis of bank lending, published by the Bank of England.

The Bank's figures reveal that there was an unprecedented surge in credit demand during the three months to November, with manufacturing industry coming forward as a big taker of funds. Government economists are refusing to make too much of this as they suspect the surge in borrowing by industry was partly the result of attempts by companies to beat new VAT rules on imports by buying in early.

What is undeniable, however, is that the major clearers enjoyed far less than their fair share of this new business. Sterling lending to all sectors increased by £6 billion over the quarter, but lending by the clearers increased by only £1·7 billion.

The clearers thus contributed less than £5 to every £10 of new loans made during the quarter, whereas in the past they used to account for more than half of all domestic financing. If their activity in the personal lending and mortgage market is excluded, the picture becomes even more disturbing, with the clearers providing just £2 of every £10 of new loans to business and commerce.

No one, least of all the clearers themselves, seems able to provide a ready explanation for this loss of market share. But foreign banks in London must be rubbing their hands with glee.

The official figures reveal that "other overseas banks," a category which includes the big Canadian, French and German banks with branches in Britain, increased their sterling lending by more than the clearers during the November quarter while the Americans almost matched the clearing bank performance.

The high street banks now account for only 60 p.c. of total sterling lending in Britain and just 40 p.c. of lending to industry and commerce.

Open season for mergers

WE APPEAR to be going through a season of building society mergers. Not only are the smaller names getting together — the Peterborough with the Argyll or the Sussex Mutual with the Citizens Regency — and not only are the big societies hitching themselves to smaller units — the Midshires taking on the Ealing & Acton and the Bradford & Bingley absorbing the Hibernian — but the big societies are arranging weddings with spouses from their own class: the Leeds & Holbeck has finally said yes to the Leeds Permanent, and the Leicester is promised to the Alliance, which the BSA's deputy chairman Roy Cox heads.

The latest to name the day, this week, is the Heart of England, the society of BSA chairman Herbert Walden, with the Coventry.

The number of societies halved between 1910 and 1950, halved again by 1974 and again by 1983, leaving fewer than 200 societies now. And there is no doubt that contraction will continue, how happy can the Woolwich, Anglia and currently leaderless National & Provincial be, for instance, to have been pushed down the ladder by the elevation of the Alliance & Leicester?

For the urge to merge comes partly from a league table mentality, trying to jump a position, or at least merge defensively to maintain a place. But the current trend is also related to the major changes facing the building societies from 1987 onwards, when new legislation will be implemented. There will be economies of scale in combining to offer banking or insurance services and in marketing.

Mergers are easier to implement now than in recent times because the differences between the societies have been reduced. Interest rates to investors are very close again, and while basic mortgage rates vary, differentials for larger loans are diminishing. Accounts can be integrated quite easily.

But do customers benefit from size? True the branch network may be wider; but the extra offices may be on the opposite side of the county and your local branch may be sacrificed in rationalisation. Savers' rates tend to be trimmed down, perhaps because experience shows that management costs can rise sharply in the short-term and not fully fall again.

Jobless figures hearten Wall St

By JAMES SRODES in Washington

GROWING expectations that America's economy will sail through 1985 with jobs growth and lower interest rates yesterday boosted Wall Street's share prices to their best daily gain this year.

The Labour Department reported that the unemployment rate rose 0·1 p.c. to 7·2 p.c. in December from a revised 7·1 p.c. in November.

The small increase in the jobless rate was caused by an inordinate jump in people entering the job market and in fact the report showed that America's economy actually recorded strong job gains in December.

The December figures showed that over 300,000 jobs were added to business payrolls during the holiday month.

A small bank in America's mid-west cut its prime rate to 10½ p.c. from 10¾ p.c. and although no major banks followed through, the move was in line with short term rate trends.

The broker loan rate was cut to 9 p.c. from 9½ p.c. by Bankers' Trust. Federal funds, which banks charge each other for overnight loans, also declined sharply during the day, falling below 8 p.c. for the first time in weeks.

The good news gave Wall Street investors' something to cheer about and share prices surged in a burst of enthusiasm that had pushed the Dow Jones industrial average above the critical 1,200 mark by mid-afternoon.

The Dow Jones closed 11·04 higher at 1202·74. Sterling closed at $1·1420 against 1·1480.

Duffryn defence looks for £19·5m pre-tax

By MICHAEL BECKET

THE miners' strike will slice £2·5 million off the Powell Duffryn pre-tax profit for the current year to end-March, but it will still achieve £19·5 million, the company forecast yesterday in its defence against the £177 million bid from Hanson Trust.

The strike has not been all loss, chief executive John Franklin points out in his letter to shareholders, as the decline in the business for coal-carrying ships was partially offset by "developing additional oil trading opportunities." And the ships have now been redeployed, so "we have been able to confine the major impact of the strike on profits to the first half."

Had the company achieved the £22 million the profit would have been 20 p.c. up on last year which was itself 42 p.c. higher than the previous year. Early next month the board will be able to see how fuel distribution has gone and update the forecast.

Longer-term prospects are also rosy, Mr Franklin tells shareholders, following the sale of less profitable businesses and capital spending. He sees potential for growth in the Hamworthy Engineering subsidiary's pumps, anaerobic digesters and filtration equipment as well as in the American Hiller subsidiary.

The board is still urging refusal of the Hanson bid and is forecasting a total dividend of at least 18p against 16p last time. Powell Duffryn shares slipped 1p to 437p compared with a bid value of 451p at yesterday's closing price for Hanson of 338p, down 4p.

Hanson said yesterday that the Powell Duffryn document "isn't a surprise to the market as the share price showed, nor it is a surprise to us." But the company refused to comment on rumours that it was already gearing for another takeover bid, for Courtaulds.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH—NATWEST ENTERPRISE AWARD

£20,000 IN PRIZES FOR YOUNG BUSINESSES

FOR THE third year running, The Daily Telegraph and the National Westminster Bank have joined forces to offer substantial cash prizes to reward enterprising small businesses. The competition is being organised by Venture Capital Report.

In each of the previous years, more than 200 companies entered their names. On both occasions the judges were extremely impressed by the high standard. Any one of the 20 companies shortlisted each time would have been a worthy winner and the four finalists in 1983 and 1984 have without exception continued to forge ahead.

The competition itself helped: sales director David Williamson of Dorniver, which produces drilling machines used on printed circuit boards, said the award provided status — "potential customers started looking at us seriously."

The competition is open to all established but still young businesses in manufacturing or service industries. The prizes, subscribed by the National Westminster Bank, are a first prize of £15,000 and the balance of the £20,000 for the runners up. The award carries considerable prestige and the winner and runners-up will receive Press coverage.

Companies eligible to enter should be British, independent and managed by their owners. They should have been established a minimum of two years by January 1, 1985. To be "small" assets should be not more than £750,000, turnover should not exceed £1·5 million and there should be a maximum of 50 employees.

The judges, whose chairman will be Sir Owen Green, chairman and chief executive of BTR, will be looking for businesses that combine a record of success and enterprise in the past with effective plans for future growth.

In addition, the judges, who also include Philip Girle, director and general manager of the National Westminster Bank; Andreas Whittam Smith, City Editor of The Daily Telegraph; and Angus Forrest of Venture Capital Report, will pay attention to innovation and sheer ability to survive.

Last year's winner, Pipeline Induction Heat, which produces heat equipment for welding, and coats the pipelines afterwards to prevent corrosion, found that winning brought offers of money and persuasion to go public.

The company is now operating in 11 countries and found it a help, for instance, that the Japanese had heard of both the newspaper and the bank which had awarded the prize.

The 1983 winner, Noblelight, manufacturer of pulse and continuous wave lamps, said the award established Noblelight as a company of substance. "Before the award the question was who is Noblelight? After the award they knew."

Entry forms should be obtained from Venture Capital Report, 20 Baldwin Street, Bristol BS1 1SE, by writing or by telephoning 0272 272250. Completed entries must be submitted by February 15, 1985. The names of the winner and runners-up will be announced at a prize giving ceremony on March 22, 1985 at the National Westminster Tower in the City of London.

Oil stocks and prices decline

By ROLAND GRIBBEN

OIL prices lost ground yesterday in spot market trading after the sharp rise earlier in the week helped by the cold spell sweeping Europe. North Sea price falls ranged between 15 and 35 cents a barrel in what traders described as active but nervous markets.

The fall came as International Energy Agency figures released in Paris showed that oil companies have been continuing to run down stocks, while the Energy Department listed the names of the 135 companies seeking licences in Britain's ninth offshore licensing round.

North Sea Brent oil, the most heavily traded crude, lost 15 cents for prompt delivery and finished the day at around the $26·50 a barrel mark, a discount of $2·15 on what traders say is an indefensible official price of $28·65.

Brent was being quoted at $26·20 for delivery next month and $26·05 for shipment in March, a fall of 35 cents on Tuesday's levels.

The market is continuing to point to a cut in official prices, but the British National Oil Corporation and the Government show no sign of wanting to take any initiative that would further upset the market or the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The Energy Agency's latest monthly oil market report confirmed that the rundown in oil stocks in the industrialised world continued in the fourth quarter last year at the rate of 800,000 barrels a day.

Oil company stocks dropped by 1·2 million barrels but increases in government-held reserves, mainly in the United States, offset part of the reduction. At the end of the year stocks were estimated to be about the same as a year ago at 427 million tons, equivalent to 90 days demand.

The report says that oil demand in the industrialised world last year rose by 2·7 p.c. and is forecast to grow by 1 p.c. this year. Opec output last month is put at 16·8 million barrels a day against a ceiling of 16 million barrels, but the agency confirms that non-Opec output, including Britain's contribution, accounted for almost all the growth in world oil supplies last year.

The Energy Department plans to announce by the end of the month the "winners" of the exploration blocks earmarked for auction in the ninth licensing round. A total of 52 companies put up a total of around £240 million for 13 of the 15 blocks on offer, and after stripping out the unsuccesful bids the Government is expected to end up with £120 million.

The auction list includes the leading explorers like Shell, Esso and British Petroleum as well as as the privatised Britoil

● Charterhouse Petroleum is paying around £3 million to buy the oil and gas interests of Axel Johnson, the Swedish group, in the United Kingdom sector of the North Sea. Johnson is taking Charterhouse shares in exchange and says it plans to hold on to them.

Fraud prosecutions to get DPP priority

By BARBARA CONWAY

THE DIRECTOR of Public Prosecutions said yesterday that the investigation and prosecution of fraud will become the major single concern of his office once new proposals for creating a national prosecution service come into effect.

Speaking to THE DAILY TELEGRAPH, Sir Thomas Hetherington commented that "the problem of fraud is a very important one, perhaps much more so than we thought a few years ago, and we are treating it very seriously."

Part of the new crackdown on commercial crime and corruption are the Fraud Investi- Group units set up by the DDP's office. These have been operating on an ad hoc basis for several years, but have now been formalised and placed under the supervision of principal assistant DPP John Wood in separate offices.

The brief is to examine all potential fraud cases, at the earliest possible moment, with the active assistance of the police, Department of Trade and any relevant experts. The department has, for the first time, taken on three in-house accountants for expert advice.

"We have an extra budget of £100,000 for this financial year to help with expanding the fraud divisions," explained Sir Thomas, "and in due course, Treasury permitting, we hope to expand further.

"It might not sound all that much but, with the new prosecution service, we will have more officers free here at headquarters to deal with fraud cases," he added.

Sir Thomas is aware of criticism that the earlier FIGs were not conspicuously successful. But he said "on the whole we think they did work, in speeding up investigations and ensuring that all sides knew what was going on, where apparent failures occurred, they were through matters outside the scope of the group, such as evidence from overseas witnesses."

Matters such as admissable evidence from overseas and powers to search for and "freeze" assets of suspected fraudsters through court orders, formed part of the DPP's evidence to the Roskill Commission on treatment of fraud.

"I did also advocate the idea of replacing fraud juries with a panel of assessors," stated Sir Thomas. "The problem is that in fraud cases a jury of peers means people who are likely to understand finance and they are just not the kind of people likely to be free for a long trial."

Equally important, he feels, is the idea of an early pre-trial review "which would give the judge the chance to look at the evidence and decide if the case should go ahead to full trial.

"We think it is also very important to call those involved in any trial, including counsel, to be at the pre-trial stage.

And it would help to avoid a great deal of confusion if, say, there could be some form of agreed statement signed by accountants on financial aspects of a case which are not disputed," argued Sir Thomas.

The theme of continuity is also regarded as very important in the FIGs, the first of which are handling corruption allegations at the Property Services Agency and cases relating to Lloyd's of London.

In the past there have been frequent rifts between the DPP and the City of London and Metropolitan Fraud Squads over the length of time taken to decide on fraud prosecutions.

"If the police let us know about cases early enough, they will be treated as quickly as possible under the new system" said Sir Thomas.

P & O Sterling terms next week

By JOHN RUDOFSKY

LONG-AWAITED merger terms between Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation and Sterling Guarantee Trust are now expected Monday morning, with merchant bankers for both sides hammering out final details.

The basic terms, in the form of a bid by P & O for Sterling Guarantee, were finalised in the early hours of yesterday morning between advisers. Then Sir Jeffrey Sterling, chairman of both companies, called a halt to share dealings, and now both boards of directors will need to give their approval before the deal is made public.

All the indications yesterday suggested straight share swap terms by P & O for Sterling Guarantee, possibly on a one-for-five basis.

With P & O suspended at 325p these terms would value Sterling Guarantee shares at 65p each and the company at £265 million.

But Sterling Guarantee's shares were up another 5p to 74p before the official suspension, valuing the property business at £302 million.

There was certainly a fear within the companies that stock market speculation was getting a little ahead of the game with both shares moving up sharply in recent days. In particular Sir Jeffrey does not want P & O shareholders to feel aggrieved by the takeover terms.

Dealings were halted not only with negotiations at an advanced stage but with fears of a disorderly market in the shares developing.

Sir Jeffrey said yesterday: "The merger will co-ordinate the strength and management skills of the companies which bode well for the future."

He sees advantages for top management in combining the operations. Sir Jeffrey and long-standing deputy Bruce MacPhail are on both boards and close City observers are keen to back the Sterling-MacPhail teams.

Explaining his enthusiasm for the expected deal Alan Carter, of Scrimgeour Kemp-Gee, remarked: "The whole thing is about Sir Jeffrey. He knows how to run a company and how to make money for shareholders."

Sir Jeffrey is looking for synergy in combining the Bovis arm of P & O with Sterling Guarantee's property expertise. Sir Jeffrey also wants to build on the service aspect of both sets of operations.

He is anxious to keep down gearing in the combined balance sheet for future deals, which is why Sterling Guarantee's 20 p.c. stake in P & O worth £85·90 million will be placed before the takeover goes through rather than cancelled in the share exchange.

The shares will go to institutions, but a placing may be extended to all P & O shareholders as a sweetener for the deal.

They lost their cross-Channel shareholders' perk when P & O Ferries was sold last week for £12·5 million as part of the dock-clearing exercise for this deal.

Sir Jeffrey Sterling . . . 'Merger well for the future.'

Sir Jeffrey, 50 and knighted in the New Year honours list, has a strong City following. He moved into the property company, then called Town & City, when it had all but crashed in June 1974. Its value was then less than £1 million.

Russians hinder CSO sales

CENTRAL Selling Organisation's annual sales of rough gem and industrial diamonds were hindered last year by Russian marketing tactics in polished stones, the impact of high real interest rates and the strength of the dollar.

Figures released by the De Beers' marketing arm show 1984 sales of $1·613 billion compared with $1·599 billion in 1983, a 0·9 p.c. increase.

After first half sales of $945 million the outcome for the second six months was $668 million. The year's total is generally at the lower end of market expectations.

Currency movements have, however, swelled the figures in South African rand terms—the currency in which De Beers accounts—from R1·77 billion to R2·31 billion, a 30 p.c. increase. Had the sales been converted at year-end exchange rates in both 1984 and 1983 the rand figures would have been R3·21 billion compared with R1·95 billion.

Beazer's £26m wins Leech

THE prospect of C. H. Beazer becoming a major national force in housebuilding took a big step forward yesterday when it agreed a £26 million bid for Newcastle housebuilder William Leech.

The new terms — Beazer narrowly failed with a £21·5 million offer for Leech last summer—are 165p of 8½ p.c. convertible loan stock, underwritten for cash, for every Leech Ordinary. At current market prices this is worth more than 173p a share, and Leech returned from suspension to close 32p higher at 170p. Beazer improved 14p to 386p.

The offer is being recommended by the Leech board and has won approval from its founder president, William Leech, who vetoed the William Leech Foundation's vote to accept Beazer's previous offer in respect of its 29·7 p.c. holding.

Beazer now says it is its present intention to allow its £48 million offer for Bath & Portland, topped by Consolidated Gold Fields' agreed £61·5 million bid on Christmas Eve, to lapse.

● Bath & Portland chairman David Macdonald says in Cons. Gold's formal offer document, issued last night, that the price being offered was a good one and 23·6 p.c. higher than Beazer's offer.

COMPANIES

Hoskins agrees £8·4m from LMI

LONDON and Midland Industrials is offering seven of its shares for every four Hoskins and Horton, valuing the company at £8·4 million compared with the £8·3 million of the last all-share bid from Scottish Heritable Trust.

L M I is also offering a cash alternative worth £8·1 million.

Both bidders have now put in two offers for the hospital and light engineering company. Selling the Horton side of the business to Redland has made an increased offer possible, said L M I. The Hoskins and Horton board is recommending the latest offer and accepting for its own shares.

Bespak

A WARNING of static growth at Bespak, the aerosol valve maker which in July was forecasting a further substantial leap forward in sales and pre-tax profits for 1984-5, yesterday sent the shares plunging 53 to 280p.

Opening half pre-tax profits are up from £1·05m to £1·38m. However, a considerable reduction in the requirements of the group's largest customer and additional costs in the American project and in development generally mean that the closing months cannot be expected to match the results now reported. Nevertheless, the year as a whole should at least be equal to 1984-4's £2·11m pre-tax figure.

The interim dividend goes up from 1·5p to 1·75p, payable Feb. 25 from earnings of 8·7p (6·3p).

Hollas Group

DESPITE the fall in the value of the pound which has seriously affected its garment distribution and yarn divisions, Hollas Group has succeeded in pushing its first half pre-tax profits up by £51,000 to £454,000. The currency factor and a depressed trading climate continue, but chairman Anthony Lawson is anticipating further progress during the rest of the year.

In 1983-84 Hollas, an importer and distributor of textiles and fabrics, went on to £1·05m.

The interim dividend is again 1p on April 1 from earnings of 1p (1·2p) struck after tax of £182,000 (£127,000).

Robert Horne

ROBERT HORNE Group, the largest independent paper merchant in Britain which was nearly nine times oversubscribed when it joined the USM last year, has ended 1983-84 with its pre-tax profits up by £2·46m to a new peak of £6·55m. Moreover the current year has started well with all subsidiaries showing an improvement on the corresponding period.

Meantime holders are getting a 1·5p final on February 22 making 2·5p, as against equal to 1·4p from earnings of 12·8p (9·8p adjusted).

IN BRIEF

M & G Dual Trust: Full year gross revenue £2·1m (£1·9m). Tax £651,000 (£571,000). Eps per income share 25·59p (23·17p). Asset value per capital share 930·28p (765·09p). Final dividend 13·9p, payable March 4, making 25·5p (23·25p).

Thew Engineering Group: First half p't pft £509,000. This result puts the group well ahead of its projected profits forecast of £500,000 for the year ending April 30.

Moorgate Investment Trust: First half net profit £240,500 (£222,700). Gross revenue £390,300 (£357,100) including £511,900 (£303,800) franked. Eps 5·16p (4·76p). Nav 290·3p (244·8p). Interim dividend 4p (3·25p) partly to reduce disparity, payable February 4. Board expect the final dividend—6·05p—will be at least maintained.

BIDS AND DEALS

Time Products has acquired the House of Lipkin from the Comet Group. Lipkin is the principal manufacturing group in Britain of rings, jewellery and pearls.

Hoechst has bought Arthur H. Cox & Co., a pharmaceutical company based in Barnstaple, for an undisclosed sum.

NEW LIFE BUSINESS

Eagle Star

BUOYANT results for new life and pensions business are reported by Eagle Star for 1984, with total worldwide premiums up from £152m to £206m. New annual premiums worldwide slipped from £54·4m to £50·5m, but this was more than offset by a 60 p.c. growth in new single premiums from £97·4m to £156m.

In the United Kingdom there was a substantial increase in purchase moneys for new immediate annuities from £58·9m to £87·7m —the principal contributor to the growth in total United Kingdom single premiums from £85·1m to £118.

With the acquisition of the investment management of a number of BAT Industries' pension schemes, the value of the total funds under management at the end of the year had risen to more than £850m.

Legal & General

LEGAL & GENERAL reveals increased worldwide life and pensions new business for 1984. New annual premiums totalled £133m against £127m and new single premiums rose from £221m to £316m.

At home, individual anual premiums totalled £67·5m (£78·1m) and single premiums were £269m (£194m). After taking into account the exceptional M I R A S-inspired business in 1983, last year showed a good result, demonstrating particularly that mortgages are still being backed by life assurance products despite the loss of L A P R, says group chief executive Joe Palmer.

London & Manchester Group: Annual premiums net £21·9m (£21·9m): single premiums £41·6m (£33·9m). Sums assured £587m (550m).

Scottish Equitable: Total annual premiums £27·3m (£25m); single premiums £36·8m (£44·2m).

Hearts of Oak Benefit Society. New annual premium income £1·49m (£1·36m) consisting principally of £954,200 (£699,300) conventional life and pensions business and £535,800 (£661,500) linked life business. In addition new single premium income of £1·9m (£1·88m) was written.

THE QUESTOR COLUMN

Assoc Dairies bottled up

LOWER investment income, a shortage of supplies to the milk manufacturing division and the impact of the miners' strike have whipped the cream off the top of Associated Dairies Group interim profits to November 10.

Pre-tax profits of £53·7 million against £48·7 million are just below expectations, and full year forecasts are now being revised downwards a shade.

Investment income has been cut as cash balances have been reduced by the heavy weighting of capital expenditure towards the first half of the current year.

The company has already spent £63 million on investment in new stores and refurbishments, compared with £81·6 million of capital investment for the whole of last year.

Five new stores were opened during the first six months this time and another two were opened at the beginning of the second half to complete the entire opening programme for the current year.

Cash balances inevitably will be lower by the year-end. Last year they were around £67·5 million but by the end of the current year they could be down to £55 million, even after taking into account the proceeds on the disposal of two lossmaking operations, Wades Department Stores and Wallbridge Carpet Mills.

Wallbridge has already been sold to its own management, while negotiations are currently under way concerning the sale of Wades to the majority of its directors.

Associated Dairies estimates that the shortage of milk supplies to its manufacturing operation and the loss of profits caused by the miners' strike had a total pre-tax impact of around £2 million.

The milk shortage was partly due to E E C regulations, but much more to the effect of a dry summer on the quality of dairy feed and consequently milk production. That could improve this year, but the E E C regulations will remain and it is anyone's guess when the mining dispute will be resolved.

Pre-tax profits for the full year should be around £120 million against £105 million for a prospective earnings multiple at 148p of 17. That is about par for the course among food retail leaders, but this one may have more upward potential when and if its outside troubles are solved.

Guinness Peat in from the cold

GUINNESS PEAT is back in business. After years of squabble and missed dividends, profits are now running at an acceptable rate, the shares boast a dividend yield, and it can think about its development rather than its survival.

For the year to September 30, 1984, pre-tax profits emerge at £10·5 million, a result which can be measured only against the background of funds employed of around £100 million.

Previous accounts cover 17 months and exclude the banking business, so the £3·58 million loss before tax seen in that period is of limited relevance. But it is easy to see that the group is improving fast.

That trend should continue. The major profit earner is the insurance broking business Fenchurch, which has pushed profits up fivefold in three years. A strong dollar helps, but expanding market share and tight overhead control—still a rare quality in insurance broking—mean that the profits growth is much more than luck.

Banking had a flat year, but shows signs of picking up in the current 12 months, and the aviation side is also feeling the benign effects of a strong dollar. The current year will also see a significant contribution from property development, which added nothing in 1983-84.

With the rising tide of profitability, the group can afford the luxury of reshaping itself into a coherent whole, rather than remaining a holding company with a collection of diverse interests. A year from now, it will have a new name and will expect to be regarded as an "investment bank."

Acquisitions will inevitably form part of the reshaping process and net debt of £30 million against shareholders' funds of £70 million allows some scope for cash purchases.

The group might then be able to avoid falling into the trap that so injured the market standing of Mercantile House, which simply issued too much new equity too quickly.

If it can, it might also hang on to its premium rating. The shares at 62p, sell at 14·3 times reported earnings, compared with Mercantile House on perhaps nine times earnings for the year to April 1985.

After years in the wilderness, Guinness Peat shares are once again a sensible investment.

Firth Brown's work undone

JOHNSON & Firth Brown has an anchor round its neck in Sheffield Forgemasters, a 50-50 associate with British Steel Corporation. But for this it would have had a happier story to tell for the year ended September 30—an attributable loss of £8·3 million, all due to Forgemasters, compared with an attributable loss of £12·1 million.

At the operating level J F B turned in a £5·44 million profit, up from £1·82 million, helped by a full year of its remaining United States subsidiary and stronger performances within the aerospace and superalloy companies. Operating profit could have been at least £750,000 higher but for a provision against a casting operation at Scunthorpe.

The operating profit improvement underlines the fundamental progress being made, but the pre-tax line and the balance sheet will continue to be hurt while Forgemasters stays in the red. The group has a £25 million investment in Forgemasters, but even if a buyer were found a price shy of net asset value is likely.

The group's pre-tax outcome for the year was a £4·11 million loss against a £10·89 million loss in 1983, but preference dividends are now three years in arrears. Shareholders' funds at balance sheet date are down from £58 million to £50·6 million and gearing remains high.

One saving grace is that J F B is not affected on the cash front by Forgemasters' problems, and has not been required to put up even one penny of a £10 million cash injection to Forgemasters.

Life is still tough within its sector, and a formal forecast of what lies in store this year will be given in February. But if the group's own operations continue to move forward much, if not all, the good work will be undone by the associate.

The shares were ½p better at 13p yesterday. They remain a speculation.

MONEY & EXCHANGES

THE pound came under renewed pressure on the exchanges yesterday as the British authorities made it clear that they do not want interest rates to rise for the time being.

A £2 billion special facility for the banking system organised by the Bank of England was seen as an important signal by foreign exchange markets.

A firm dollar added to sterling's difficulties, with the pound closing 63 points lower at $1·1432 having touched $1·1400 in early dealings.

The pound also lost ground to other major currencies, including the mark. Its international index touched an all-time low of 72·2 before recovering to 72·3 against 72·7 overnight.

The cost of wholesale funds in London eased a further 1/16 p.c. to just under 10 p.c. for three month money.

Gold weaker

THE London gold price closed $1 weaker at $301·25 an ounce yesterday, but during the day was again below the $300 an ounce level. The metal continues to be influenced by dollar movements.

The London spot silver price was 10·65p weaker at 514·70p an ounce.

TECHNICAL SALES REPRESENTATIVE
The Greater London Area
Durapipe

We are leading manufacturers of high integrity thermoplastic pressure pipework systems with an enviable reputation for quality and reliability in the market place.
Due to expansion, we have a vacancy for a Technical Sales Representative to cover the Greater London area. The products are primarily stocked by a national distributor network and sold throughout industry. The job entails naming specifications and sales for Durapipe products and supporting and motivating the local distributors.
Candidates should have a good general education, with preferably a technical background. Selling experience would be an advantage, but is not essential, as full product and sales training will be given. What we really want is an intelligent, ambitious and enthusiastic person, probably in their twenties, who is looking progress made is a direct result of their own efforts.
There is an attractive salary, car and other benefits. Initial interviews will be held locally.
For an informal discussion or Application form please telephone 0543 79909 or write to The Personnel Department, Glynwed Thermoplastics Limited, Durapipe, Walsall Road, Norton Canes, Cannock, Staffs, WS11 3NS.

TIMBER PRESERVATION AND DAMP PROOFING SURVEYORS

Due to expansion and internal promotions we have an immediate requirement for two experienced surveyors, with senior management opportunities for suitably qualified candidates. Salary range—£8,000-£10,000 plus. Contact D. E. Nubel, VX Services, 11, Guildford St., W.C.1. 01-242 4251.

TOP SALES STAFF

We are a growing British cleaning chemical company. Established for 10 years, now starting the next phase of our planned expansion programme in the following areas: Local Authorities, Industry, Hospitals, Transport, Builders, Catering, Airports, Food Processing and Breweries. We have a fully tested range of competitively priced products. A prime requirement in the plan is to establish a fully experienced team of sales staff, with established contacts, who can make things happen fast. If you are already in the business we want to hear from you. An excellent package of salary/commission/bonus is on offer together with a company car. WE ONLY WANT THE BEST and if that is you then write in confidence to the Sales manager, Sovac Chemicals Ltd., Millwall Wharf, Manchester Road, London, E.14. 01-515 7370

TOP CLASS AGENTS. Established agents required in most areas, calling on builders, architects and Local Government, to cope with enormous inquiries for nationally featured new British invention. Write to Dri'Sol Technics Ltd., 107 Picton Road, Liverpool L15 4LF.

TRAINEE REPRESENTATIVE (BATHROOMS)
(Greater London)

Can't achieve your ambition to sell because you have no sales experience? Or seeking to spread your wings in a more challenging sales organisation?
Either way, this vacancy will represent one of those all-too-rare opportunities.
Expansion of our sales force (to remain in the forefront) enables us to offer this first rung on the sales career ladder.
You will receive thorough product and field training and full support. You may be surprised at how soon you cease to be a trainee and are allocated your own "patch."
Customers comprise builders' merchants, plumbers and specifying authorities. You will be selling bathrooms — vitreous china sanitary ware, acrylic baths and stylish brass fittings (taps, showers, etc.).
To find out more, please apply in writing giving sufficient details of yourself to secure an interview. Applicants (of either sex) should write to I. F. Fielding, Personnel Director, Ideal-Standard Ltd., P.O. Box 60, National Avenue, Hull, HU5 4JE, quoting Ref. 84/31.

SITUATIONS WANTED

YOUNG BUILDER having specialised in the renovation and maintenance of domestic and commercial properties seeks supervisory position with company / hotel group / similar. 0252 714630.

The Design and Engineering Office at Spa Road, Bolton, is part of the Hatfield/Lostock Division, which is the centre for the air launched weapon systems of British Aerospace Dynamics Group.

The facility provides a stimulating environment where investment both in terms of human resources and advanced technological equipment is at a very high level. An integrated network system for linking mini computers with an IBM mainframe at the Hatfield site is currently under development and extensive use is already made of CADAM work stations and mini computers.

ELECTRONICS AND SYSTEMS ENGINEERS

are now required in the following areas:

AIRBORNE EQUIPMENT SYSTEMS DESIGN

Systems Engineers to establish specifications for new airborne equipment such as missile power supply and control systems and particularly to link aircraft and missile computer systems.

Electronics Engineers to translate the above specifications into actual circuit designs and to develop the product through ground and flight trials into production.

TEST SYSTEMS

To ensure that today's sophisticated missile systems perform to specification, equally advanced Automatic Test Equipment, simulating strict operational conditions, has to be continually developed.

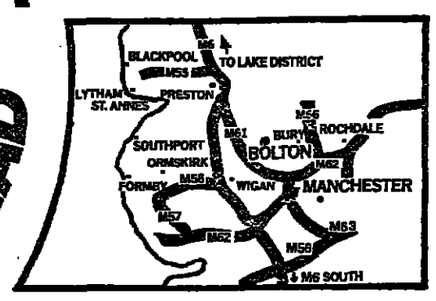
Electronics Engineers to design and develop computer or microprocessor based automatic test equipment; to create and prove software programmes; to establish hardware interfaces between new products and test equipment, and to appraise test equipment for production use.

POST-DESIGN SUPPORT ENGINEERS

The establishment and maintenance of essential links between design, production, and the end-user, requires Engineers with considerable practical experience — this may well have been gained in a Services environment — coupled with an ability to 'get on' with Engineers in all disciplines.

The positions offer excellent conditions of employment with a contributory Pension Scheme which affords free Life Assurance.

Located in Bolton, the Spa Road Design Office is close to the M61, providing excellent motorway links to all parts of the country, and is ideally situated for access to the Lancashire Coast, Lake District and Yorkshire Dales.



The Bolton area enjoys the advantage of relatively low cost housing and relocation assistance would be considered for successful applicants.

Ideally, candidates should be experienced Engineers with a recognised qualification.

People who wish to apply for these positions should write giving brief details of experience and qualifications to:— Mr. J. Penlington — Personnel Officer, British Aerospace PLC, Dynamics Group, Bolton Design and Engineering Office, Spa Road, Bolton, BL1 4SS. Quoting Reference D.T. 1.

SALES ENGINEER

IS THIS OPPORTUNITY PURPOSE-BUILT FOR YOU?

We're seeking a capable, dynamic Sales Engineer for a small, autonomous Business Group of Imperial Chemical Industries plc. The business—a market leader in the design and manufacture of purpose-built industrial equipment—is growing fast and offers excellent prospects to the right man or woman.

Responsibilities will centre on the negotiation and securing of contracts, including the identification of new business opportunities and liaison with technical design and project management teams. The potential customer base will be UK manufacturing and process industries.

As you'd expect, selection criteria are high. You must be aged 25-35, with a degree or equivalent probably in an engineering or related discipline. A demonstrably successful record of sales in an industrial or capital plant environment is essential, as are well-developed communication skills and strong self-motivation. Location? You'll be working from home, covering the Midlands and Southern England.

You can look forward to an attractive salary, company car and after a qualifying period to profit sharing and other bonuses. The generous benefits package also includes relocation assistance, where appropriate.

If you're confident that you can meet the requirements, please write enclosing a full c.v. to Mr. B.J. Wood, who is advising the company on this appointment.

ARA International, 17-19 Maddox Street, London W1R 0EY (AGY).

Manufacturing Management

... in a jobbing shop environment to £16,000

As suppliers of large, specialist fabrications to the electricity generating industry, defence, process engineering industries and capital equipment manufacturers this internationally recognised company has to respond positively in a demanding, high technology environment. To cope with expansion it is now necessary to introduce two talented and ambitious Manufacturing Managers into key production areas.

Assembly and Fabrication

Aged 30 to 50 and educated to at least HNC level applicants will have spent several years in manufacturing preferably building special purpose machines and with some experience of machine shop management.

They should be strong characters with a trade type background used to managing in a unionised environment. Exposure to QA in the nuclear or military fields would be helpful but is not essential.

Production Services

Essentially, experience should have been gained in a "one-off" or jobbing environment. Responsibility is for production engineering, pre-production planning, defining specifications for sub-contract manufacture and monitoring output. Additional duties will include providing the input for the preparation of estimates and tenders. Above all candidates must be respected engineers with the ability to influence change; often in a complex IR situation.

Both posts provide challenging work with scope for advancement and personal development. Salaries are supplemented by a range of benefits. Location is Greater Manchester.

Applicants should write with full c.v. quoting Ref: AR/055, to March Personnel Services, 33 King Street, Manchester M2 6AA.

Qualified Accountant

BRISTOL

Clerical Medical

Clerical Medical is a specialist life assurance and pensions Group which is noted for its financial strength and stability. The Society currently manages assets in excess of £2,000m. and is one of the largest mutual offices in the UK. We are now in an exciting period of major corporate development, witnessed by the recent highly successful launch of new Unit Linked products.

It remains an important part of our success that we operate well developed accounting systems in a climate of rising costs and increasing competition. Future plans and recent promotions have created an opportunity for a qualified accountant to join our accounting team.

You would initially work in the management accounting function, principally on costing and budgetary control, and you would also participate in the design and implementation of new accounting systems.

To be successful in your application, you must be able to demonstrate the ability to communicate well at all levels. It is likely that you will be between 24 and 30 and that you will have some experience of costing and budgetary control using computerised systems.

There is considerable scope for personal career development in the Society in this period of planned expansion. This post will attract an excellent range of benefits, including non-contributory pension and a staff house purchase loan scheme. Your remuneration package will be c.£11,500 depending on age and experience.

Please send full career details or telephone for an informal discussion: Mrs. S. Hawkes, Personnel Officer, Clerical Medical and General Life Assurance Society, Narrow Plain, Bristol BS2 0JH. Tel: Bristol 290566, ext. 471.

Opportunities for Young Experienced Graduates

West Yorkshire, c.£14,000 + car (after induction period)

A large textile based public group with subsidiaries in the UK and overseas offers several opportunities to young, experienced graduates of above average ability. The Group has now weathered the problems of the early 1980's, is now at reasonable levels of profitability and poised for expansion. General management teams are older, rather than younger, and over the next few years management opportunities will arise that cannot be filled from within the Group. Applications are invited from young (late 20's) experienced graduates of outstanding ability and potential who may find their progress blocked within their present company. They may come from any discipline; sales, marketing, production, finance or general management; who after an induction into Group activities and philosophies will be groomed to senior management positions as they arise. They must be well trained, disciplined professionals with outstanding track records and have the ability, ambition, personality and potential to grow quickly. The opportunities are real and relocation assistance will be given.

Area Manager

London & Home Counties
5-figure salary + bonus + car

ROYAL WORCESTER Spode

A major force in the high quality ceramic tableware and giftware markets, we are currently seeking a very high-calibre Area Manager, for London and the Home Counties.
In the highly competitive retail marketplace creating the ideal sales environment is what successful business development is all about. From product design, national advertising, 'in store' merchandising, to training and motivating staff; we are in business to create the image that customers will buy.
Aged 28-40, male or female, the successful candidate will probably already be based in South London (although relocation assistance will be considered). This is a demanding appointment offering profit responsibility for over 20 retail concessions located within leading department stores.
The post, which offers a great deal of scope for personal initiative and creativity, requires a proven track record of sales success and high levels of energy and enthusiasm. The ability to develop profitable sales and identify new business opportunities will be prime criteria in determining potential for further career development. A sound background in retailing would be a distinct advantage.

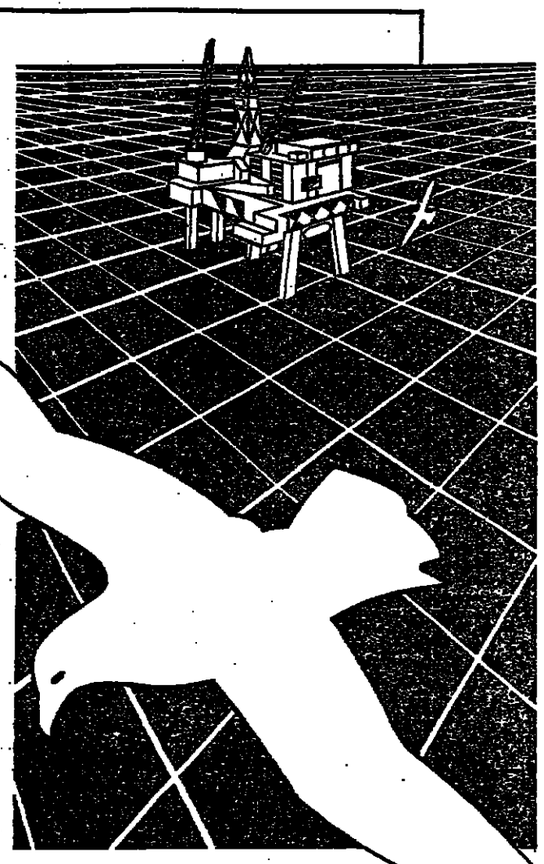
Shell U.K. Exploration and Production

GEOPHYSICAL PROCESSOR



As one of the leading offshore operating companies, we are committed to a continuing programme of substantial investment in all aspects of exploration work. One of the results of this investment has been a large increase in the level of our involvement in the field of seismic acquisition and processing. This increased activity has now created an exciting career opportunity for an experienced Geophysical Processor.

You will be joining a small, professional team dealing with the 2D and 3D processing of seismic data obtained from surveys conducted in deep water, shallow water and on land. A major part of your time will be devoted to the control and supervision of contractor processing but you will also be involved in some detailed in-house processing using proprietary programs on Shell's VAX computer.

To fulfil your role, you will need a B.Sc. or higher qualification in one of the following disciplines; Physics, Geophysics, Mathematics, Geology and at least 3 years' processing experience. More extensive experience would, however, be highly desirable and could, in special circumstances, be considered in lieu of academic qualifications. In addition to your technical skills you will also need the necessary personal and administrative skills to liaise effectively with contractors and to control the large volume of data processed.

In return for your professional expertise, you will receive an attractive remuneration package which fully reflects the importance of your contribution to our future.

Please telephone 01-257 5001 for an application form, or write, enclosing a full c.v. to: Shell U.K. Exploration and Production, Attention UEP/152, Shell-Mex House, Strand, London WC2R 0DX. Please quote ref: DT10185.

Results Orientated Sales Executive

Semi-Custom ICs

Salary £ neg + bonus + car

My client is a new type of semi-custom manufacturer. It brings together both systems and silicon technology in order to bridge the gap between the potential semi-custom user and the volume semiconductor manufacturer. The company is substantially funded by a major high tech consultancy and several venture capital companies. The company differs from other design houses as it is able to execute every step of design right up to volume production. It has already established a 'well found' laboratory which has invested in an e-beam machine in addition to a variety of CAD work stations to match specific requirements of volume foundries.

A Semi-Custom Sales Engineer is required to develop new opportunities and markets throughout the UK. The Sales Engineer will start with a very wide customer contact base. This is very much greenfield opportunity and the person appointed will be expected to ensure a high level of repeat purchases for the company's services. The ability to interact with semi-custom customers at all levels from management to engineer is a key requirement. For this role, we require a person who is currently working as a Sales Engineer selling semi-custom ICs. Candidates must be able to interpret specific customer needs and translate these needs into successful orders for the company. We also require a person with a high energy level as well as excellent communication skills. As the company expands, the opportunities for further career growth are excellent.

The salary paid to the person appointed will be circa £17,500 plus a commission scheme. The remuneration package also includes a portable pension scheme and relocation expenses where appropriate.

To apply please send your curriculum vitae, or phone for an application form, quoting reference SE/IC to Geoffrey King, Managing Director. Cambridge Recruitment Consultants. This appointment is open to both men and women.

Many people recognise their potential to succeed in sales management only to find that their current position leaves them little or no room for career development.

If that sounds like you, then here's an opportunity to match your high flying ability and ambition.

A SALES CAREER WITH NCH TURNS HIGH FLYERS INTO SQUADRON LEADERS

1984, the 20th anniversary of the NCH Group in the U.K., saw the completion of the first phase of our development plans for the 80s in the fields of research, manufacture and sales. 1985 begins the second phase of our expansion, creating exciting new prospects for hard-working, dedicated sales professionals seeking to realise their management potential.

Aged 25-30, male or female, you'll be able to prove a successful track record in selling, demonstrate a flair for passing that success on to others and real "MAN-MANAGEMENT" ability.

If you recognise these qualities in your self, hopefully so will we. As a company whose international reputation in the world of industrial and commercial maintenance has been built on the efforts of a dedicated sales team, we know how to reward hard work, and believe in giving credit where it's due.

We won't treat you as a sales administrator – we'll treat you as a sales leader. Our excellent salary package is complemented by a company car, BUPA, and other big company benefits.

That's our flight plan for your future success...with NCH's sales squadron!

Write with brief career details (quoting tel no) to: Bill Mereine, General Sales Manager, NCH Group of Companies, Swan Office Centre, 1508 Coventry Road, Birmingham B25 8EL.

WELLWORTHY

Principal Electronics Engineer

Fairey Hydraulics Limited, a Defence Systems Company, wish to appoint an experienced Electronics Engineer to lead a small Control Systems team at their Design and Development Centre at Claverham, south west of Bristol.

This is a senior appointment with direct responsibility to the Chief Engineer. It is probable therefore that the successful applicant (male/female) will have had not less than 10 years' experience of the electronic control and management of dynamic mechanical systems used in aerospace or defence applications.

The primary role is to give innovative technical leadership to the specialist team for which you are responsible and share in the responsibility for determining the overall system definition. Through envisaged career advancement, you will also contribute to the future new business of the Company in its efforts to diversify its product range and to extend its influence in electronic systems engineering. A major activity will therefore be to envisage design concepts arising from potential customer specifications and to be responsible for costed design proposals within defined timescales. You will also liaise with the customer in association with the Company's marketing activity.

A formal engineering education and training with experience in design of analogue, digital and micro electronics is essential, as is your ability to quickly widen your experience, where necessary, to enable you to adopt a multi-disciplinary approach. In particular, you must quickly become familiar with electrohydraulic, pneumatic and electric motor actuation techniques.

Experience in the design of control system software and knowledge of relevant computer high level languages is also desirable.

An attractive salary will be offered along with other benefits including 25 days' annual holiday, contributory pension scheme, free life assurance, and relocation assistance.

MATTHEW HALL ENGINEERING

We are one of the most successful British companies operating in the highly competitive sphere of offshore engineering. Our current heavy work-load and exciting future prospects have resulted in the expansion of the Process and Systems Department. This department encompasses both process engineering and environmental control and plays a strong support role to our Conceptual Design Group.

To meet this growth we seek to recruit Senior and Principal Engineers to lead design groups, which will interface with multidisciplinary project task forces, and Process Engineering Consultants who will provide specialist technical advice and support to projects as well as input to the Conceptual Design Group. Successful candidates will have in-depth experience of offshore design and should hold Chartered status and/or an appropriate degree.

OFFSHORE PROCESS DESIGN

Senior Process Engineers

will be able to demonstrate a minimum of five years experience within the oil/gas offshore industry.

Principal Process Engineers will have augmented their offshore experience with specialist knowledge of commissioning, commercial or project functions.

Process Engineering Consultants will be totally familiar with all aspects of process engineering and will show particular strength related to multi-disciplinary interfacing as well as experience with study groups.

Safety Engineers

should be familiar with the API RP 14c requirements for the production of SATs and SAFE charts and have extensive experience of the application of safety design to offshore projects.

Acoustics and Vibration Engineers will have spent at least three years in industry following their degree, and will be of particular interest if able to demonstrate offshore experience.

Fire Protection Engineers should hold an appropriate engineering qualification and should be able to demonstrate considerable experience in the Fire Protection industry with a minimum of four years in offshore/petrochemical applications.

Apart from these specific vacancies, we will be very interested to hear from senior engineers in any other process-related discipline.

Our package of salary and benefits is designed to attract applicants of the highest calibre and, with the continuing development of the company, candidates can anticipate excellent and challenging career prospects.

Applicants should write giving full details of their qualifications and experience to: Nigel Kent, Recruitment Department, Matthew Hall Engineering, 106 Tottenham Court Road, London W1A 1BT or telephone 01-636 3676, ext.3913 during office hours, or 01-580 5672 between 5.30pm and 8.30pm tonight and tomorrow only.

British Engineering at its finest

Important management opportunities in transport and distribution.

The best New Year resolution you could make

Our client, a substantial leader in the national field of transport and distribution services, has its sights set firmly on the future. Their name is synonymous with the highest professionalism and service in a very competitive market, they place the utmost importance on expansion. Which is why, to further their success, there is now an opportunity for high calibre professionals to play a key part in the company's growth and diversification, whilst extending their own career potential.

REGIONAL MANAGER £14,000+Car

Reporting to the National Operations Manager, this involves responsibility for the effective operation and development of processing and distribution activities from two locations in Central London.

We're looking for someone – aged between 28 and 45 – with a responsible and progressive approach, who has substantial experience of industrial line management. In control of 300 people and 100 vehicles, and working in a Union environment, the Regional Manager also frequently handles senior customer contact, and must have a keen awareness of customer demands. Your managerial skills should be joined by a dedication to business development – in line with cost control needs – to meet the challenge presented by this fast-expanding organisation. Ref. C109.

NATIONAL SALES MANAGER £14,000+Car

This newly created position has enormous potential for someone demanding greater levels of achievement, involvement and reward. The company's ambition for growth determines their need for a senior sales professional who will negotiate new and maximise existing business resources, formulate expansion plans and supervise a team of high-calibre sales staff.

The right person will have considerable sales experience, preferably in the service or retail industries, and a background of negotiation with senior management at national level. Management experience is desirable, but not essential; this may well be your first step into management as you build, oversee and motivate your support team around you.

This is a demanding and complex area of selling, and market awareness, sophisticated business acumen and a high level of motivation are all essential, complementing the exceptional communication skills which we require. Contract negotiation at board level requires full understanding of the implications of selling a complete package of transit services with all its attendant variables; in return you'll have the profound satisfaction of co-ordinating, selling and closing a major contract from start to finish. Ref. C110.

Both jobs carry with them the full and generous range of benefits which you would expect from a large and successful organisation.

For an application form please write to, (listing in a covering letter any companies to whom you do not want your application forwarded), or telephone Jackie Bradley at Juniper Woolf & Partners Limited, 22 New Concordia Wharf, Mill Street, London SE1 2BB. Technical Support Manager

A business software system that really counts. c.£16,000

PRICE is a sophisticated and extremely successful software package designed to cost high-capital manufactured products. Now, due to continued expansion, PRICE Systems Europe, the division of RCA devoted to its development, marketing and support, requires a Technical Support Manager.

Reporting to the Divisional Manager of PRICE Systems Europe, the role involves:

* Providing PRICE clients throughout Britain with a technical advisory and troubleshooting service.
* Adding the weight of your technical assistance to supporting marketing and sales drives.
* Writing customer specific technical reports.
* Acting as an instructor on PRICE training courses.

Clearly, your role will call for refined communication skills. In addition, our primary requirement is five years' project management experience for space, defence or commercial electronics. You'll also require a degree in engineering, computing or management, and although knowledge of parametric costing would be ideal, full training in PRICE software models will be given with initial visits to the U.S.

At RCA we call for initiative from highly motivated people, because we offer a high degree of responsibility and independence at every level, while we're quick to recognise achievement. This position carries with it all the implied scope for career advance. Your salary of £16,000 will be supported by an excellent benefits package, which includes a contributory pension scheme, free life insurance and relocation expenses where necessary.

Contact us immediately by sending your full career details to Robert Fox, RCA Services Limited, Lincoln Way, Windmill Road, Sunbury-on-Thames, Middlesex TW16 7HW. Alternatively telephone me on Sunbury-on-Thames 85511 ext. 3365 for further information and an application form.

Perstorp Form

UK Sales Executive

High Basic Salary — Bucks/Berks Based

Perstorp AB of Sweden forms a group of operating manufacturing facilities in a number of countries and distributes innovative products to virtually all markets in the world. The expanding UK subsidiary has a vacancy for a Sales Executive to set up an operation in the New Field of "Refuse Handling Systems", concentrating on Local Authorities and other public bodies.

With sole responsibility for establishing and expanding sales throughout the United Kingdom, you will report directly to the Divisional Manager. Ideally aged 25-40, and preferably with experience of selling to Local Authorities, you will need to possess the enthusiasm and initiative necessary to identify and build a platform in this exciting new market area providing systems that maximise the efficiency of refuse handling.

In return you will receive an attractive salary, 2 litre car, five weeks' annual holiday, free medical cover, pension scheme, product and sales training in Sweden and excellent prospects for personal development.

Applicants (male or female) should apply in the first instance with full written, personal and career details to Mercuri Urval Ltd, 1 College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, HA1 1YZ, quoting reference no. 500.

Mercuri Urval

Sales Director

(DESIGNATE)

North West — Salary Negotiable, Company Car

Our client is a progressive and successful major subsidiary of a long established British Engineering Group — a leading quality supplier to the commercial vehicle and agricultural machinery markets and expanding rapidly.

An exciting challenge exists for a dynamic sales manager who can make a significant contribution to the company's continued success. The management style is open, positive and committed to continuous growth.

Our ideal candidate will have good engineering and commercial knowledge, together with 'sharp end' skills in selling engineered products to O.E.M.'s and end users. Experience in the tractor industry would be a bonus. We will be happy to consider either young candidates 28-30, looking for a chance to grow or an experienced 'self starter' who kan zead from the front.

This is an opportunity with real prospects and conditions are those associated with a progressive company. Remuneration includes an element of profit share and will not be a barrier for the right candidate.

SWEEPS HURDLE FIRST GUIDE TO SCHWEPPES

By HOTSPUR

SATURDAY's Sweeps Handicap Hurdle at Leopardstown assumed increased importance with yesterday's publication of weights for the Schweppes Gold Trophy at Newbury on Feb. 9. A comparison of the handicaps reveals a major divergence of opinion between the two sets of officials.

Ten of the 75 Schweppes entries figure among the 23 four-day acceptors for the Sweeps Handicap Hurdle. The English handicapper has a less high opinion than his Irish counterpart about seven of them.

Desert Orchid, joint Schweppes top weight with See You Then, and Rare Duel figure on the same mark in both races, while Northern Game, the Triumph Hurdle winner, is rated 2lb higher in the Newbury handicap.

Rosical, whose trainer Michael Cunningham first came to prominence in Britain when landing a gamble with Irish Fashion in the 1976 Schweppes, receives an extra 6lb from Desert Orchid compared with Saturday's race.

Progressing from maiden events to good-class handicaps, Rosical completed a four-timer last season. He reappeared at Leopardstown on Dec. 28 to finish two-lengths second to Yankee Princess.

Informative debut

The Irish RACING CALENDAR records Rosical's informative seasonal debut with the comment: "Smooth run to lead on landing last; soon headed; stayed on; hands and heels," while noting that having opened 6-1 in the betting he started at double those odds.

History hardly gives Rosical an outstanding chance in the Schweppes, the last two runnings of which have featured the unsuccessful appearance of the Sweeps Handicap Hurdle winner. For Auction, also trained by Cunningham, was fourth to Donegal Prince in 1982, and Fredcoteri 10th to Ra Nova last year.

Ra Nova is absent from this year's entries, but 11 of the 1984 field reappear, including Stans Pride, who was beaten three lengths into second place. Stans Pride, who will attempt to become the first mare to win the Schweppes, is handicapped 9lb above the weight she carried a year ago.

John Jenkins has helped to reveal to an interesting point of handicapping by entering his four-year-olds Beat The Retreat and Wing And A Prayer, both owned by David Steele and successful at Sandown Park last Saturday. Beat the Retreat is weighted to concede 4lb—an opinion open to argument.

Only one four-year-old has been placed in the Schweppes, with Moonlight Bay carrying 11st into fourth place behind Indianapolis in 1975 before going on to win the Triumph Hurdle.

If Saturday's Ascot meeting becomes a weather casualty, John Francome will head for Leopardstown to take four mounts for trainer Bu*r*y Cox, including Bay Trix in the Sweeps Handicap Hurdle.

Esp*rit du Noir,* the much-travelled runner-up to Sun Princess in the 1983 St Leger, is being syndicated to stand at Alec Head's Haras du Quesnay

Two meetings called off

Racing continues in the grip of winter with today's meetings at Southwell and Wincanton called off yesterday because of frost and snow, and tomorrow's fixtures at Ascot and Hereford in serious doubt. Today's Punchestown card in Ireland is subject to a 7 a.m. inspection.

Hereford offer little hope of surviving today's 9 a.m. inspection, but Ascot, where racing is also scheduled for Saturday, will delay a decision until 3.45 p.m. Saturday's Market Rasen fixture is in jeopardy because of frost and there will be a 10.30 a.m. inspection tomorrow.

Punchestown Racing

Gerry Doyle may gain first victory

By OUR IRISH RACING CORRESPONDENT

GERRY DOYLE, who has shown consistent form in seven outings over fences, looks ready to gain his first success in the Thornton Novices' 'Chase (2.15) at Punchestown today.

Tom Nicholson's seven-year-old is apt to make jumping mistakes, but that remark applies to several others in this field.

Gerry Doyle ran the useful Orient Sunset to two and a half lengths despite sketchy fencing at Leopardstown last time and a reasonably smooth round here should enable him to outpace his opponents.

Vulbuck, brought down in the early stages of his most recent race at Leopardstown, has claims by virtue of his sixth to Boreen Prince at Gowran Park previously, but most opposition to Gerry Doyle may come from Lucky Spa, who was going well when he fell at the third-last fence in the race won by Papa's Buskins at Fairyhouse on New Year's Eve.

Armonit, a useful hurdler when trained in England last season, made a fine start to her Irish career with a six-length success at Navan in November. She held a clear lead when falling at the fourth-last over the same course last month and can confirm her liking for soft ground by landing the Fairyland Handicap Hurdle (3.15).

Aubaine is likely to start a warm favourite for the E M F Mares' Hurdle Qualifier (2.45), following her second to Ardexit in a big field at Leopardstown last time, but she may find one too good in Catherine Bridge, who has been showing smart form in bumpers' races.

Michael Cunningham may complete a double with Friendly Face (Bull Hill Novices' Handicap Hurdle, 1.15) and Grand Warrior (Martinstown N H Flat Race, 3.45). Monanore is fancied to round off a hat-trick in the Carrick Hill Handicap 'Chase (1.45).

Kelso Racing...

TUCK IN TREBLE FORM

PHIL TUCK rode the third treble of his career when racing returned to the North after a seven-day enforced break when Kelso staged the first meeting of the week in Britain yesterday.

Tuck got off the mark in facile style on Miss Goldingay in the Maxton Novices' Hurdle (Div I), but had to work much harder on his next two winners Inkling and Bickerstaffe.

Mick Easterby's Miss Goldingay had 10 lengths to spare over Amadis, but he and Tuck had some uneasy moments after Bickerstaffe beat Colonial Charm by half a length in the second division of the event.

Bookmakers offered 11-8 against Bickerstaffe's keeping the race after Colonial Charm's rider John McLaughlin objected for "squeezing me in on the run-in." After a lengthy inquiry the result was allowed to stand.

Cheltenham target

Inkling had only a short head to spare over Jockambel in the Klix Drinks Novices' 'Chase, but the gelding remains a probable for Cheltenham's Sun Alliance 'Chase if the ground is soft.

Tuck's treble, which took him to 26 for the season and puts him on target to beat his career best of 41 set last year, would have been a four-timer had his mount Earls Brig not found Fox-U-More too strong for him in the closing stages of the Stewart Wight Memorial Handicap 'Chase.

The pair battled it out over the last four fences until Fox-U-More forged ahead approaching the final fence. He held the sustained challenge of Earls Brig by a length and a half to initiate a double for Mr Peter Dun, also successful on Modtech in the Bantel Stakes National Hunt Flat Race.

Fisher hopes

Treilena provided Roger Fisher with his 13th victory of the season when making almost all the running to land the Duns Handicap 'Chase by threequarters of a length from Press Gang, ridden by Peter Dun's brother Geordie.

Fisher, whose Ekbalco finished runner-up to Donegal Prince in the 1982 Schweppes Trophy Handicap Hurdle, hopes Flarey Sark will go one better at Newbury on Feb. 9. He said yesterday: "Flarey Sark has about the right weight with 11st 1lb and expect he will run in the Haydock Park Trial before Newbury.

Dintrans follows Rives on to European stage

By JOHN MASON

FRANCE, whose eight other selectors are inclined to follow the firm lead set by Jacques Fouroux, the coach, are unchanged for their opening match of the International Championship against Wales in Paris on Saturday week.

But in calling upon the team that beat Rumania handsomely two months ago, France introduce Bernard Lavigne, of Agen, a new cap to the Championship — and a new captain, Phillipe Dintrans, of Tarbes, the hooker.

The burly Dintrans, 27, who packs approaching 16 stone in a relatively compact frame, completes the drawn-out processes of succeeding Jean-Pierre Rives, probably the best-known of a long line of French players distinguished world-wide.

Rives was the captain in the Grand Slam match against Scotland last March, his 52nd and final appearance as France's leader. It was not an occasion that Rives, the first of whose 49 caps against International Board countries was in 1975, remembers with great pleasure. France lost.

Back injury

Dintrans, who for some seasons has been rated among the top three hookers in the world by several rivals, including Peter Wheeler, an opponent of long-standing, was France's captain in New Zealand last summer, in Japan and against Rumania. Now he tackles the European championship.

The place that Rives has occupied with such distinction for the better part of 10 years goes to Jacques Gratton, one of four Agen players chosen. He, too, has stood in for the tireless Rives on tour and completes a backrow of Laurent Rodriguez and Dominique Erbani, the No. 8.

Erbani's place might have gone to Jean-Luc Joinel, who, presumably, would have been Fouroux's first-choice. But Joinel, who has had a back injury, is not satisfied with his fitness and Jean-Claude Orso, who Erbani replaced against Rumania is barely fit again after breaking a wrist.

For all that, France enjoy a splendid core of experience. Nine of the side featured in the victory over Wales in Cardiff last season, including six of the backs. The same backs and four of the pack played in the Grand Slam match against Scotland in March.

Difficult start

So Wales, whose preparations have been upset by the weather, can expect the most difficult of starts to the 1985 championship. Nor have they won in Paris for 10 years, the day that Ray Gravell and Graham Price made their debuts.

The Welsh squad may have a further training period on Sunday if Saturday's club programme, as seems likely, is badly disrupted by the weather. The announcement of the team to play France has already been put back and is now expected during the weekend.

A W R U spokesman said yesterday: "If the weather improves, allowing the week-end matches to take place, the next squad session will go ahead at the National Ground, Cardiff, on Monday evening as planned.

"However, if there is no improvement in the next couple of days, the squad will meet at the Afan Lido Sports Centre, Port Talbot, on Sunday at noon."

Jerry Macklin, the London Scottish No. 8, who is also qualified for England, will win his first cap for Scotland in the B international in Aberdeen on Saturday week. His grandfather played rugby for England and his mother hockey for Scotland.

Macklin, outstanding for the Anglo-Scots in this winter's District championships, is one of four new caps, another of whom is Matt Duncan (West of Scotland). Duncan is delighted: he was to have played five years ago but the match was cancelled because of snow.

Scotland B v. France B, Aberdeen, Jan. 19. — G. Hastings (Cambridge Un); M. Duncan (West of Scotland), A. Tait (Kelso), K. Murray (Hawick), I. Tukalo (Selkirk), C. Gass (Hawick), S. Johnston (Watsonians); D. Sole, R. Cunningham (Bath) capt., R. Nichol (Hawick), H. Parker (Kilmarnock), I. McKie (Sale), P. Hogarth, D. Turnbull (Hawick), J. Macklin (London Scottish).

Replacements.—S. Hyslop (Langholm), W. Murray (Hawick), J. Campbell-Lamerton (London Scottish), R. Hogarth, A. Ker (Kelso), B. Edward (Boroughmuir).

Phillipe Dintrans . . . the new captain of France.

Stoneygate looking to sharpen up—on Merit

By MICHAEL AUSTIN

STONEYGATE, a long-respected Leicestershire club, are eager to join the Bank and Silvers Merit Table next season to sharpen their competitive edge in the three years leading to their centenary.

"Traditionalists in the club have been against entry into tables," said Bruce Cooper, a Stoneygate spokesman.

"But we are now keen to enter and a two-thirds winning record against Merit clubs this season will gain us admission."

Stoneygate's five-match winning run throughout December has extra relevance because they have beaten Bromsgrove, John Player Cup qualifiers this season, and other Merit table members Kidderminster.

Bob Symington, a prop, in his third season as captain, has guided Stoneygate to 11 wins overall, despite the retirement of Wilf Thompson, a skilful scrum-half and 400 metres runner, who is seeking a place in the Northern Ireland team for next year's Commonwealth Games.

Abundant talent remains at Scraptoft, Stoneygate's headquarters, near Leicester. They supplied David Hope, a full-back, Andy Jenkinson, a centre, and Ian Bridgwood, a hooker, for Leicestershire this season.

The biggest disappointment was a Leicestershire Cup defeat by Loughborough Students, who also beat them in last season's final.

After 18 months of preparations, Leicestershire plans for their centenary season beginning in September next year, are well advanced but the county are anxious to contact former players.

Peter Goodwin, chairman of Leicestershire's Centenary sub-committee, said: "We are producing a special book and want to hear from anyone with photographs or historical information. A celebration dinner is also being arranged."

SOLENT ARE RESCUED

By RICHARD TAYLOR

Sperrings Solent Stars have been saved from extinction after a successful campaign led by T. J. Robinson, their American player, supported by local businessmen.

But there is no place in the new company, Solent Stars 1985 Ltd., for Harry Smith, who founded Solent and whose wealth built a team which briefly fulfilled his dream of dominating English basketball.

Robinson, a member of the new board, said: "First I must get the players sorted out and that will mean a pay cut here and there including myself."

Sponsors Sperrings will con*tinue their backing until the end* of the season but the club have put players Tony Watson and Dave Brown on the transfer list and will consider bids from Davenport's Birmingham, while Jim Kelly, the coach who is also considering an offer from Germany, will decide by the weekend whether to stay.

While Solent's future looks secure Telford, the First Division's bottom club, have now gone into receivership. Their fixture on Saturday, at Birmingham, has been cancelled, while Birmingham themselves intend signing three Telford players.

Athletics

Room at the top for young blood

By KEN MAYS

BRITAIN'S athletic officials are almost certain to break with tradition by appointing recently retired athletes to their management structure for 1985 when they meet to discuss the matter at the weekend.

With the successful team of Nick Whitehead, Lynn Davies, Mary Peters and Pam Piercy all retiring after the Los Angeles Olympics, it appears that the officials have taken notice of their suggestion that management needs young blood.

In a two-tier construction, one for the outdoor season and another for indoors, the Board have given the go-ahead to Mike Winch, Judy Vernon, Sue Reeves and Berwyn Price to become involved.

Les Jones, of the Northern Ireland Association, who is to map out Zola Budd's programme this year, is expected to be appointed men's indoor team manager with Winch as his assistant. Jill Lindsay, of Southern Counties, is manager of the women's squad with Mrs Vernon as her assistant.

Review later

Maeve Kyle, of Northern Ireland, is to act as the women's outdoor manager helped by Mrs Reeves while Gordon Wright, of Northern Counties, and Price will be in charge of the men's team.

It is expected that the situation will be reviewed later in the year before a permanent team is appointed to take charge of the squad that will build up towards the 1988 Olympics in Seol.

Meanwhile, Linsey Macdonald, the young Scot who gained a bronze medal in the Moscow Olympics, makes a welcome return to athletics after a two-year absence when she runs in the 400 metres at the Arrom sponsored Cosford Games on Friday and Saturday.

Miss Macdonald, 20, who is studying chemistry at Edinburgh University, had operations on both legs last season but has made a comeback in cross-country during the winter and is looking forward to the midland circuit where she set both junior and senior records earlier in her career.

Haigh defends

The H F C company, sponsors of the U K championships, have come to the aid of women's cross-country by sponsoring the five nations tournament at Sidcup on Saturday.

Carol Haigh, from Holmfirth, winner in 1984, is again included in an England team that has lost the title only once since the competition against Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and Eire was devised in 1967.

Linsey Macdonald . . . back on the track after two years absence.

McGUIGAN FACES TOUGH LAPORTE CHALLENGE

BARRY McGUIGAN, the British and European featherweight champion, will have his toughest contest to date when he meets Juan Laporte, the former world champion over 10 rounds at the Kings Hall, Belfast, on Feb. 23, writes Ken Mays.

In what promotor Stephen Eastwood terms as the most expensive fight to be held in Ireland, McGuigan faces a Puerto Rican who held the title for 18 months until dropping a points decision to Wilfredo Gomez a year ago.

It is the stepping stone that McGuigan needs, however, if he is finally to catch up with Gomez or Eusebio Pedroza, the holder of the World Boxing Association's version of the title.

McGuigan, 23, from Clones, has suffered only one defeat in a 25-fight career and he gets this chance of what is virtually a final eliminator because Smirnoff, the vodka manufacturers, have substantially increased their sponsorship of the Irishman.

McGuigan, who has won his last 18 contests all inside the distance, will now have to cancel the proposed defence of his European title against Farid Gallouze, of France, which the Irish camp had won on a purse offer of £40,000.

Meanwhile in Birmingham, both Don Curry, the World Boxing Association welterweight champion, and his challenger on Jan. 19, Colin Jones from Wales, continued their preparation for the contest.

Jones, who twice fought Milton McCrory for the W B C version, showed that Curry is in for a tough time at the National Exhibition Centre, by forcing Lloyd Christie to end a sparring session after only two rounds.

Jones, a former gravedigger, from Gorseinon, said: "I feel better than I have ever done before, certainly an improvement on my two previous world title fights."

Fast puncher

But later in the same Pat Lynch gym in Birmingham, Curry also fascinated onlookers with his ability to combine punches with speed that has led to four successful defences of the title.

Pat Cowdell, the European super featherweight champion said afterwards: "I am glad I am not fighting him," while Wally Swift, a former British welterweight champion, said: "Curry is one of the fastest punchers I have seen."

Frank Bruno may have to go to Norway after all if he wants to win the European heavyweight title. The Norwegian Government are unlikely to lift their ban on professional boxing to allow Oslo's Steffan Tangstad, the reigning champion, the chance to defend there.

MacDonald harries Pakistani batsmen

A CENTURY from the captain, Javed Miandad, could not prevent the Pakistanis from incurring a first innings deficit of 20 on the second day of their three-day match against Canterbury in Christchurch.

Gary MacDonald, Canterbury's veteran offspinner, did the major damage, taking 6-62, four of them caught-and-bowled in the lower part of the order.

MacDonald completed an historic and record-breaking day with his final dismissal.

He joined a select group of fieldsmen, including the former New Zealand captain John Reid, who have taken five catches in one innings of a first-class match and his four catches from his own bowling are more than any other player has taken in domestic first-class cricket.

His achievement comes in his first season with Canterbury. MacDonald is the oldest member of the team but has only recently been called on after many seasons as a leading wicket-taker in club cricket.

Miandad treated Canterbury's varied attack with disdain, cracking the bowling to all corners of the ground in an innings of composed aggression which augurs well for the Test series.

Javed became MacDonald's first victim, however, when he tried to drive over the long-off boundary and was caught by Paul McEwan, running back from deep mid-off. Whereupon the tourists crumbled, their last seven wickets going for 75.

SRI LANKA IN AT DEEP END

Sri Lanka, international cricket's youngest member, take on the all-conquering West Indians for the first time since joining the International Cricket Conference in a World Series Cup one-day match in Hobart, Tasmania, today.

Sri Lanka have not met West Indies since their admission to the Conference four years ago, although West Indies made a brief tour in 1977 under Alvin Kallicharran.

Manager Neil Chanmugam said his team's best chance of winning would be if the West Indies relaxed their pressure. "The West Indies' weakness could really only be over-confidence," he said.

In an irony brought about by the commercial realities of modern cricket, the meeting between these two tropical nations takes place on a ground which was lashed by southerly gales yesterday.

COWDREY AND MOXON RAISE VICTORY HOPES

By MICHAEL CAREY in Hyderabad

AFTER Martyn Moxon had made an excellent 153, equalling the highest score of his career, a penetrative performance by England's bowlers set up the prospect of victory in their game against South Zone in Hyderabad yesterday. The Zonal side will begin the last day this morning leading by 113 with five second innings wickets standing.

Admittedly one of them is Azharuddin, who survived a close l b w appeal from Gatting's final delivery after restoring order with some strokes of high quality, but overall the position was an accurate reflection of the way that England had worked hard to get back into the match.

This had started when the lower order helped Moxon add 108 runs for the last three wickets, producing a psychologically valuable first innings lead.

It continued when their quicker bowlers found that the pitch, though perhaps slower than earlier, still had something to offer.

With Cowans absent as a precautionary measure because of a strained side muscle, Cowdrey operated as third seamer and with not only a harder ball but with more luck than in the first innings took 3-51 in a spell of 15 overs.

The vincluded Srikkanth, who with 18 fro monly 10 balls had threatened to change not only the somewhat lustreless look of South Zone's innings but upset England's plans to catch a plane for Madras within an hour of today's scheduled finish. In the case of some England close fielders, it will probably be the first thing they have caught all week.

Moxon's century in only his third innings of the tour arrived by courtesy of four overthrows following a push to mid-wicket from the third ball of the day. Incidentally, his concentration was such that later the bat had to be prised from his grip in the dressing room, though this might not be thought unusual with current Yorkshire opening batsmen.

South Zone's decision not to take the new ball immediately was no discouragement to Foster, who timed some firm drives before pushing some way outside the off stump at Sekhar to be caught behind.

Moxon went on in the same controlled vein, equalling the 153 he made against Lancashire at Headingley in 1983 and seemed capable of taking out his bat when he played back to a ball from the left-arm Raman which failed to bounce and was bowled. He had batted some seven and a quarter hours and faced 345 balls — a monumental piece of application, all things considered.

What the tour selectors presumably must now consider is whether there is scope for the inclusion of Moxon and his correct technique in the fourth Test and if so how can it be done.

On the assumption that they will still want to play the extra batsman, he might now be seen to be pushing Cowdrey for that place, notwithstanding the Kent captain's performance with the ball in conditions unlikely to be found in Madras.

If so, Moxon's inclusion at No. 5 would not only stiffen the early batting on a ground where fast bowlers tend to find pace and bounce early in the match, but might well help to ease any pressure Gower may currently be feeling by enabling him to drop down to No. 6.

When South Zone batted again, Agnew, exploring a theory that Viswanath, for various reasons, ought to be offered something short, had him caught off an attempted hook by Fowler, the substitute, and Srikkanth appeared one place later than usual intent on improving on a sedate start.

Probably distracted

He immediately whacked Cowdrey over extra cover and timed a perfect on drive, but at his pace Cowdrey probably found more movement than any one and the South Zone captain was quickly leg before aiming across the line, paying the penalty not for the first time in his life, for being over ambitious too soon.

In the next over Prasad was lbw to Foster off whom he had been dropped early on at first slip by Gatting who was probably distracted by French's initial movement across him as if to go for the catch.

Cowdrey then dug one in to have Madhavan caught off a glove—a leaping catch to the wicketkeeper—and struck again when Binny offered no stroke to a ball which probably did not have to come back much to disturb his off stump.

The left-handed Quayyam then found various way of nudging, edging or squirting the ball through the crowded slip and gully area in a manner beloved of Jim Yardley, of Worcestershire and Northants.

Chris Cowdrey . . . a harder ball and a change of luck made all the difference.

Gavaskar gets tough

SUNIL GAVASKAR, the Indian captain trying to instil discipline in his Test players, has dropped prolific batsman Dilip Vengsarkar from the Bombay side for reporting late for a match.

Vengsarkar, an automatic Test choice for the three-day Ranji Trophy game against Baroda. Earlier this month all-rounder Ravi Shastri, another Test man, was also dropped by Gavaskar from his Bombay team for reporting late for a domestic match.

Kapil Dev, the former Indian captain, was dropped for the recent Calcutta Test against England but Indian Cricket Board officials declined to comment on the reason for his exclusion.

KUENZI TAKES SLALOM

By ALAN SMITH

OLIVER KUENZI, 18, youngest of the seeded Swiss in the British Championship Men's Slalom, continued the domination of the meeting, sponsored by the British Land Company, in Sils, Switzerland, yesterday.

But although the home team completed a double of the men's events — and also took the women's slalom through Sandra Burns — it was not nearly as much of a whitewash as Tuesday's giant slalom.

Then the best Briton was 15th, but yesterday they had four in the top ten of the men's race, headed by seventh-place Robbie Hourmont, who is only 15.

Kuenzi, who is in the Swiss C team, was far from happy with the solid poles they had to race through. Normally the poles swing out and back as the racers brush through them.

Family help

In yesterday's race, the poles were frequently uprooted—sliding down the slope and causing considerable delay while being retrieved—and are much more painful when hit. The technique of racing through them is quite different.

Robbie Hourmont, youngest of three ski-ing brothers who come from Bristol, but spend much of their time in Innsbruck, headquarters of a family holiday travel business, should have competed in last week's junior championships, which were cancelled for lack of snow.

He was only 15th, with six of his team-mates ahead of him, after the first run, but attacked the second to such considerable effect that he overtook them all.

His elder brother Paul, who had on operation on an injured knee last year and cannot yet race, was one of the forerunners yesterday and gave Robbie the benefit of his experience. "I couldn't have done it without him," said the younger Hourmont.

Lesley Beck, 20, from Dumbarton, who won both the women's slalom and giant slalom championships last year, was suffering from a bad bout of influenza yesterday and had to settle for fourth behind the Swiss Sandra Burns—who, with a name like that, must surely have some Scottish ancestry.

The unlucky Miss Beck, fourth after the first run, overtook all three of those ahead of her second time down, only then to be passed by the lower-ranking Swiss, with Miss Burns putting in a particularly spectacular effort. Later Miss K. Mathis was disqualified so Miss Beck finished third.

Troke offers best hope for England

By A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT in Hongkong

THE first tournament in the new World Grand Prix, the Hongkong Open, begins today with English morale in a healthy condition.

The Grand Prix series has built up from seven events at its inception two years ago to 18 tournaments, including the English Masters and the World Open this year, which marks the end of the initial £115,000 sponsorship from Pro-Kennex.

Despite five Chinese women players in the entry, Helen Troke, the European champion from Southampton, is seeded to reach the last four. England also have five young players trying to make an impact on a world class men's singles field.

The most newsworthy is Steve Baddeley, the hard-hitting left-hander from Sussex, who follows this week's return to the joint England No. 1 spot by being one of two Englishmen seeded to reach the last eight.

Firm favourite

The other is Nick Yates, also England joint No. 1, who starts with a difficult match against Hadiyanto, of Indonesia. Baddeley also has a hard draw with Fladberg, the Dane, and Misbun Sidek, the Malaysian No. 1, in his section.

For all their youthful ambition and steady improvement neither is likely to make the last four and the firm favourite, despite the presence of a powerful Chinese and a youthful Indonesian entry, is the indomitable Morten Frost, of Denmark.

Frost achieved his first major individual success in the Far East when he won last year's Grand Prix final in the heat of Kuala Lumpur—a rare feat for a European.

However, with Gillian Gilks and Martin Dew each hoping to be involved in the later stages of two doubles events, English interests may well continue right up until the finals on Sunday.

BADDELEY TOP WITH YATES

Nick Yates, of Kent, has lost his undisputed No. 1 ranking in English Badminton.

The latest list sees him joint top with Steve Baddeley of Sussex. The second time in recent years that the selectors have found it impossible to separate the two players.

"We could see no way of splitting them" said Ciro Ciniglio, the England manager. "Nick has been affected by injuries for part of the last six months but, despite that, both players' results have been otherwise identical."

Helen Troke, of Southampton, remains at the head of the women's rankings, with Jane Sutton promoted to No. 3 on the retirement of Sally Podger, of Guernsey. Sara Halsall, of Lancashire, who made her international debut two months ago, comes in at No. 9.

RANKINGS LIST (previous placing in brackets).—Men: N. Yates (Kent) (1) and St. Baddeley (Sussex) (2), joint 1; S. Butler (Warwicks) (3), 3; D. Hall (Essex) (6), 4; D. Tailor (Middx) (7), 5; A. Goode (Bucks) (5), 6; C. Scott (Lancs) (10), 7; J. Ford (Hants) (—), 8; G. Milton (Essex) (8), 9; C. Dobson (Warwicks) (—) and G. Asquith (Essex) (9), joint 10.

Women: H. Troke (Hants) (1), 1; K. Beckman (Surrey) (2), 2; J. Sutton (Suffolk) (4), 3; G. Clark (Kent) (5), 4; F. Elliott (Surrey) (6), 5; C. Gowers (Sussex) (7), 6; A. Fisher (Essex) (9), 7; W. Massam (Warwicks) (3), 8; W. Poulton (Surrey) (—), 9; and S. Halsall (Lancs) (—), 10.

SHEENE RETIRES HAPPY

By GEORGE TURNBULL

BARRY SHEENE, who twice won the 500cc World Championship and became the country's most successful and popular rider, in a career spanning more than 15 years, announced yesterday that he is to retire from motorcycle racing.

Sheene, 34, who finished sixth in the World Championships last season on inferior machinery had been trying to put a team together for this year.

But at a Press conference yesterday Sheene said: "As far as bikes are concerned my retirement is irrevocable.

"I am retiring happy to leave the sport knowing I can still ride as well as in my championship years. But for various reasons I cannot obtain a full factory bike for next season.

Multiple fractures

"I could continue racing but it would be purely for the money and I have always said I would never do that."

Sheene, who took the major championships in 1976 and 1977, plans to extend his TV work and business interests but does not intend to run a racing team.

It was not only Sheene's success and millionaire lifestyle that made the Londoner a household name. His spectacular crashes and subsequent battles to regain fitness gained as much publicity.

In 1975 he crashed at 170mph at Daytona suffering multiple fractures and was back in racing in a matter of weeks. Then in 1982 he smashed into a machine lying on the track at 150mph while practising for the British Grand Prix at Silverstone.

He shattered both legs which were pieced together in an operation lasting more than seven hours. Few thought he would ride again but seven months later he was back in the saddle and on the Grand Prix circuit the following season.

Sheene, who lives in an 11th Century manor house at Charlwood, Surrey with his wife Stephanie, daughter and parents was awarded the MBE in 1978. He may race saloon cars and DAF trucks in Truck GPs.

MAIDENHEAD IN CLIFF-HANGER

By CHRIS MOORE

Maidenhead ... 1
Cambridge University ... 0

Ian Ashby, the Cambridge University captain who formerly played for Maidenhead, led a determined rearguard action against his old club yesterday only to see the points disappear with the only goal three minutes before the end of their Atoni London League game.

Ashby worked tirelessly in the Cambridge defence, aided by Bannock and some daring work by Offen in goal. For 67 minutes Cambridge soaked up almost constant pressure under the Bisham Abbey floodlights.

Then Adby, who had earlier missed the best chance of the game when he was left unmarked to blaze his shot wide from a short corner, made amends. This time his angled shot, parried by Offen, finally rolled under the goalkeeper's body and over the line.

Maidenhead deserved their victory, with Cambridge getting maximum marks for effort—but the real winner was the Bisham Clubturf pitch which, hastily cleared of snow, played superbly.

Dumfries, the track aristocrat

By COLIN DRYDEN

Dumfries, Earl of; John Colum Crichton-Stuart; b 26 April 1958; heir of 6th Marquess of Bute. qv. Address: Mount Stuart, Rothesay, Isle of Bute.

THE entry in Who's Who is laconic in the extreme and is interesting mainly in what it leaves out. A quick check shows he is heir to a multi-million pound fortune, 25,000 acres and a string of titles.

What it does not tell you is that Johnny Dumfries, the unassuming young aristocrat, is Britain's brightest motor racing hope for years.

Educated like his father at the Roman Catholic school, Ampleforth, he was always so determined to make his own way that he lives now in Fulham, South West London, has almost adopted the local accent and has worked as a painter and decorator.

But even for an heir keen to stand on his own feet, play down his title and avoid the gossip columns, being a house painter was not fulfilment enough for Johnny Dumfries.

However, for anyone wanting to hide his light under a bushel motor racing should not be the first choice, particularly if he is to be successful.

As plain Johnny Dumfries his interest in the sport was awakened through reading motoring magazines, and then lay dormant while he had a succession of jobs on leaving Ampleforth.

Fuse lit

His first real contact with motor racing came as a van driver and general dogsbody for the Williams team which won the Formula 1 Constructors Championship in 1980 and 1981.

Dumfries decided it was no good being on the fringe: he must compete himself and started in 1980 racing karts. He graduated the following year to Formula Ford, finishing fourth in his first race. The debut was unsensational but the fuse had been lit.

It was not until he reached Formula 3 that his latest talent really began to show, although he did have two wins in Formula Ford.

Dumfries started with an ex-B P Team Ralt and his performances brought him to the notice of Les Hacker, the B P motor sport manager. He crashed in almost more races than he finished and his best result in 12 races was fifth, but his potential was obvious —provided he stayed on the track.

The 1985 season was dominated by Ayrton Senna, of Brazil, and Martin Brundle, of Britain, but Dumfries shattered the Silverstone lap record in June while doing battle with both men, now established Formula 1 stars.

"He is obviously quick and he learns a circuit extremely well, putting in lap record times after only about four laps," says Mr Thacker.

Training ground

He also says that Dumfries is "intelligent, a good listener, absorbs advice and acts on it."

"Johnny is determined to become a top racing driver on his own talents and we respect his wishes and never allude to his title," Mr Thacker adds.

Formula 3 is the training ground for the assault on the heights of Grand Prix racing, with every man seeing himself as a future world champion. In his B P-backed David Price Racing Ralt, Dumfries dominated this highly competitive class of racing in 1984 to an extent not seen for years.

He not only took the British F3 title but learned unfamiliar Continental tracks so swiftly that he was moral victor of the disputed European F3 series, too.

"At this stage I rate him on a par with Nelson Piquet and Derek Warwick when they were B P drivers in 1978," says Mr Thacker.

Because of his spectacular success in F3, Johnny Dumfries earned Formula 1 test drives for both John Player Team Lotus and Brabham, acquiting himself extremely professionally.

The Brabham team still has a vacancy alongside former double world champion, Piquet, and these are anxious days for Dumfries as he waits to know whether his ambition to become a Grand Prix driver is to be realised in 1985.

Sadly, seats in Grand Prix cars are not always decided on merit alone and the politics of sponsorship and nationality play their part.

On merit, Dumfries deserves his chance alongside 1985's F3 stars, Brundle and Senna. "If there is a place for me with Brabham it will be a fantastic opportunity," he says.

If the Brabham drive does not materialise, Formula 3's brightest star in 1984 will doubtless shine equally brightly in the new Formula 3000 series starting this year in place of Formula 2. But the goal eventually is the World Championship.

Johnny Dumfries . . . heir to a fortune but intent on making his name as a Formula 1 driver.

Easter's scholarship in balance after ban

By PAT BESFORD

PAUL EASTER, the hero of Britain's team that took surprise Olympic bronze medals in the 4 x 200m freestyle relay, has been barred from representing the University of Arizona in the important College circuit which makes up the bulk of winter racing in the United States.

On the second leg in Los Angeles, Easter took the British squad from last to third—in a time bettered only by six others in the 32-man final. And Paul Howe and Andrew Astbury held on to the lead he had given them.

Now, if lawyers cannot sort out difficulties over Easter's eluigibility, the Anglo-Scot, 31, would also lose the Arizona scholarship which he took up in September 1983, and which was not due to run out until the summer of 1987.

The rules of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, which govern sports scholarships and competition, allow a maximum of four years' eligibility.

The NCAA has said that the time Easter spent at technical colleges in Norwich and Coventry, obtaining pre-university qualifications to study in the United States, must be counted.

British rule

In Britain, these studies would be considered an extension of school. College status would come afterwards.

Not so in the United States where the granting of sports scholarships is based on the ability to take part in college competitive programmes.

Hamilton Smith, director of Scottish swimming, said: "I have managed to get Paul a sponsership from the Skol brewery in Alloa so that he can swim in the Canadian championships next month and make up a little for his loss of racing in the States.

"We are also appealing to set up a trust fund so that he can keep swimming and obtain his degree at Arizona, if the legal attempts are unsuccessful."

COLSOUL LEAD IS EXTENDED

By A Special Correspondent

As competitors entered Niger and moved from clearly-marked tracks to compass bearing navigation, French rally veteran Bernard Darniche "came back" to take fastest time on the seventh timed "special" of the seventh Paris-Dakar Rally.

Darniche and co-driver Alain Mahe — who last Sunday were reported out of the rally stuck in Algerian sand — completed the Tamanrasset to Iferouane section with their Audi Quattro just 12 minutes ahead of the Porsche 959 of last year's rally winner, Rene Metge.

Despite the rugged terrain Belgium's Guy Colsoul not only held, but extended, his lead in the general classification. At Iferouane his two-wheel drive Opel Manta 400 had a 19 minutes lead over the V8 powered Land Rover of 1984 Le Mans winner Henri Pescarolo of France.

Another Le Mans victor—Jacky Ickx of Belgium, who has won the sports car classic six times—moved up the classification to fifth overall after taking tenth fastest on Tuesday's section with his Porsche.

Mass retires

The third of the Rothmans supported cars, however, was out of the rally. After rolling several times West German Jochen Mass was reported retired and heading back to Algiers.

Competitors reached Agadez yesterday and now complete a loop in Nigeria before heading into Mali. Overall classification at Iferouane:

G. Colsoul (Belgium, Opel Manta 400), 35min 26s; 2, H. Pescarolo (France, Land Rover) 10:51:30; 3, H. Raymondis (France, Range Rover) 11:09:13; 4, R. Frederoos (Finland, Toyota F16) 11:09:57; 41, J. Ickx (Belgium, Porsche 959) 11:26:52.

The day that Sobers changed stroke at Sandy Lane

By E. W. SWANTON

WHEN a sportsman thinks of Barbados, he thinks of cricket, which is natural considering that this Caribbean island only the size of the Isle of Wight has bred and nurtured more fine cricketers to the square mile than any place on earth.

That Bajan soil is fertile ground for games-players of all sorts from polo to bridge (at which the national champion happens to be none other than the great batsman Everton Weekes).

The sporting attractions, for residents and visitors alike, now include an attractive golf course, and it so happens I have been following the building and growth of Sandy Lane Golf Club from before the first sod was turned.

Just 25 years ago on the Sunday of the Barbados Test the England and West Indian teams, with attendant officials and scribes, boarded a schooner at Bridgetown and sailed up the west coast, dropping anchor in Sandy Lane Bay.

There was swimming and a picnic, washed down by rum punch, and Ted Dexter introduced us to the dashing new sport of water ski-ing. Such were the social delights of touring in the good old days.

Trade winds

"Better make the most of this," said John Goddard, "they're starting to build at any moment." And so they did. In the middle of this delectable bay there sprang up the coral facade of Sandy Lane Hotel, prime jewel among its tropical kind, and behind the hotel the golf course.

The course, and its surrounding housing estate, began to emerge as soon as the cane-fields over which it was built had yielded their 1960 crop.

The plantation manager's house made the natural clubhouse, and starting point, from which a dog-leg first hole to a narrow green leads one due north to a pleasant drive-and-pitch second, and a truly forbidding third, 610 yards of it from the back tee, narrow, straight and rather dull, reminiscent of the 15th at Woking, which they call Harley Street.

From the third green a truck lifts one gratefully to three testing holes on a higher level. The fifth, with its second shot over a ravine to a sloping, well-guarded green, is a worthy hole in any company.

The seventh is the scenic pride of Sandy Lane, a pitch from a pulpit tee to a green far below the blue Caribbean as the backdrop. The ninth, a double par five, brings one back to the clubhouse and a welcome limeade.

The low handicap golfer who breaks 40 on the lower nine holes has well earned a second drink before he tackles the top or Molyneux nine holes, transported thither by truck.

The Molyneux provides a superb sea-scape at every hole, and the trade wind, which is Barbados' biggest natural boon, is always gently tempering the heat.

In the early days of the Golf Club, I organised the first major golfing occasion, a match in which Gordon Cunningham, the Scot from Royal Wimbledon who was the first professional, played the better ball of Tom Gravency (handicap two) and the pride of Barbados, Gary Sobers.

That drew the crowd, and the sight of Sir Garfield (as he now is) swinging as powerfully into a golf stroke as he swung the bat at a cricket ball was sufficient inducement to his fellow countrymen to try and do likewise.

They can play, by the way, also at Rockley on the south coast, while there is good golfing country on the breezier Atlantic side awaiting a new developer.

Out of season

Sobers, let me add, hits the ball vast distances, but he is generally beaten by the steadiness of the Barbados champion, Robert Piggott, who last year over 36 holes won by three strokes from the English amateur champion Craig Lawrence.

At Sandy Lane at the end of the month, we are to see in a pro-am associated with Robert Sangster several of the leading British professionals, teamed up with stars from the world of racing. They will include Bernard Gallacher, Sam Torrance, Michael King, Norman Wood, the Barbados-born professional David Griffiths, and the American visiting pro, Jim Fitzgerald, from the Columbia Country Club, Chevy Chase.

The amateurs will include Steve Cauthen, Jeremy Hindley, John Magnier and Sangster himself.

Next month (between Feb. 19-22), your correspondent will be treading new ground, introducing Sandy Lane to the more relaxed enjoyment of a Seniors' Meeting. Nine holes a day only, Stapleford scoring, for the over 55s, and — most important — front tees.

Out of season in late April (when prices all round are lower), will be staged the open amateur tournament, which annually attracts golfers from other West Indian islands as well as visitors from G B and North America. The climate varies little in Barbados, except that August and September are inclined to be muggy and liable to storms.

FOREST FIGHT ON TO FORCE VICTORY

By MICHAEL CALVIN

Newcastle ... 1, Nottingham Forest ... 3
(After extra time)

NOTTINGHAM FOREST enhanced their reputation for resilience in their F A Cup third round replay at St James' Park last night when they countered Newcastle's early onslaught with such style that extra time should have been unnecessary.

The F A Cup is the one trophy which has eluded Brian Clough's managerial career, but Newcastle's deep-seated hunger for success proved initially more powerful.

It is no exaggeration to say that Newcastle could have been three goals ahead by the fifth minute, when Chris Waddle took advantage of Forest's bemused defence to score with a deflected low shot from 12 yards.

The subsequent celebrations were borne of relief because that scoring move stemmed from the corner conceded when Segers saved Beardsley's poor attempt from a penalty.

As Newcastle swept forward McInally had little option but to handle Wharton's shot after Beardsley had been put clear by a miscalculated back pass from Fairclough. The penalty miss emphasised how Forest's goal had led a charmed life.

Gunn had cleared a close-range header by Waddle off the line and Segers, the on-loan Dutch goalkeeper, had produced an extraordinary save from Clarke's ferocious volley.

Understandably Forest took time to compose themselves after falling behind — Heard should have made more of another rash back pass by Davidson—but gradually they showed their powers of resilience.

Davenport went close with a measured chip and, when Megson brought Hodge down in full flight in the 29th minute, he coolly exacted revenge with a textbook penalty that sent Carr the wrong way.

Indeed Forest ended a remarkable first half well on top and the hail of snowballs which greeted them after the interval was a bizarre compliment to their efficiency.

Jack Charlton, the Newcastle manager, from all accounts, accused his team of lack of professionalism during half-time, but Newcastle continued to betray their sudden loss of self-confidence.

Forest should have taken the lead in the 68th minute when Wigley's pace embarrassed Clarke before he found Christie unmarked at the far post. With the goal at his mercy Forest's Geordie striker shot hurriedly and Clarke was able to clear.

Forest had every reason to be confident as they gathered around Brian Clough on the touchline before the start of extra time. They were secure in the knowledge that, in recent games they had come from behind to defeat Manchester United, Ipswich and Aston Villa.

Bowyer put Forest ahead in the 107th minute with a 20-yard drive.

The Teams

Newcastle United:—Carr; Brown, Saunders, Heard, Anderson, Clarke, Megson, Wharton, Waddle, Beardsley, McDonald.

Nottingham Forest:—Segers; McInally, Darcdem, Gunn, Fairclough, Bowyer, Wigley, Metgod, Christie, Davenport, Hodge.

AGBOOLA FOR SUNDERLAND

By ROGER MALONE

REUBEN AGBOOLA, whose promising Southampton career turned sour after a nightclub incident ended with the London-born sweeper in hospital, is likely to be in Sunderland's side against Liverpool on Saturday.

Provided he passes today's medical, Agboola, 22, will sign for about £150,000 for a side beaten in their last five games, and sliding dangerously towards Division Two. Talks began after Saturday's 4-0 defeat at The Dell.

Having established himself strongly in a Southampton side which finished runners-up in last season's Championship, Agboola has been selected only occasionally since recovering from facial injuries.

With Ivan Golac, 34, Saints' veteran Yugoslav right-back, also leaving yesterday to join Portsmouth, on a month's loan initially — and with Steve Williams' recent £550,000 move to Arsenal — Saints have reduced their wage-bill and boosted their coffers.

Kerry Dixon's Chelsea's 23-goal leading scorer, has only a fifty-fifty chance of recovering from a knee injury in time to play at West Ham on Saturday.

Paul Price, the former Spurs and Wales centre-back returned from Minnesota Strikers who is now trying to find a new club, is to visit Swansea.

The Welsh club urgently need an infusion of experience and are considering starting Price on a month's non-contract basis.

LUTON SQUEEZE THROUGH

By DENIS LOWE

Stoke City ... 2, Luton Town ... 3

A CLOSE range second half goal by Mal Donaghy last night earned Luton a fourth round home date with Huddersfield or Wolves.

With a light covering of snow, the Victoria Ground pitch proved tricky. But Luton, held 1-1 at Kenilworth Road on Saturday, were in confident mood after taking a two-goal lead within 12 minutes.

Hill opened Luton's account in the ninth minute, deceiving Roberts with a right-foot shot from 25 yards after Harford had played the ball in from the left.

A misunderstanding between Roberts and Dyson brought Luton a rather fortunate second goal three minutes later. The Stoke players left it to each other when Hill pushed a pass down the middle and, when the goalkeeper eventually tried to hack the ball away, it rebounded off the challenging Harford and sailed into the empty net.

Notable chance

Roberts had to make a hurried headed clearance from Harford in Luton's next advance but Sealey then had to deal with several awkward crosses as McIlroy and Chamberlain tried to revive Stoke.

A notable chance came Stoke's way after 30 minutes but Bertschin, at full stretch, just failed to reach Chamberlain's pass in front of a gaping goal and Breacker, performing well in defence, stepped in to clear.

Stoke pulled back a goal with a debatable penalty with the second half only 26 seconds old. Referee Daryll Reeves, of Uxbridge, pointed to the spot when Parkin was brought down by Foster's tackle in the corner of the box and Painter drove the spot kick powerfully to Sealey's left.

Stein hit the woodwork and O'Callaghan made a last ditch clearance from Daniel before Donaghy, the Northern Ireland defender, restored Luton's two-goal lead in the 63rd minute.

Foster nodded down Hill's corner and, although Roberts blocked a shot by Stein, Donaghy pounced on the rebound at close range.

Five minutes later, this game of fluctuating fortunes, produced another Stoke goal. Chamberlain reacted more quickly than the Luton defence when Maskery put over a long centre, and the England winger struck a fierce shot past Sealey.

Stoke City:—Roberts; Bould, Maskery, Hudson, Dyson, O'Callaghan, Parkin, Mcilroy, Painter, Bertschin, Chamberlain.

Harrison, 17, stays put in £¼m deal

By DONALD SAUNDERS

LIVERPOOL have re-emphasised their intention to remain a force in English and European soccer, well into the foreseeable future, by paying £250,000 for a young striker of negligible experience, then loaning him back to the selling club.

The subject of this latest instance of the long-term planning that has become the hallmark of Liverpool's team building policy is Wayne Harrison, 17, who has played four senior games for Oldham since becoming a full-time professional three weeks ago.

Though Joe Fagan has not seen Harrison play, Bob Paisley, his predecessor as manager and now a director, and Geoff Twentyman, the chief scout were very impressed when they watched the lad.

"You get reports about a very special player perhaps once in 20 years," said Mr Fagan. "That is why we have signed him."

Aware that Manchester United, Nottingham Forest and Everton were also very interested, Liverpool clearly decided it would be unwise to wait, even though Harrison is not nearly ready for First Division football.

"With Oldham still in the F A Cup and not too well placed in the League, we decided Wayne could stay there until the end of the season," explained Mr Fagan. "This will give him first team experience — which could be better than playing in the reserves here — and will help him to mature."

The fee is the biggest paid for a player of Harrison's tender years. Though Steve Mackenzie cost Manchester City £25,000 more, when Malcolm Allison signed him from Crystal Palace in 1979, he was five months older.

"It is a deal that benefits all three parties," claimed Joe Royle, manager of Oldham, who are losing £1,500 a week.

"Liverpool get a player of exceptional talent, we get a financial uplift and Wayne joins a world famous club.

"When I took him on as an apprentice, last May, he was the best 16-year-old I had seen since Trevor Francis."

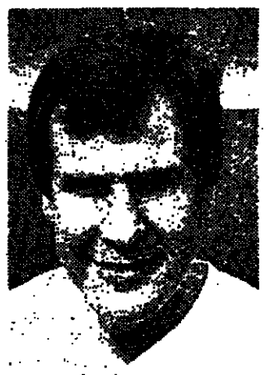
Thompson wanted

Meanwhile, Sheffield United are trying to extend their month's loan on Phil Thompson, the Liverpool and former England central defender, which is due to end on Saturday.

"I certainly want to sort something out," said Ian Porterfield, United's manager. "A lot depends of Phil's attitude. He has been 100 per cent. Sheffield United since he came."

Neighbouring Sheffield Wednesday have loaned Ian Hesford, their England Uner-21 goalkeeper, to Fulham for six weeks.

Hesford, 24, a member of the England side who won the UEFA Under-21 Championship in 1983, joined Wednesday from Blackpool at a fee of £150,000 last August, but has failed to displace Martin Hodge as first choice goalkeeper.



Joe Royle . . . happy with the deal.

REDFERN LEAVING

Peter Redfern the Wolves secretary is leaving at the end of the month. Secretary for the past two years, he has given 12 year's service to the club. He is to take up an administrative position with Marks and Spencer.

Thorne races through to tough semi-final

By JANICE HALE

WILLIE THORNE reached the semi-finals of a major professional tournament for the third time by beating former United Kingdom champion John Virgo 5-1 in the £200,000 Mercantile Credit Classic at the Spectrum Arena, Warrington, yesterday.

Thorne, 30, whose 12th place in the world rankings is partly attributable to his defeat of Virgo in the Embassy World Championship — a result which also aided Virgo's slip from the top 16 — was never under pressure and was consequently able to display his break-building skills to advantage.

After a cautious opening frame, the Leicester professional put together breaks of 44, 68, 34, 100, 42 and 38 in achieving his comprehensive victory.

With his wealth of natural ability, the root of Thorne's failure to win a major tournament lies in a temperament which makes winning very difficult.

His opponent in the semi-finals, world champion Steve Davis, has no such problem and is more than able to exploit any chink that may show in Thorne's mental armour.

Thorburn recovers

On their previous two meetings over the best of 17 frames, Davis allowed Thorne to win only two frames in the 1981 Coral U.K. Championship and only three in the same event two years later.

In the bottom half of the draw, Cliff Thorburn, the No. 3 seed, trailed Terry Griffiths 1-3 and 2-4 before taking three consecutive frames to win 5-4.

With both players having a similar, steady style, the first eight frames lasted three hours 33 minutes in playing time and it was midnight before the match had been decided.

Thorburn made the two highest breaks, 71 in the third frame and, crucially, a frame-winning 64 in the eighth. Griffiths' best effort was 49.

The final place in the semi-finals will be filled by either Australian Warren King, who eliminated Jimmy White 5-2 in the quarter-finals and Joe Johnson, who beat the No. 2 seed, Tony Knowles, 5-1 in the first round.

Otr-finals: C. Thorburn (Canada) bt T. Griffiths (Llanelli) 5-4. Frames (Thorburn first): 22-50, 36-70, 98-8, 44-69, 62-13, 71-43, 100-16, 13-79, 65-26. W. Thorne (Leicester) bt J. Virgo (Southend) 5-1. Frames (Thorne first): 79-33, 79-24, 79-38, 52-61, 134-0, 86-33.

ENGLAND'S RESHUFFLE

By Our Bowls Correspondent

SINCE 1967, when Ireland joined England, Scotland and Wales in the annual women's bowls international team championship, Scotland have taken home the Clare Johns Trophy 10 times.

England won in 1974/78/79/83 and Wales in 1977/80/81/84, the last slaughtering English belief that, at long last, a new era had arrived.

Fact clearly obliterated daydreams when the England selectors chose the team for the 1985 series in Glasgow (April 18-21).

Ten of last winter's 24 who finished in third place have been replaced by former team recalls plus four new caps: Wendy Line, Lorraine Hawes, Betty Stubbings and Rayna Campbell.

Campbell pedigree

Mrs Campbell, recent winner of the Tees-side Women's Masters Event, is the national indoor singles champion. The other three are former winners of the national outdoor singles title and Mrs Hawes has twice held the British Isles singles championship.

Even so, the change of players was less remarkable than the shuffling of positions, with only eight retaining both place and last winter's position in the team. They include skips Irene Molyneux, Norma Shaw and Chris Wessler.

LANGER READY TO TRIUMPH

By ALEX LANCASTER in Palm Springs

BERNHARD LANGER'S rise from a nine-year-old caddie at Anhausen in West Germany, to a world star has caught the imagination of America's West Coast golfing enthusiasts.

When Langer, 26, teed off just after 10 a.m. yesterday at Bermuda Dunes in the "star" field alongside Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Ray Floyd, he was making his Californian debut.

Californians love a winner. Last year in Los Angeles they gave a rapturous welcome to Severiano Ballesteros and there was genuine sympathy when the dashing Spaniard failed to qualify on his first appearance in that city.

Now Langer is here with an impressive record. He has won 16 titles in a career spanning 15 seasons, four national titles last season in France, Spain, Holland and Ireland as well as the second runner-up spot with Tom Watson behind Ballesteros in the Open at St Andrew's.

Successful 'raid'

Accompanied by his charming new Florida wife Vikki he made a highly successful "raid" on America last season, playing in eight tournaments and finishing third at Bay Hill, Orlando, and fifth in Hawaii.

He ended up a useful 75th with £60,000—a good show when one considers that he deliberately cut his American programme short in order to go for the No. 1 position in Europe.

HALL STARTS WITH A 68

By ADRIAN FREDERICK in Pretoria

Jeff Hall made his Sunshine Circuit debut and immediately put himself in line for the £7,000 first prize in the ICL International at the Zwartkop County Club, Pretoria yesterday.

The Bristol professional scored a four-under-par 68 to trail American Vic Hartman by two strokes after the opening round. Nick Price was on 67 with six players on 68 including Hall and Mark Johnson.

Hall, the winner of the 1983 Jersey Open, has for the last few years played on the Safari circuit and finished second in the Kenya Open in 1983.

Yesterday he started on the 10th tee and birdied three in a row from the 11th. A dropped shot at the 17th followed by another birdie saw him to the turn in 33 and he picked up another two birdies against a dropped shot on the way home.

Happy Bennett

Former Zimbawian Johnson, who played several tournaments in South Africa as an amateur but is on his first visit here as a professional, dropped only one shot—on the long seventh—and picked up five birdies.

Steve Bennett, delighted at the recent form of his favourite soccer club Grimsby Town, was also pleased with his putting in a back-to-form 69. "I holed two 40-footers and several other long ones," he said.

COOKE GOES ON STAND-BY

Alan Cooke, 18, of Chesterfield, the England No. 2, has been put on stand-by for the £7,300 Charles Church international table tennis championship at Wembley Conference Centre on Saturday

Mike Watts, the organiser, is worried that the severe weather conditions could affect the event.

There is concern about the availability of Desmond Douglas, England's top player, who is not due at Heathrow until Saturday morning because he is playing in the German Bundesliga tomorrow.

BRISTOW HAS FEW PROBLEMS

Eric Bristow defeated Alan Glazier in four straight sets to earn a place in the semi-finals of the Embassy World Professional Darts Championship in Stoke last night, and promised, "It's all over now. I've won it again for sure."

Bristow, 27, the defending champion who is chasing his fourth world title this week, was hardly stretched by Glazier, who had hammered 69 centuries including eight maximums in his last match, against Northern Ireland captain Steve Brennan.

"He could not hit even one maximum against me, could he?" said Bristow. "These lads can do it against each other but they can't do it against me and that's why I'm he best. Alan played his final in he last round.

"I had my score on Saturday. There won't be any more and nobody is going to stop me now."

Lawn Tennis

Jarryd through to face McEnroe

By JOHN PARSONS in New York

THE case for reviving the original Grand Prix Masters lawn tennis policy of staging the event on different surfaces in different countries each year was strongly reinforced by the opening matches in New York.

Those who collect most of their qualifying points on clay, which in many countries is still the principal surface, seldom perform well on the fast carpet court laid down each year now in Madison Square Garden.

So it was again this time as Henrik Sundstrom and Aaron Krickstein, both most comfortable still on clay, were beaten in their opening matches without offering more than a glimpse of the ability which has carried them into the world's top dozen.

Even allowing for the pulled back muscle, a legacy from the Young Masters in Birmingham, which inhibited Sundstrom, especially when he was serving, the odds always seemed to be in favour of his fellow tax exile in London, Anders Jarryd.

Sundstrom fades

Jarryd won 6-4, 6-1, and it might have been even easier but for the fact that he took time to eradicate problems with his close-to-the-net volleys. Once the breakthrough was achieved in the ninth game when he pounded a winning service return off a weak second serve, Sundstrom's resistance swiftly faded.

The reward for the winner is a challenge to John McEnroe tonight. Sundstrom had been hoping for the opportunity to prove that his Davis Cup triumph over the world No. 1, on clay, was more than an emotionally-inspired upset.

Jarryd, on the other hand, beat McEnroe in Canada in 1983, and, leading 5-3 in a second-set tie-break in Stockholm in November, was two points away from beating him again in their last meeting, which was also the setting for what even by McEnroe's standards, was a spectacular outburst.

There was a delay of more than 10 minute, during which McEnroe incurred a game penalty, and picked up fines leading to the suspension which ruled him out of Wembley and the Australian Open. This was all because he had dropped his serve on what he thought were faulty calls, when 4-2 ahead in the second set.

At the time, the outraged Jarryd was livid over what he clearly saw as blatant gamesmanship. But he shrugged such memories aside in New York and merely said: "McEnroe's a superb player on this surface. It'll be a very tough match for me."

No doubt Jarryd's mellowness of mood was due partly to the fact that by defeating Sundstrom, he had reminded the Swedish selectors that for any matches not on clay, he merits the No. 2 Davis Cup singles place he was so upset not to have in Gothenburg.

In the second match Johan Kriek, who now meets the Swedish No. 1, Mats Wilander today, had too much power, despite bouts of wildness, for Krickstein, 17, the youngest ever to qualify for the Volvo Masters. Kriek won 7-5, 6-3.

Twice Krickstein had chances to extend the match—when he broke back to 5-4 in the first set, and when, helped by two double faults, he led 2-0 in the second. But on each occasion Kriek stepped up the pace by attacking the serve and immediately breaking back.

It was a disappointingly low-key, almost tedious start to what is supposed to be the climax of the Grand Prix year.

1ST RD.—A. Jarryd (Sweden) bt H. Sundstrom (Sweden) 6-4, 6-1. J. C. Kriek bt A. Krickstein 7-5, 6-3.

BBC-1

6.30 a.m.-9 Breakfast Time, with Frank Bough and Selina Scott. 10.30-10.50 Play School, rpt. 12.30 News, Weather. 12.57 Regional News (London and South East only: Financial Report and News). 1 Pebble Mill at One: In the Falklands with Bob Langley. 1.45 Bagpuss, rpt. 2-2.40 The Afternoon Show, looking at Smoking, The Muscle Cult and Ken Bruce. 3.48 (not London) Regional News. 3.50 Play School. 4.10 The Family-Ness. 4.15 Farmer Giles of Ham, part four, read by Freddie Jones. 4.30 Dogtanian and the Three Muskehounds, cartoon serial. 4.55 John Craven's Newsround. 5 Blue Peter: Sunken Treasure! (Ceefax subtitles.) 5.30 Dr Kildare, rpt. 5.58 Weather.

6 00 NEWS.

6 30 REGIONAL MAGAZINES.

6 55 TOMORROW'S WORLD—including a breakthrough in electric cars.

7 20 TOP OF THE POPS — Introduced by Mike Read and Mike Smith.

8 00 THE FRONT LINE — Sheldon intends to change his name to that of a Zulu chief, while Malcolm has an awkward visit from a social worker.

8 30 A QUESTION OF SPORT — The start of a new series, again with David Coleman and team captains Bill Beaumont and Emlyn Hughes, at a more convenient, later time. (Ceefax sub-titles).

9 00 NEWS.

9 25 ★CHARTERS AND CALDICOT — Petunia Day. Opening episode in a promising new comedy-thriller with two Whitehall warrior characters we first saw played by Naunton Wayne and Basil Radford in the 1938 film "The Lady Vanishes", now retired from work for HMG, not quite MI5, not quite not, and transformed into Robin Bailey and Michael Aldridge, old school pals, terribly pedantic, mad about cricket. Gently amusing, distantly related to P. G. Wodehouse, the plot developing nicely, but possibly the two are slightly too opaque, too obtuse, stretching comic licence into exaggerated caricature. Written by Keith Waterhouse who provides the traditional opening, a body in the library. (Ceefax sub-titles.)

10 15 QUESTION TIME—Sir Robin Day with Ann Burdus, Denzil Davies, Roy Jenkins and Malcolm Rifkind.

11 15 NIGHT COURT — All You Need Is Love. The start of a new American comedy series with Harry Anderson (the con-man in "Cheers") as New York's youngest, least orthodox, judge. 11.40 Weather.

BBC-2

5.25 p.m. News, Weather. 5.30 Darts: World Professional Championship, first of three visits today, this one highlights from last night.

6 00 MONKEY — What Monkey Calls the Dog Woman. English version of Oriental legend. Repeat.

6 45 "FUNNY LADY" (1975) — Babra Streisand continuing as Broadway star Fanny Brice seven years after "Funny Girl" in a sequel which was apparently more fiction than fact. She marries showman Billy Rose (James Caan). Several songs and musical numbers, but generally placed further down the scale than the earlier film, disjointed, erratic and indifferently scripted. Also starring Omar Sharif.

9 00 DARTS—World Professional Championship.

9 30 FORTY MINUTES — The Promised Land. This could have been sub-titled Forty Years, for it compares the united, confident nation of 1945, on the brink of victory and a new life which would banish all ills, with the present time, "all hope and idealism evaporated". What happened to the promised renaissance? Where's the new dawn? Made in black and white.

10 40 NEWSNIGHT.

11 25-12.15 DARTS — More of the World Professional Championship.

ITV Thames

6.15 a.m. Good Morning Britain. 9.25 Thames News Headlines, followed by Sesame Street. 10.25 Thomas the Tank Engine and Friends. 10.35 Let's Pretend: Mr Woof the Guard Dog. 10.50 Inspector Gadget: Race to Finish. 11.10 Do It Herself: car maintenance, rpt. 11.35 He-man and Masters of the Universe: The Search. Animated adventure. 11.55 Rub a Dub Dub: Baa Baa Black Sheep. 12 The Little Green Man. 12.10 Mooncat and Co: Names, rpt. 12.30 The Sullivans. 1 News. 1.20 Thames News. 1.30 Falcon Crest: Love Triumphs. 2.30 Daytime. 3 Gems: episode five of the serial. 3.25 Thames News Headlines. 3.30 Sons and Daughters. 4 The Little Green Man, rpt. 4.15 The Moomins. 4.20 Sooty: Keeping a Secret. 4.40 Words, Words, Words. 5 Dangermouse: Play It Again, Wufgang. 5.15 Blockbusters.

5 45 NEWS.

6 00 THAMES NEWS — With Andrew Gardner and Tina Jenkins.

6 30 THAMES SPORT—Presented by Steve Rider.

7 00 KNIGHT RIDER — Knight In Disgrace. Heroin is found on Knight and he is suspended. Then he trusts the wrong man.

8 00 DUTY FREE — Viva Espana. Starting a repeat of this Yorkshire TV comedy series which has only just ended.

8 30 HOTEL — Transitions. No other dramatic details supplied as Thursday evening gets back to its pre-holiday sub-standard.

9 30 TV EYE—What Price Trident?

10 00 NEWS AT TEN; followed by Thames News Headlines.

10 30 SNOOKER — Ending the first semi-final in the Warrington tournament, previouslyl given two hours today on Channel Four.

12.15 NIGHT THOUGHTS — With Jan Pickard.

Channel 4

2.30 p.m. Snooker: the first semi-final from Warrington. 4.30 Countdown. 5 "Sentimental Journey" (1946, b/w): the title has it right, one of those all-out weepies which were so popular in Hollywood in the late 1940s and 1950s. Maureen O'Hara as an actress who is told she is dying, so she adopts an orphan girl to keep her husband company after she's gone; directed, surprisingly, by Walter Lang. Not so much a handkerchief film as one for the bath towel. John Payne as the husband, plus William Bendix, Cedric Hardwicke and Mischa Auer. Variety said it could lead to the invention of the five-cornered handkerchief.

6 45 SATELLITES OF THE SUN — An animated look at the solar system. Repeat.

7 00 CHANNEL FOUR NEWS — At 7.50 Comment and Weather.

8 00 DISCOVERY — David Bellamy and Miranda Robertson, in their new series, now discover a Scottish team who have been "doing logic" with light beams, a development that could start a new age in computing.

8 30 TREASURE HUNT — South Wales. The helicopter circles around while a brother and sister try to sort out the clues.

9 30 THE PRICE — The start of a new six-part psychological thriller, set in Ireland and England at the present time. Terrorists kidnap a millionaire's wife and daughter and demand a ransom. But the decision he faces may not be straightforward, since she is his second wife, very much younger, relations may not have been all happy, and the daughter is from his first marriage. With Peter Barkworth and Harriet Walter as the married couple and Derek Thompson as the terrorist planning the snatch.

10 30 ON FINDING A SYMPHONY—And the big question is, whose symphony? Last month, in Odense, Denmark, it was given its first performance in the town where it was found three years ago by an archivist, with two other hand-written symphonies, all believed to be by the very young Mozart. This one, given its TV première here, is in a rare key for a Mozart symphony, A minor.

11 30-12 HALL OF MIRRORS—Professor James Mackey in the first of a new ten-part series "exploring the baffling images of human faith". Professor Mackey, an Irish-born Roman Catholic, is joined here by Professor Leszek Kolakowski.

★★ Outstanding. ★ Recommended.

TORIES WANT LEVY HOLIDAY FOR FIRMS

By JAMES WIGHTMAN Political Correspondent

MR LAWSON, Chancellor of the Exchequer, is being urged by many Conservative MPs to ease employers' National Insurance contributions as a means of reducing unemployment.

The Tory MPs are doing so as part of the annual pre-Budget lobbying, which has assumed extra strength this year because of heightened concern in the Conservative ranks about the jobless figures.

Among the suggestions to the Chancellor is one for a year's "holiday" from paying National Insurance contributions for any employers taking on new workers in the fiscal year 1985-86.

One involved MP claimed last night that Mr Lawson had given the idea a sympathetic hearing, although he had not committed himself.

The MPs concentrating on the National Insurance aspect fear that some of their Tory colleagues are making no progress with their atempts to deflect the Chancellor, backed by the Prime Minister, from his aim of raising tax thresholds by some £1·5 billion in the Budget on March 19.

They want the money to be spent on capital projects specifically designed to create jobs.

Significant Budget

New concern about the unemployed situation was evident among Conservative MPs yesterday as the Commons resumed after the Christmas Recess. Mr Lawson's second Budget is already seen as one of the most important since the Conservatives returned to office in 1979.

One Conservative MP, Mr Densmore Dover, Chorley, has written to the Chancellor asking him to consider "the catastrophic effect that the imposition of 15 per cent. VAT has had on the hot take-away food industry."

He said that, according to trade figures, there had been a loss of 7,000 full-time jobs and 30,000 part-time pobs, adding: "the consequences on a once-buoyant industry have been disastrous."

Mr Dover called for VAT on the hot take-away food industry to be applied at the lower rate "to relieve both the industry and the public of this appalling burden."

He also said: "When considering whether or not to impose VAT on other items such as books, newspapers and children's shoes, I trust you will take into acount the very harmful effects of a sudden imposition of VAT at 15 per cent on a previously thriving industry."

Steel letter

With Government Whips taking post-recess soundings yesterday among Tory MPs about the dangers of further rebellions on economic and other policies this year, some "verbal support" was claimed for Mr Steel, Liberal Leader, after writing to more than 70 Conservative Back-benhers who have expressed conern about the level of unemployment.

He urged them to use the public and Parliamentary majority to influence the Chancellor's Budget in favour of public investment.

Although Mr Steel would not disclose the names of the MPs yesterday, they include such familiar critics of Government policies as Mr Heath, Mr Pym, Sir Ian Gilmour and Mr Rippon.

Commons Sketch

MPs return reluctantly from holiday

By GODFREY BARKER

THE lower orders flowed unwillingly back to Westminster yesterday for what several regard as the earliest start to the Spring Term this century. They are not happy about it.

Mrs Thatcher explained charmingly over Christmas that we were returning on Jan. 9 rather than Jan. 16 because "MPs do not work hard enough."

No one dare assume this is a joke. Most likely, the PM sees enough legislative hoo-ha ahead as to need every spare minute on the timetable she can get.

So MPs flooded in. Mr Norman Lamont, Industry Minister, was the name in lights. He throbbed with excitement on the Shipbuilding (Redundancy) Bill to entrance two Tories and three Labour members.

It could not all, however, be so exhilarating. Mr Patrick Jenkin was on first for Environment questions.

Sunning themselves

This, for sceptics, was the reason we came back on Jan. 9, a day when at least half Mr Jenkin's worst enemies could be counted on to be still sunning themselves defiantly in Fiji, Penang or Rio de Janeiro.

But one doubts it. The Prime Minister is actually quite pleased when Ministers are fighting into the teeth of the gale. She may well believe Mr Jenkin needs more of this.

The Environment Secretary, however, had an easy day. The Order Paper was dominated helpfully by questions with little to do with rates or the GLC. Moreover, it was dominated by questions from Labour. Tories are more volatile with Mr Jenkin these days.

Some of the Labour questions, though, were on subjects on which they knew they could work up worried Tories.

So there was a catch-all effort from Mr Willie Hamilton on the need for spending on the "infrastructure" — this year's code phrase for roads, water, sewage and housing, which many Tories want to see the giveaway Lawson billions devoted to.

Fireproof Minister

This question was answered, however, not by Mr Jenkin but by fireproof Housing Minister Mr Ian Gow.

Mr Gow, unlike Mr Jenkin, does not apologise. To Labour questioners, he rammed back violently some quotations from Messrs Callaghan and Healey, vintage 1976/79, on the futility of trying to spend your way out of a recession.

To Tories, he replied more politely with figures proving that spending on roads, water etc. would rise by 10 per cent. soon.

Mr Gow did not pretend, however, that this would do any thing for jobs. Why should he?

After Mr Jeff Rooker emitted a plaintive cry for more public investment, Mr Gow turned on him sternly. "We are not going to revert to the policies of the party opposite of borrowing where they dared not tax and printing what they could not borrow," he harangued him.

Pit strike peace plan

By JOHN RICHARDS

also be putting forward a proposal that the union's negotiating team should be enlarged to include other members of the executive.

At present the team consists of Mr Arthur Scargill, president Mr Mick McGahey, vice-president and Mr Peter Heathfield, general secretary.

Another proposal which may be tabled at today's executive meeting would change coalfield representation in the NUM leadership so in a way which would give the Left an 11-7 majority instead of the present 12-12 split.

The proposed re-shuffle of seats, which would be subject to endorsement at a delegate conference, would eliminate separate representation from seven areas — North Wales, Cumberland, Leicestershire, South Derbyshire, Durham Mechanics, the Midlands power group, and Scottish craftsmen.

The 24-strong eecutive would be reduced to 18 members on a basis that coalfields with fewer xthan 20,000 members would get one seat; those with between 20,00 and 40,000 would get two seats an dthose with 40,000 or above, three seats.

Meanwhile, Nottinghamshire working miners fear that the NUM leaders could be called upon to convene a special conference of coalfield delegates to expel the Nottinghamhsire area from membership of the national union, from Feb. 1.

Alternatively, they say, the executive may recommend to delegates that teh area—which changed its rules to establish independence from the national union in December—could be suspended for six months from Feb. 1 to give it time "to reconsider its position."

If expulsion is aproved, the NUM is apparently prepared to set up a new North and South Nottinghamshire Area and urge all miners to join the "official" union.

The Nottinghamshire Area, which continued working virtually all through the ten-month dispute, decided on Dec. 20 to drop from its rules a provision that it would abide by national decisions o fthe NUM.

The Coal Board said miners are now working at 150 of the 179 pits, and 71 colleries were producing coal with only 24 totally strike-bound.

BOTTLES THROWN

Pickets dispersed

Bricks and botles were hurled and pickets charged police vehicles before they were dispersed at Herrington Colliery, near Sunderland.

About 250 pickets gathered outside the put where a third of the workforce, including the miners' lodge chairman, Mr Joe Stokoe, have abandoned the coal strike.

One picket was arrested and later appeared at Houghton-le-Springs Magistrates' Court.

CABINET REVIEW

Minister confident

JAMES WIGHTMAN, Political Correspondent, writes: The Cabinet will have a post-Christmas review of the coal dispute today with ministers confident that the strike is "eroding gradually" as one source put it last night.

That assessment and a continued high level of coal stocks reinforced the view of the Prime Minister and colleagues that the country could survive the winter without power cuts.

Ministers will receive reports today from Mr Walker, Energy Secretary, Mr Brittan, Home Secretary, and Mr Ridley, Transport Secretary.

But Left-wing Labour MPs with mining constituencies claimed that the government was covering up disappointment over the number of miners still on strike.

Mr Wedgwood Benn, MP for Chesterfield, said: "The return to work which the Government anticipated has not occurred. There is a trickle going back but there are a number who are rejoining the strike.

The Government did not want peace talks because it wrongly beleived there would be a revolt and that Mr Scargill and the miners' executive would be overturned. "This is not so," said Mr Benn.

CALLAGHAN 'FINE'

Mr James Callaghan, 72, the former Labour Prime Minister, was fine "and doing very well indeed" after an operation to remove his gall bladder, a spokesman for St Thomas's hospital said yesterday.

GENEVA BRIEF FOR THATCHER

By JOHN BULLOCH
Diplomatic Staff

MR ROBERT MCFARLANE, President Reagan's National Security Adviser spoke yesterday of the new emphasis in arms control talks likely to follow the Geneva agreement.

Mr McFarlane was in London to brief Mrs Thatcher on the outcome of the Shultz-Gromyko meeting. He said the Prime Minister warmly welcomed the outcome, and spoke of the need for "patience, flexibility and determination" in the coming negotiations.

Asked why there should be optimism now when nine previous disarmament initiatives had produced little, Mr McFarlane said that in the past there had been a tendency to use arms control agreement to "legitimise" the growth of armaments.

The prospect of real reductions in the number of weapons would be an incentive to the Soviet Union to negotiate. "The Soviet Foreign Minister spoke of radical reductions, and we take him at his word."

Mr McFarlane said that the independent British nuclear deterrent had not figured in the Geneva talks. The American position was to exclude the British deterrent from discussions.

Questioned about the American plan for "space war" anti-missile satellites, Mr McFarlane emphasised that the United States had no intention of deploying such weapons unilaterally. It would be five or 10 years before the research necessary enabled a decision to be taken on whether the idea was practicable.

MORE SS-20s

U.S. warning

ALAN OSBORN in Brussels writes: Briefing the Nato allies yesterday, Mr Richard Burt, US Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs, said the Geneva talks had gone well, but he added that Russia in the past month has deployed nine new SS-20 missiles and was vigorously constructing new bases.

Nato envoys were told that President Reagan had sent a personal detailed letter to all Heads of Government of the allied countries spelling out the American position on arms control.

This leter was said to express optimism about the outcome of the talks but at the same time it was said that Mr Reagan "did not want to build up undue expectations. We have to recognise that this negotiating process is going to be long and most likely a difficult one."

has promised legislation to outlaw agencies of this sort.

When wardship cases are held in public the parties are usually not identified. Cases are identified in the law reports by initials, for example: In Re A (a minor).

Judges' discretion

The Administration of Justice Act, 1960, makes publication of information about wardship or adoption proceedings a possible contempt of court.

A legal expert said yesterday: "The prima facie rule is that names should not be given unless the judge makes a direction authorising publication."

The reporting ban has been lifted in cases where a judge thinks publicity is necessary, for example when a ward of court has been snatched in a "tug-of-love" case and there is a danger of the child being taken out of the country.

In the case of Mrs Cotton's baby the name of the child's natural mother was already well known before the case went to the High Court, but the ban on identification of the father prevents disclosure of the baby's future name.

Mr Justice Latey's order warning was seen yesterday to have been made to prevent the child being publicly labelled as a surrogate baby.

DALYELL TO AID MURDER INQUIRY

By Our Crime Staff

Mr Tam Dalyell, Labour MP for Linlithgow, is to be interviewed next week by detectives investigating the murder near Shrewsbury 10 months ago of nuclear disarmament campaigner, Mrs Hilda Murrell, 78.

He has alleged that Mrs Murrell may have been the victim of British Intelligence officers investigating links with her nephew, a Royal Navy Commander at the time of the sinking of the Argentine cruiser General Belgrano.

LITTLEWOODS JOB FEARS

Representatives of Usdaw, the shop workers' union, claimed yesterday that Littlewoods are planning to shed 1,000 jobs in their 108 stores throughout the country.

Details were disclosed at a meeting in Manchester with the union. Apart from confirming that some restructuring is planned, the company will make no further announcement before meeting the union again in a fortnight.
